Census shows slight growth

■ Hispanic population grew to more than 70%, while White residents declined by nearly 11,000.

By Christian Brown,
Staff Writer

DOWNEY – According to 2010 Census data released earlier this month, Downey experienced a slight increase in population since 2000 with more than 70 percent of residents now describing themselves as either Latino or Hispanic.

In 1990, Latino residents made up just 32.3 percent of Downey's population. By 2000, the Latino population had increased well over 57 percent, becoming the city's fastest growing demographic. With a current population of 111,772, 2010 Census data reports that 78,996 (70.7 percent) of those residents are either Latino or Hispanic.

In comparison, Downey's number of White residents continues to decline and now represents 17.7 percent of the overall population, a loss of nearly 11,000 residents since 2000. Despite the fluctuation in the city's White and Latino populations, the remaining ethnic groups saw little change over the last ten years.

The Census data states that 6.7 percent of the city is Asian, 3.4 percent Black or African-American, 0.2 percent American Indian or Alaska Native, 0.2 percent Native Hawaiian or other Pacific Islander, 0.2 percent classified themselves as "Other," and 1 percent said they identified with two or more races.

Although the Census depicted modest city growth since 2000, the figures did not match city estimates, which anticipated Downey's population to exceed 115,000 people by 2010.

Mayor Luis Marquez believes several factors may have contributed to the lower Census numbers.

"We may have been undercounted," Marquez said cautiously. "But we may have also reached our level of capacity...115,000 was based upon growth patterns of the past, but when you look at state growth, it's not where it was in the past. We grew, but we might be leveling off."

Marquez acknowledged the shift in demographics, but maintains that the city will continue to move forward even though faces may have changed.

"Our population has grown and the demographics have changed a little, but things will stay the same. We will continue to make this city a quality city ," he said. "Downey is a great city, a well-rounded community and the Census numbers are a reflection of the overall population in Southern California and Los Angeles County.

"But regardless of the numbers, we will be a quality city − safe neighborhoods, good schools, public safety, quality of life − we'll continue to make it the best place to live."

More than $25K collected for Red Cross relief efforts

By Mark Sauter,
City of Downey

DOWNEY – The Downey Police Department, in conjunction with the Fire Department and a number of city volunteer groups, hosted a 'fill-the-bucket' fundraiser for the American Red Cross last Saturday at Stonewood Center.

The thousands of donations over the course of the 6 ½ hour event amounted to $25,408.13. From checks and hundred dollar bills to spare change, every donation was important.

The proceeds of the event were directed to the Red Cross relief efforts in Japan.

Volunteers from the Police and Fire Explorer posts, Downey Community Emergency Response Team (CERT), the Emergency Preparedness Committee, the Warren High School Red Cross Club and the Rio Hondo Chapter of the Red Cross teamed up to make the event a success. Downey City Council members also supported the event and participated in the activities.

Over 3,500, specialized, emergency preparedness brochures (in English and Spanish) were provided to all Stonewood visitors, whether a donation was made or not.

Five local restaurants supported the volunteers with the generous donation of a free lunch and snacks. The food helped to keep the volunteers energy up throughout the long day of fundraising. Marisa's Mexican Restaurant, the Olive Garden, BJs Brewery, Acapulco Restaurant and Pieloon all contributed to the success of the event.

Experts are predicting a major earthquake will occur in Southern California sometime in the next several years, and now is the time for all members of the Downey community to firm up their emergency plans, to assemble emergency kits and supplies and to improve their awareness of the hazards of living in earthquake country. Experts predict a major earthquake will likely result in the loss of utilities and food supplies for much of the Southern California area. All transit routes are also expected to be heavily impacted by a severe earthquake.

Everyone should have enough emergency supplies (water, food, communications, tools, first aid materials and shelter) to last seven days and a plan to live through the immediate aftermath of a disastrous earthquake.

Arc Walk Saturday at Stonewood

It takes a village to teach respect

By Eric Pierce,
City Editor

DOWNEY – It's difficult not to fall in love with Arc of Southeast Los Angeles and the population it serves.

For nearly 60 years, Arc has been attending to the educational, vocational and cultural needs of people with intellectual disabilities. The consumers, as they're called at Arc, learn valuable skills they would not otherwise learn elsewhere.

Perhaps more important, however, is the value of self-worth instilled in consumers. Arc does it by treating consumers with respect and dignity, speaking to them as adults, not children.

Kevin MacDonald, executive director at Arc, credits the Downey community for creating a culture that goes beyond mere acceptance of people with disabilities. The Downey community has taken a step further and appears to value people who deal all too often with stares and degradation.

"You can see that consumers in this city walk with a little bounce to their step," MacDonald said during a recent tour of Arc's facilities on Woodruff Avenue. "They know they're respected here in Downey."

The Arc Walk for Independence on Saturday morning is a celebration of that respect. It's a fundraiser, sure, but more importantly it's a chance to reaffirm to Arc consumers their value and importance to the local community.

These are just some of the reasons why I will walk Saturday:

I walk because Arc consumers make excellent employees, sometimes the best employees.

I walk because the unemployment rate for people with intellectual

Why do I walk?

By Kevin MacDonald,
Executive Director, The Arc

DOWNEY – I walk because I believe every individual should be treated with dignity and respect.

I walk because people with disabilities have traveled a road that I cannot relate to, but yet I appreciate what they have overcome.

I walk because for one morning a year, I can share time with my friends, family and people with disabilities and for this brief moment - they are the stars of the day.

I may be one in several thousand, but I want to show others that I care and more importantly to remind myself that we all have special gifts and talents regardless of our circumstances.

I walk for the thousands who spent most of their lives in large institutions, but who can now thrive in a warm and accepting community.

I walk to support that person who receives training, love and care on a daily basis at The Arc.

I walk for the person who will get their first real job at the age of 40 through The Arc's Employment Center.

I walk for the family in crisis who will receive help from The Arc's Center for Human Rights.

I walk for the senior, who can retire and enjoy the later stages of life in The Arc's Senior Services.

I walk for people with severe disabilities who celebrate even the smallest successes.

I walk for people with disabilities who have been the focus of ridicule, staring eyes, jokes and who never received that warm smile and hello that I receive.

I walk not out of pity, but because I believe that everyone is worthy of dignity and respect.

I will focus this morning on the abilities of all mankind and not on their disabilities.

Surgery center earns IMQ accreditation

DOWNEY – Barely more than a year old, the Physician Surgery Center of Downey has received accreditation from the Institute for Medical Quality (IMQ).

The IMQ was established in 1996 by the California Medical Association to improve the quality of patient care.

The IMQ rates surgery centers in numerous categories, including personnel, quality management, medical records, care and treatment, facility and environmental safety, surgeries, anesthesia and invasive diagnostic procedures.

"We are honored to receive this endorsement by the IMQ and are proud to be recognized for our commitment to offering the highest level of medical care to our patients," said Dr. Brian Brown, an ophthalmologist and board member with Physician Surgery Center of Downey. "We feel it is through our extensive knowledge and personal standards of care that allow us to maintain a facility of this caliber right here in Downey."

The Physician Surgery Center of Downey opened in August 2009 and is owned and operated by a local group of board certified physicians and theirs staff members.

Housing complex downtown prepares for groundbreaking

■ Demolition of Verizon building expected within 3-5 months, paving the way for construction.

By Henry Veneracion, Staff Writer

DOWNEY – Bidding for the demolition of the old Verizon Building on Second Street to make way for the construction of the six-story 50-unit affordable housing complex referred to as 'The View' will commence after bid documents are finalized and distributed to interested contractors.

Demolition is scheduled to start within three to five months, say city officials, after all the necessary paperwork (specifications, proposals review, etc.) and documentation is done, and once the winning bid is sanctioned by the City Council. Then actual construction of The View will begin, either by the end of this year or the beginning of 2012.

The View is the working name for the downtown project which was awarded to the nonprofit National Community Renaissance, otherwise known as National Core.

The $20 million housing complex will boast 35 two-bedroom units (measuring some 800-850 sq. ft.) and 15 1,000-sq. ft. three-bedroom units.

It will feature, among other amenities, a 1,500-sq. ft. community room for residents, a second-level courtyard, and rooftop garden, as well as the all-important self-contained parking. Each unit will also have a private patio.

Funding for the project comes from federal, county, city and private sources. National Core's share is $2 million, Downey's $3 million ("not from general funds"), the county's $2.5 million, and $10 million from federal tax credits; the balance of $2.5 million is administrative costs.

A previous estimate by National Core and city sources says a 2-bedroom unit at The View would rent for about $1,000. The prevailing market rate for such a unit normally runs about $1,400.

The pricing structure is aimed at attracting individuals and/or households with incomes in the $40,000-$60,000 range.

Councilman Mario Guerra, who along with Mayor Pro Tem Roger Brossmer constitutes the subcommittee that has husbanded the project, says it will be "the finest building in downtown Downey" but still is only one component in a series of planned revitalizations of the downtown area in an overarching context of an improved, more aesthetically-pleasing, more culturally alive, more vibrant downtown.

To give credit where credit is due, other major players who have made their imprint on the much-ballyhooed project include assistant city manager Gilbert Livas and economic development director Brian Saeki.

The project is not without its detractors. Criticisms, even outright vituperations, have greeted the coming of The View. Language ranges from the pointed "A six-story apartment building with other people's money to enrich the developers" to the accusatory "Low income housing is not the way to revive downtown. Everybody is against this plan except for the mayor and his friends at National Core" to the outrageous, even hilarious (complete with bad spelling, bad grammar, and an even 'badder' attitude, "Downey is just another city that is over rated, filled with SNOBBY people who have overpriced homes to "keep" the trash out. But eventually whats going to end up happening is everyone from compton and surrounding areas will move in and it will be just another sad, dirty city in ca. I hope they build 40 more of these apartments to run out all of the people who THINK THEY ARE BETTER than everyone. IF YOU THINK you are that high class why dont you move to bel air, or beverly hills? Probably because if you ever moved there YOU would be the NEW trash lowering their citys value."

A rendering of The View, a 50-unit affordable housing complex to be located downtown.

People with incomes of $40,000 to $60,000 are not exactly low-income people, says Guerra.

"More likely, young professionals, nurses, teachers, these are the people that would want to occupy The View's units, especially when all the other complementary elements—small open spaces as well as public gathering spaces, walking venues, cultural events, etc., etc.—are taken into account." Besides, he adds, "There seems to be a misunderstanding of the word, 'affordable'. Affordable is not Section 8 (low income). So, contrary to the fears of some people, The View should not attract what we can classify as 'low-lifes'."

Anyway, Guerra was livid after critic Lawrence Christon, in a recent front page article in the Patriot, pointed to "Downey's essential dullness, the dry rot in its commercialized soul," and his reference to Downey's "decades of cultural inertia."

"Not so," fumed Guerra. "If he read the Downtown Specific Plan that took two-and-a-half years to put together, with much public input and the commendable efforts of our fine city staff, professionally presented and subsequently approved by the city council in September of 2010, he would not be making such insensitive comments. What upsets me is that sometimes people are quick to criticize without looking into the facts."

With all that said, and barring delays, Saeki says The View should have its grand opening in the fall of 2012.

A rare first for the Downey Symphony

■ April 2 concert at Downey Theatre to feature special guest.

By Joyce Sherwin, Downey Symphony

DOWNEY – In the 54-year history of the Downey Symphony, an impressive variety of solo artists have appeared with the orchestra. Violinists and pianists abound. Audiences applauded cellists, flutists, oboists, bassoonists, vocalists, church choirs and narrators. We've heard in solo repertoire the French horn, tuba, clarinet, harp, piccolo and one tap dancer.

But the gorgeous assemblage of instruments to be spread out, center stage, at our orchestra's next concert is undoubtedly a first.

In his "Concerto for Percussion and Orchestra," composer Eric Guinivan will play "a five-octave marimba and a small multi-percussion set consisting of five toms, a bass drum, a bell tree, and four suspended bells."

All that and a beautiful surrounding program of works by Sibelius (Finlandia) and Tchaikovsky (the Pathetique), all under Music Director Sharon Lavery, and the evening promises to be unforgettable.

The date is Saturday evening, April 2, in Downey's Civic Theatre, 8435 Firestone Blvd. A pre-concert discussion begins at 7:15 p.m., and the concert itself at 8, opening with this year's baton auction winner, Bruce Rose.

Tickets priced at $30 and $25, $10 for students, are available at the theater box office on Wednesday, March 30, between 12-4 p.m., and on the night of performance.

Ample parking is free, and the Symphony Guild invites audience and orchestra to a complimentary reception in the theater patio at the conclusion of all that fine music. Hope to see you there, munching cookies.

For more information, our website is downeysymphony.org.

Eric Guinivan will perform at the April 2 Downey Symphony concert at the Downey Theatre.

Apocalypse begins May 21, Downey minister warns

■ Audie Derryberry, a minister and former City Council candidate, claims the end is near.

By Christian Brown,
Staff Writer

DOWNEY – Is this the end of the world?

Just one glance at a national newspaper or evening broadcast might give some many reasons to fear.

With calamity still unfolding in quake-ravaged Japan, heightened civil unrest in Libya, Bahrain, Yemen and Syria, and an intransigent global recession that continues to beleaguer countries around the world, some groups believe the long-awaited apocalypse may be closer than most people think.

For local minister and former City Council candidate Audie Derryberry the end of the world won't start in 2012, but will begin on May 21, 2011.

"I'm 110 percent sure of this," said Derryberry. "I've been working on this all my life, over 30 years now. This is not a scare tactic − we've been warning people for 20 years. We are the last generation. You've got to be ready, you need to be born again...only Jesus can save us."

Derryberry, a life-long Downey resident, who served as pastor of Downey Bible Fellowship for 20 years before retiring in 2007, believes the signs couldn't be any clearer. Using dates and prophecies found in the Bible, Derryberry estimates the end of the world will start on Saturday, May 21, exactly 7,000 years after Noah's flood.

"In Genesis, it talks about the flood and it tells the day. Using Biblical genealogy we can construct a Biblical calendar and know exactly when the flood was," Derryberry said. "Do the math, there's a lot of math in the Bible and it's there for a reason.

"The Bible gives us the signs of the last days − morality decreases, hypocrisy rises in the church, and the gospel goes all over the world − but Israel is the time clock. When Israel was reborn in 1948, that let us know that we were in the last generation."

Despite the radical nature of Derryberry's message, he's not the only one proclaiming the end is near.

Oakland-based Family Radio, a non-denominational, listener-supported Christian broadcasting network, which operates from more than 150 radio stations around the country, has begun a nationwide campaign to both inform and warn Americans of the impending apocalypse.

"It's a major production," said Derryberry who turns 65 next month. "They started passing out tracks five years ago, now there are caravans of RVs traveling from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic coast, giving out thousands of tracks. And today they began a billboard program that will go all over the state and the nation."

A member of the Downey Interfaith Fellowship, Audie Derryberry admits his beliefs have been met with skepticism.

However, this isn't the first time that Family Radio has predicted the end of the world. In 1992, Harold Camping, founder and owner of Family Radio, published a book entitled, "1994?," which similarly proclaimed that the world would end in 1994.

In a released statement last week, Derryberry acknowledged that many of his colleagues and contemporaries, while gracious and tolerant, disagree with his May 21 theory.

"I am a member of the Downey Interfaith Fellowship, a fellowship of clergy, here in Downey and the Downey Chapter of CIPAC (Christians' Israel Public Action Campaign)," he wrote. "Let it be known that these good people do not agree with me concerning May 21, 2011. Some agree that the return of Jesus Christ is very near, but not a specific date."

Nonetheless, Derryberry depicts the end of the world as devastatingly tragic and catastrophic at best.

"When the judgment begins, there will be a terrible earthquake and everything man has built will be destroyed − it'll be worse than what Japan is going through now," he said. "Those that are saved will be taken up and it will be hell on earth for five months. On October 21, everything will end."

Despite the seriousness of Derryberry's message, he hopes people won't dwell on him, but will instead heed the warning.

"We don't want to panic people, we want to encourage them to come boldly to the throne of God and pray for God to save them," said Derryberry. "Christ died in our place so we don't have to suffer on May 21. He's a God of justice, and that's what's coming, but he's also a God of mercy and grace. Read your Bible, trust God."

Even though Derryberry is adamant and ardent in his belief, he already knows what he'll say if his theory doesn't come to pass.

"We were wrong," he said with a shrug of the shoulders. "But either way, we're close, we're on the edge."

Consultant hired for Tierra Luna project

■ City moving forward with Tierra Luna project to replace Downey Studios.

By Christian Brown,
Staff Writer

DOWNEY – The multi-million dollar Tierra Luna project took one step forward Tuesday night after the City Council approved a $125,000 contract with Tierra West Advisors, a Los Angeles-based real estate consulting firm, who will help the city sift through negotiations surrounding the purposed retail/commercial site.

During the last several months, city officials have been working with local developer Bob Manarino of Manarino Realty and Industrial Realty Group (IRG) to amend the existing Downey Landing Specific Plan for the reuse and redevelopment of the approximately 79 acres currently occupied by Downey Studios, according to a city report.

In order to amend the specific plan and facilitate the redevelopment of the former NASA site, a development agreement between the city of Downey and IRG must be arranged. City officials will rely upon Tierra West Advisors to provide third party, real estate negotiation services while the terms of the agreement are discussed.

Over the next several years, the city hopes to launch the development of a commercial project called Tierra Luna Marketplace, a big box anchored retail center that would accommodate restaurants, a hotel, movie theater and office space.

According to the city report, the professional services agreement with Tierra West Advisors is not to exceed the amount $125,000.

John Yonai, a principal at Tierra West Advisors and contributor to Councilman Mario Guerra's reelection campaign, will serve as representative for the firm during the one-year contract agreement. In addition, Louis Morales, who sits on the Planning Commission, also serves as a senior associate for Tierra West Advisors.

Pipeline deal OK'd after assurances

DOWNEY – Seemingly satisfied with safety and insurance issues raised two weeks ago, the City Council on Tuesday approved the transfer of an underground oil pipeline to an outside company.

The franchise agreement will net the city nearly $20,000 in annual payments, plus a one-time franchise granting fee of $10,000.

Council members delayed the agreement two weeks ago after council members and a resident questioned the pipeline's safety and associated insurance coverage.

Public works director John Oskoui wrote in a new report that ultrasound technology will be used to "identify cracks, holes, welds, pipe wall thickness as well as internal and external corrosion," and told council members Tuesday that the pipeline will be monitored by the state fire marshal and Downey firefighters.

Oskoui also said a $20 million insurance policy "is adequate and far exceeds the coverage" provided by LT Pipeline Inc., who is taking over the 16-year-old pipeline.

The franchise agreement runs 20 years but can be voided if LT Pipeline fails to meet safety guidelines, Oskoui said.

The agreement was approved, 4-0, with Mayor Luis Marquez abstaining because he lives within 500 feet of the pipeline.

Countdown traffic signals installed

DOWNEY – Republic Intelligent Transportation Services, Inc., has completed the installation of 154 countdown signals throughout the city aimed at increasing pedestrian safety.

The final project cost was $34,041 – about $6,300 over budget – to be paid with federal grant monies.

The City Council approved the final construction cost Tuesday.

The devices were installed at pre-determined locations in Downey that had "the highest combination in pedestrian volume and pedestrian-related collision history," city officials said.

The signals, located at 20 intersections, count down in seconds the time until the traffic light changes.

City officials said the project went over budget because 42 existing signal housings were too small to accommodate the new signal indicators, causing the contractor to order different housing units.

Police plan DUI checkpoint Saturday

DOWNEY – Downey police will hold a DUI checkpoint Saturday from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m. at an undisclosed location in Downey.

Over the past three years, DUI collisions have killed three people and hurt 73 others, Sgt. Dan Murray with the Downey Police Department said.

During the same time period, Downey police officers arrested more than 1,000 people for driving under the influence of alcohol.

Police officials reminded residents to plan for a designated driver if you're drinking. A DUI arrest costs upwards of $10,000, plus jail time and the loss of driving privileges, authorities said.

Statewide, overall traffic deaths declined 23 percent, from 3,995 in 2007 to 3,081 in 2009. DUI deaths dropped 16 percent, from 1,132 in 2007 to 950 in 2009.

Total traffic fatalities are at their lowest levels in six decades, when the federal government began compiling figures.

The DUI checkpoint is funded by a grant from the California Office of Traffic Safety.

Juddy Ceniceros's plate is full, but that's how she likes it

■ Only 27, Ceniceros has already proved capable of handling several projects.

By Eric Pierce,
City Editor

DOWNEY – To be honest, we're not sure what Juddy Ceniceros's job title is at City Hall: is she public information officer? Administrative assistant? Event coordinator? Neighborhood watch captain? Project manager?

The answer is "all of the above," and she does all those jobs exceptionally well.

At age 27, Ceniceros is one of the youngest employees inside City Hall, and her star is on the rise. A 2006 graduate of Cal State Fullerton (with a bachelor's degree in public administration and a minor in child development), she plans to head back to school this fall for work on a master's degree. Her future, like the city's motto, appears unlimited.

"Downey is such a unique city," she says during an interview at her third floor cubicle. "And there are a lot of exciting things coming up."

Her greatest accomplishment to date may be the formation of a neighborhood watch program that – as of Tuesday – had 82 active groups. The program – an initiative of Councilman David Gafin – bands neighbors together and encourages residents to immediately report suspicious persons or vehicles to police.

Neighborhood watch has become such a success that today it consumes much of Ceniceros' time. The program is in the process of transferring to the Downey Police Department where Jane Guzman will take over control, freeing up time for Ceniceros to concentrate on other projects, police officials confirmed.

"I really enjoyed the program and getting to know the residents," Ceniceros said. "I got to see first hand what their issues were. My goal was to make them proactive in taking control of their neighborhood."

One of her new responsibilities will be securing grants for the city, to be used from road repaving to new park equipment. She also continues to head the street banner program honoring local military personnel; she's currently soliciting donations to purchase more banners.

Ceniceros has also taken the role of public information officer, working hand-in-hand with department heads to craft press releases that are then forwarded to local media outlets. The necessity of a city spokesman has become more apparent since the openings of the Columbia Memorial Space Center, Porto's Bakery, and soon, Raytheon, all high-profile companies with regional appeal.

But public information is not limited to newspapers, Ceniceros said. Residents who request information from City Hall (compensation figures are popular requests) are not turned away. In fact, Ceniceros said, residents remain the priority.

"I try to help all residents with their needs," said Ceniceros, who completed an internship with Santa Ana's community services department while in college. "We're here to serve the residents, and they're not going to be transferred from one department to another. Customer service is really important to me."

Ceniceros, who reports to assistant to the city manager Shannon DeLong, said she's preparing to launch the city's official Facebook and Twitter pages, a seemingly natural extension of the city's efforts to get hip to technology, which started last year with the unveiling of a new website. Expanding to social media will help the city reach an expanding demographic that increasingly gets its information online.

Juddy Ceniceros handles a variety of tasks at City Hall, most notably public information and the city's military banner program. She is in the process of transferring responsibility of the neighborhood watch program to the police department. She is pictured above with Police Chief Rick Esteves and former councilwoman Anne Bayer after receiving an award from the Peace Officers Association of Los Angeles County last June.

In addition, Ceniceros will soon begin putting plans together for another "Taste of Downey" restaurant fair later this year. The inaugural Dine in Downey event was well-attended last November (perhaps a little too well-attended: some restaurant booths ran out of food) and Ceniceros hopes to build on the success. She is also in charge of coordinating the yearly City Council transition party for incoming mayors and outgoing council members.

"It's always a team effort," Ceniceros said of her full plate. "I don't do it all by myself. I have a lot of help and support."

What does she do for fun?

"I like to spend time with family and friends, and travel to nearby places like San Francisco, San Diego and Lake Tahoe," she said. "Family and friends are my priority."

We couldn't finish our interview without asking about the unusual spelling of her first name, "Juddy," pronounced Judy.

"There's no special significance," she laughed. "People used to call me 'Jud-dy' all through elementary school, high school and college. It's pronounced Judy but just spelled a little different. "

'Green jobs' are bad jobs

By Robert L. Bradley Jr.

Despite record federal deficits, the Obama administration is pouring millions of taxpayer dollars into "green" jobs initiatives. In Arizona, three state agencies just announced they're using $3 million in federal grant money to train locals for jobs at renewable-energy companies. North Carolina is spending $1 million in federal dollars to run an analysis of the labor market to determine demand for green jobs in coming years.

Policymakers at all levels of government should pause. Washington should rescind such grants and the recipients should return the booty -- these jobs are "bubble" jobs, and as such, they're bad jobs.

Back in 2010, for example, President Obama visited the California-based solar power company Solyndra to tout the plant's new jobs. Just months after his visit, Solyndra shut down its plant - having yet to turn a profit - and laid off 175 workers. Congress is now investigating the $535 million loan guarantee the company received as part of the 2009 stimulus. The president should have taken Solyndra's bust as a sign that "green" jobs are shaky ground on which to build America's 21st-century economy. Instead, the administration is continuing to shower money on the clean energy sector in the mistaken belief that government can pick winners and losers better than the market.

In total, the 2012 budget contains $8 billion in subsidies, government grants, and tax breaks for clean energy technologies, which the administration claims will create millions of new jobs. The logic seems straightforward: More wind turbines and solar panels mean more jobs for builders, technicians, and engineers.

Unfortunately, there's a big problem at the center of this agenda. Simply put, staking job creation on industries that depend on government favor for survival is not a long-term solution to our economic troubles.

To be sustainable, jobs - and the industries that create them - need to be based on actual consumer demand. Green jobs are created not by the market, but by subsidies and by mandate. Obama acknowledged as much in his State of the Union speech when he declared: "By 2035, 80 percent of America's electricity will come from clean energy sources." In other words, the government will create a market by requiring Americans to buy more expensive electricity from clean energy sources.

Currently, oil and natural gas supply 63 percent of our total energy needs, while renewables - wind, solar, hydropower, and ethanol - supply less than 10 percent. As a study by University of Illinois researchers bluntly puts it,: "Turning off the electricity generated from coal and other non-renewable sources...would mean that most Americans would literally freeze in the dark."

The president now includes nuclear power, "clean" coal, and (peculiarly) natural gas among his politically favored "clean" energy sources. While the inclusion of fossil fuels and nuclear power makes Obama's electricity mandate somewhat more realistic, it also makes the economic rationale for lavishing government handouts upon renewables appear all the more flimsy.

Renewables already receive over twice the level of subsidies compared with conventional energy sources. Yet, as evidenced by Solyndra, they still can't compete with cheaper energy supplies like natural gas. And who could expect them to when their production costs are more than six times those of other producers?

The Obama administration's answer is to hobble the more competitive industries with huge new tax burdens. Thus, the 2012 budget contains nearly $90 billion in tax increases on the oil and natural gas industry. Of course, it's ultimately consumers who will pay those taxes.

Consumers will also be paying higher energy prices as renewables drive up costs. The net drain on the economy will no doubt hurt job growth in other sectors, meaning that green job spending could end up a wash or worse. Spain's experience with green job spending suggests that "worse" is the far likelier outcome. According to a report by Spanish economists, the country lost 2.2 jobs for every job "created" in the "green" economy.

Nor will green jobs necessarily last long. Budget priorities shift as political parties move in and out of power and as new challenges arise. Just consider the deep cuts made to community service block grants in Obama's 2012 budget. Once a domestic-policy darling of our Community-Organizer-in-Chief, community service grants have been pushed aside for other policy priorities - like clean energy.

If the administration wants to get serious about job creation, it should look to the industries that don't need taxpayer money to stay afloat. Moreover, by promoting affordable energy supplies, it could bring down costs in all sectors of the economy - enabling the private sector to create real and sustainable jobs. With the unemployment rate at nearly 10 percent, this shouldn't be a hard choice to make.

Housing proves key to economic recovery

While America continues to feel the effects of a historic recession and staggering unemployment, housing can help the nation achieve a genuine recovery.

“Although job numbers have improved over the past few months, the unemployment rate is still more than 9 percent, well above historic norms,” said Nubia Aguirre, president of the Downey Association of Realtors. “Home ownership creates jobs and has led this country out of six of the last eight recessions. It is essential to a full economic recovery.”

A solid housing recovery means robust economic recovery. The National Association of Realtors estimates that one job is generated for every two home sales. That means for every 5 million homes sold, 2.5 million private-sector jobs are created. NAR also estimates that each home sale at the median price pumps a total of $60,000 into the economy over time.

“Homeownership builds a stronger America,” said Aguirre. “In addition to helping create jobs, housing also has a significant impact on national spending. Housing accounts for more than 15 percent of the Gross Domestic Product, making it a key economic driver.”

Spending as a result of a home sale can be directly or indirectly tied to a home purchase. Expenses such as commissions and fees are a direct result of a sale or purchase. Meanwhile, other sectors that benefit from the demand for related goods and services including carpeting, furniture, appliances, window treatments, landscaping, home improvement and more.

“Jobs enable people to achieve the American dream of home ownership,” said Aguirre. “Every time a home is built, bought or sold, jobs are created. Housing isn’t the only thing to restore our country’s economy, but it will play a critical role.”

VA needs to improve MST screening for women

Nearly 40 percent of female veterans surveyed by the American Legion about VA health care were dissatisfied with the screening process for military sexual trauma.

Among those, 26 percent said they were "very dissatisfied" with the screening process, which mandates that all enrolled veterans are universally screened for military sexual trauma.

These and other findings from the Legion-sponsored survey were made available March 22 during a press conference at the National Press Club. The online survey was conducted Jan. 5-31 by ProSidian Consulting, LLC, based in Charlotte, N.C.

At the press conference, Legion officials and ProSidian staff explained results of the 67-question survey, which was taken by 3,012 U.S. military women veterans worldwide.

The survey measured 10 attributes of service quality regarding VA – reliability, responsiveness, competence, access, courtesy, communication, credibility, security, tangibles and understanding the customer. The survey provided an assessment of specialized services for women at VA and wasn't designed to present a reflection of general VA services that women receive, according to ProSidian.

Among the findings: one in three female VA health-care users reported they were dissatisfied with their most recent experience with VA's Women Veterans Program Manager, who counsels female patients in the system. The survey suggests there is room for significant improvement for VA to provide gender-specific services such as PAP smears and mammograms. And 38 percent of the survey's respondents said they wouldn't use a VA doctor for a second opinion – even if that opinion was offered at no charge.

"Research on this subject is important, yet it's lacking," said Verna Jones, director of the Legion's Veterans Affairs & Rehabilitation Division. "Women represent a vastly growing portion of U.S. veterans, comprising almost 20 percent of our armed forces and representing the fastest growing population of the VA health-care system.

"The results from this survey will be used to refine The American Legion's outreach efforts (and) enhance its written and oral testimony to Congress and federal agencies. The survey results will also help identify unmet needs among women veterans and guide the development of strategic remedies."

The survey results provided insight about the gap between desired and actual performance of the VA health-care system for women using it. Of the 2,936 respondents who answered that specific question, 63 percent were enrolled in the VA health-care system. Of those, almost 30 percent were dissatisfied with the "reliability" of health care provided by the VA when compared to private health-care providers, and more than 30 percent were dissatisfied when they compared the "responsiveness" of VA to that of private health-care providers.

About 30 percent of respondents reported that they were not allowed an appropriate amount of time with their provider to discuss their specific health-related issues, and 38 percent expressed at least some level of dissatisfaction when asked to compare the credibility of health care provided by VA against similar services provided by private practitioners. Eleven percent were "very dissatisfied."

"We found in our survey about 66 percent of the women … not only registered for VA health-care service, but they also maintained their private health-care service," said Adrian Woolcock, managing principal of ProSidian. "In addition in that subset, only 40 percent have ever used VA. The women veterans overall do know what their benefits are. It's really a matter of focusing on improving the quality of service provided to women veterans."

Other findings from the survey:

* Almost 25 percent of the respondents rated the convenience of VA facilities locations as poor, indicating that gender-specific care is difficult to obtain for a significant number of women.

* More than 25 percent of those surveyed expressed dissatisfaction with VA in security-related issues – especially the degree of sensitivity surrounding a patient's personal information.

* Approximately one-fourth of the respondents said they were dissatisfied with the level of competence demonstrated by VA health-care providers when compared to private practitioners.

* Almost a quarter of the respondents gave VA a courtesy rating of less than positive.

Demographic information from the survey indicated that 34.6 percent of respondents were between ages 52 and 61, while 24.9 percent were ages 42-51. Eighty percent were white. More than 68 percent were non-combat veterans; the highest percentage of combat veterans who responded (16 percent) served in Operations Iraqi or Enduring Freedom.

Some who took the survey contacted the American Legion to offer details about their responses. In those discussions, the women said they didn't want a separate VA health-care system for women; rather, they want the same quality health care that men receive but tailored to meet gender-specific needs.

Letters to the Editor:

Pleasant sight

Dear Editor:

In regards to Diana Borzi claiming "Bumblebee" is defacing private property (Letters to the Editor, 3/17/11), for nine years I have passed by a demolished vacant lot with one remaining wall.

The place defines blight. It faces a senior citizens condominium complex. I don't see how the residents can stand to look at such a view day after day. Once I saw a senior citizen pulling up weeds from the property.

Bumblebee has changed a depressing sight to a pleasant one of a child enjoying life. Has Ms. Borzi asked the owner of the lot what he thinks of Bumblebee? Perhaps he appreciates him as much as I do.

Political favors

Dear Editor:

For one group of photo-opportunistic local politicians to use their position and leverage to name a street after a like-minded living federal Representative, is simply a example of currying favor for quid-pro-quo. ("Mayor Wants to Name Street After Sen. Dianne Feinstein," 3/17/11)

This wreaks of the sort of maneuvering, cronyism, back scratching, and abuse of trust and responsibility that could be expected in other cities, but should not darken ours.

If any street in this City --- especially in the vicinity of its aerospace heritage --- needs a name, then it should take on one which signifies to future generations the accomplishments and sacrifices of those whose foresight and ingenuity brought forth that industry.

The names that should come to mind are those of the brave and patriotic astronauts who were lost in our country's few disasters and also of those who made it all possible, such as E.M.Smith, Gerald Vultee, James "Dutch" Kindelberger, Lee Atwood, Dale Meyers.

Long Beach had the right idea when they named the drilling islands after Grissom, White, Chaffee, and Freeman -- rather than Kennedy or Johnson. Downey should not drop below that level of respect by engaging in its own self-promotion by memorializing a living politician. Surely Steve Horn and his family would agree.

Downey

Campos and cash

Dear Editor:

I saw our former police chief Roy Campos in your Feb. 3, 2011 issue ("Ex-Top Cop Campos didn't Stay Retired for Long").

I guess Roy got tired of counting his money and has taken a job of interim police chief in Signal Hill and then is going to teach part-time at the Orange County Sheriff's Academy.

In his last year as cop in Downey, he achieved $624,000 in total compensation. I hope Signal Hill doesn't get taken like we, the citizens of Downey, did.

One of the classes he could teach could be how to make big money by ripping off the citizens.

-- George Hofstetter,
Downey

Editor's note: Roy Campos's total compensation in 2009 – the year he retired as police chief in Downey – was $624,000 after he cashed out more than three decades' worth of unused holiday, vacation and sick time.

NY Times to charge for online content

The New York Times announced last Thursday their intention to begin charging for Internet access and mobile devices.

Per Sjofors, founder and CEO of pricing authority Atenga, Inc., said the Times' decision and execution is a "catastrophic mess," adding that the decision to charge only after 20 page views is a "direct assault" to their most loyal readers.

"They really are shooting themselves in the foot," said Sjofors. "Not only is this a slap to their most dedicated audience, it's outright confusing.

In their letter to New York Times readers, the newspaper described a detailed and elaborate fee structure involving different pricing based on subscription packages, content and device.

"Because it will cost subscribers more money to access the content they find via Google than via Facebook, and that there is a different rate if you are on your computer verses your iPad, readers will begin to feel nickel and dimed," Sjofors said.

The New York Times tries to justify their reasons by comparing themselves to other fee-based outlets like the Financial Times and Wall Street Journal. Sjofors said these fee-based publications are not comparable to the New York Times.

"The readers of outlets like these are individuals reading the newspapers trying to make informed investment decisions for themselves and strategic decisions for their companies, not find out more about the latest news in Libya, the latest blockbuster novel or NASA's latest space endeavor," he said.

The bottom line: what will this change do to the New York Times, their brand and their business?

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

So many of us are keeping a watchful eye on our sodium, fat, or calorie consumption. How do we know what we're eating? Is there a simple way to understand the contents of the food that we buy?

The Nutrition Labeling and Education Act (NLEA) was passed in 1990, requiring all packaged foods to display nutrition information. These labeling requirements have since undergone multiple amendments, and today, labeling is required for most prepared foods, including breads, cereals, canned and frozen foods, snacks, desserts, and drinks. Labeling for raw produce (fruits and vegetables) and fish is voluntary.

The Nutrition Facts food labels list the percentages supplied based on an average 2,000-calorie (and sometimes 2,500 as well) a day diet. The Daily Values used were originally based on 1968 recommended dietary allowances for each nutrient for men and women of any age, and have been periodically revised to incorporate more current research. However, newer revisions are still necessary.

Here's an example of the label that appears on most packaged foods:

Nutrition Facts

Serving Size 1/2 cup (120 ml) condensed soup
Servings Per Container about 2.5

Amount Per Serving

Calories 60	Calories from Fat 15
	% Daily Value*
Total Fat 1.5g	2%
Saturated Fat 0.5g	3%
Trans Fat 0g
Cholesterol 15mg
Sodium 890gm	37%
Total Carbohydrate 8g	3%
Dietary Fiber 1g	4%
Sugars 1g
Protein 3g
Vitamin A 4%	Calcium 0%
Vitamin C 0%	Iron 2%

*Percent Daily Values are based on a 2,000 calorie diet. Your Daily Values may be higher or lower depending on your calorie needs:

	Calories	2000	2500
Total Fat	Less than	65g	80g
Sat Fat	Less than	20g	25g
Cholesterol	Less than	300mg	300mg
Sodium	Less than	2,400mg	2400mg
Total Carbohydrate		300g	375g
Dietary Fiber		25g	30g

When evaluating the information on your nutrition labels, keep in mind that higher amounts for vitamins, fiber, and protein are good, but for saturated fats, cholesterol and sugars, lower numbers are more healthful. Remember that most Americans don't get sufficient amounts of dietary fiber, vitamin A, vitamin C, calcium, and iron in their diets.

How do grams relate to calories? Carbohydrates and protein contain about four calories per gram. Fat contains about nine calories per gram. So, if only grams are listed, multiply four or nine times the number of grams, and the result will be total calories.

Pay special attention to the serving size and the number of servings information listed at the top of the label. All information on the rest of the label is based on a single serving. The serving size tells us the size of that single serving; for example, one serving of chicken noodle soup is considered to be 1/2 cup. This information can be very misleading, as a half-cup of soup (even after it is mixed with water) is not what many of us would picture as a full serving! Note that if a small package of cookies contains six cookies, but the serving size is just two, then the entire package contains triple the calories and other values listed.

It is also important to note that one chicken soup serving is one-half cup of the condensed soup as it comes in the can, and not one-half cup of the soup after it has been mixed with water. Depending on the product, the serving size may be measured or counted before or after preparation. Here, the serving size is before preparation, and since the number of servings is 2.5, you can simply consider that regardless of the amount of water used when preparing the soup, if you consume the entire can, you have eaten two and one-half servings (and that doesn't include any crackers!).

The middle portion of the Nutrition Facts food label contains information about calories, fat content, amount and type of carbohydrates, and amount of protein. It shows the amounts in grams (g) or milligrams (mg), and the percentage of the daily value (the amount recommended every day) for each of these nutrients.

You will note that trans fats are listed without a percentage next to them. This is because experts have not agreed on a reference value for how much can be safely consumed. These fats raise blood LDL (bad cholesterol) levels, which increase the risk of heart disease. There is no reference value for sugar, either. Be aware that the sugars listed include both naturally occurring sugars (as in fruits), as well as processed sugars. Diabetics and others among us who are concerned about sugar intake should be certain that sugars are not listed as one of the first few ingredients. Processed sugars may appear as corn syrup, high fructose corn syrup, fruit juice concentrate, maltose, dextrose, sucrose, honey, and maple syrup.

We also find sodium information located in this middle section, rather than with the other minerals down at the bottom of the label. You can see that only a single serving of condensed chicken noodle soup has 37% of the daily value for sodium. If you consume the entire can, you will have eaten almost the entire recommended amount of sodium for the whole day!

Glance at the amount of fiber contained, and you may not be surprised to see that chicken noodle soup from a can contains very, very little.

The bottom portion of the Nutrition Facts label displays the vitamin and mineral content. The FDA requires that information on calcium, iron, vitamin A, and vitamin C be included. Food manufacturers may add information about other vitamins like niacin or folic acid if the product contains any significant amounts. This bottom portion is not always present on smaller items, but it is a good reminder of our general needs, based on that 2,000 or 2,500 calorie per day diet.

The information contained on these tiny labels is imperfect. It doesn't break down our dietary needs by gender, by age, or by particular health condition. It doesn't address conflicting research and current opinions in the nutrition and health care field. However, if your goal is to use this limited information as a guideline, then it can be a great tool to help find the foods that fit into a balanced and healthful diet.

Read carefully, and eat smart!

Use your kitchen cabinet for what ails you

■ From cayenne pepper to ginger, many common kitchen ingredients can be medically effective.

By Rita Shertick,
Special to The Downey Patriot

DOWNEY – You feel a migraine headache coming on, what do you normally reach for?

For a change, grab the cayenne pepper, sprinkle it on what's close at hand, and chances are you won't end up shuttered in your dark bedroom waiting for the throbbing to pass.

More studies are being done proving what's in your kitchen cabinet is as effective as anything in your medicine cabinet. Even Harvard Medical School has embraced this trend of studying home remedies and offers it to their students.

Some of the more common home remedies: Honey is an effective cough syrup, at times surpassing the commercial ones. Adding thyme to the honey increases its effectiveness.

Are you prone to motion sickness? Ginger is the spice for you. Some candy shops sell ginger drops; get a handful before your next traveling.

It is also good for morning sickness, and proven to kill intestinal parasites. So if you're coming back from out of country travels with intestinal problems, stop by the grocery store, scrub a fresh ginger root and much on a section about the size of a half-dollar, or shred to add to your next meal. Another tidbit: a cup of hot tea with honey, lemon and ginger will relieve nasal congestion.

Chicken soup has been proven to kill off cold germs in a controlled laboratory setting. The scientist that did it used his grandmother's recipe to prove a point to her, and was surprised to learn her preaching was true.

Rosemary, besides adding flavor to chicken and potatoes, can help lower your blood pressure and cure your headache.

Peppermint can settle your stomach after a large meal and aid in digestion.

Horseradish helps with external stiffness after over-exercising, a good tip for those weekend warriors who want to make up for sitting behind a desk most of the week. Internally in the body it has diuretic qualities.

If arthritis is what ails you, increase your Indian food intake. Tumeric, commonly found in curry dishes, is very effective. Ginger is also a spice of choice for its anti-inflammatory effect. Switching from corn and soy to olive oil can also help.

Cinnamon can help control blood sugar.

Surprisingly, cooked tomatoes are more nutrient rich than raw.

And a last word: sodas prevent calcium absorption, making those drinkers more prone to brittle bones. Be especially cautious if osteoporosis runs in your family.

As always, do your own research, and don't discontinue anything prescribed by your doctor without his or her knowledge.

Preventive services evade seniors

Critical gaps exist between older Americans who receive potentially lifesaving preventive services and those who do not, according to a new report from agencies of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Clinical prevention services examined in the report include vaccinations that protect against influenza and pneumococcal disease (e.g., bloodstream infections, meningitis, and pneumonia), screenings for the early detection of breast cancer, colorectal cancer, diabetes, lipid disorders, and osteoporosis, and smoking cessation counseling.

The report was published by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, in partnership with HHS' Administration on Aging, Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality, and Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services.

The document, "Enhancing Use of Clinical Preventive Services Among Older Adults: Closing the Gap," highlights the need to promote preventive services for adults age 65 and older, especially among minorities.

"Millions of Americans are not getting proven clinical preventive services that we know can prevent disease and improve quality of life," said Lynda Anderson, Ph.D., director of the Healthy Aging Program at CDC and one of the primary authors. "The report takes stock of current levels of recommended services by older adults, and it becomes obvious that many of these services are woefully underutilized."

About 10,000 Americans turn 65 every day; by 2030, about 1 in 5 Americans will be 65 or older.

"We know prevention is critical to healthy living and independence," said Kathy Greenlee, assistant secretary for aging. "It is important that we continue our efforts at the community level to reach all older Americans. We want to ensure that they are aware of the preventive benefits which are available to them, including those made possible by the Affordable Care Act."

The report also addresses the use of preventive services by diverse populations. It says 49 percent of Asian/Pacific Islanders and 47 percent of Hispanics reported not being screened for colorectal cancer, in comparison to 34 percent of whites. More than 50 percent of Hispanics, 47 percent of blacks and Asian/Pacific Islanders, and 36 percent of whites report never receiving a pneumococcal vaccination.

According to the report, challenges underlying these disparities are complex and reach beyond the traditional health care arena of patient-provider interactions. Older adults may not be aware of the services recommended for their age group or may not know that the services are covered by Medicare, the report said.

"The section of the report titled 'Making a Difference' features innovative strategies applied at the local, state, and national levels to increase the use of preventive services in underserved communities," said Wayne Giles, M.D., M.S., director, Division of Adult and Community Health at CDC. "By putting into practice effective community and clinical strategies, we can dramatically reduce the gaps highlighted in this report."

The showcased activities include: promotion of policies to increase community access, making services available in convenient community settings, such as providing influenza vaccinations at polling places on election days, and building awareness through media.

"Giving Americans access to quality, proven preventive services in their communities is a crucial part of improving the health of Americans and lowering their health care costs in the long run," said AARP board member Catherine Georges, R.N., Ed.D.

Offensive slump baffles Downey manager

■ BASEBALL: Vikings have trouble scoring runs in 5-1 loss to Gahr.

By Scott Cobos,
Staff Writer

DOWNEY – Downey manager Jess Gonzalez said last week that it's all mental when it comes to the success or failures of his ball club.

But after a 5-1 loss to Gahr to open up San Gabriel Valley League play last Friday, he thinks you could flip a coin on whether or not his team took a step forward or a step backward mentally.

"I have no idea," he said. "We're trying to figure that out. I know we can't score any runs."

Downey's recent mental breakdown is really starting to affect the team offensively, as it showed during the game when they didn't score any runs to help out pitcher Jared Gibson until the sixth inning.

Downey's only source of offense came in the bottom half of the sixth when Eric Parra sparked a 2-out rally by doubling to the left-center field gap. Randy Rubio followed with a single, scoring Parra.

But before that, the bats were silenced by Gahr's Darian Dominguez. Dominguez cruised through five innings giving up four hits, striking out four, and not allowing a run. The only trouble he faced was in the first inning when Downey loaded the bases without getting a hit.

Dominguez was able to get Rubio to fly out to third baseman Kevin Franklin to end the threat.

"[Gahr] played a good game and they beat us today," Gonzalez said. "We couldn't capitalize early and that was the difference for us offensively. We haven't scored any runs all year. Again, we get a chance with runners on second and third, one out, and I think it was the first inning and we don't get any runs."

The anemic offense put a lot of pressure on Gibson to pitch perfect according to Gonzalez, again reiterating that the struggles to get any production from his lineup put Gibson in a tough spot.

"We didn't get any offensive production at all early on, and when we did have a chance, we didn't capitalize, and they took a 3-0 lead, and the way we're scoring runs, it's hard. It's hard to pitch when you know you're not going to get very many runs," he said.

Gibson pitched six innings, allowing all 5 runs and walking one. For the most part, it was a strong outing for him according to Gonzalez except for one bad sequence of pitches in the third inning.

Gahr's Edgar Morales struck out to begin the inning, but then in four pitches, Alex Newman doubled, stole third base, then scored on a Jaime Estrada double. Estrada trotted home a pitch later on a 2-run homerun to right field by Franklin.

In a flash, Gahr was up 3-0, and with Downey struggling to score runs, it was too tall of a mountain to climb.

"Everybody is struggling," Gonzalez said. "Offensively we're struggling. We've scored 18 runs in eight games."

Most notably the top of Downey's lineup is getting very little output from their No. 3 and cleanup hitters. Vikings Josh Guerra and Yamel Delgado, the two staples of their offensive attack, are hurting mightily at the plate.

Guerra doesn't look comfortable at all, while Delgado is trying to swing through a miniature slump. The two were 0-for-6 in the game and 0-for-2 with runners in scoring position. They also accounted for three of Dominguez's four strikeouts. In the past three games, the duo is 2-for-16.

When asked if the team is starting to press because of their recent struggles, particularly Guerra and Delgado, Gonzalez said he's not really sure but hopes his team will have rebounded by Tuesday when they visited Paramount.

"We have a big one Tuesday night, so we better come back ready to play, otherwise we're going to put ourselves in a big hole [in league] early on," he said.

A confidence booster may be in order Friday, with the Vikings hosting Dominguez. Downey hasn't dropped a game to the Dons in over a decade. Game time is 3:15 p.m.

Downey splits doubleheader

DOWNEY – The Downey softball team is now 6-2-1 after a win and loss from last Thursday's doubleheader against Lakewood at Mayfair Park.

The Lady Vikings won the first game 4-3, but fell to the Lancers 4-2 in the second game. Downey scored a run each in the first and fifth innings in the first game, tying Lakewood 3-3 in the sixth inning after the Lancers had 2 runs in the fourth. A final run in the tenth inning pulled the Lady Vikings to victory.

Andrea Arellano was 3-for-5 with an RBI and a double. Staci Rodriguez went 2-for-4 with an RBI and a home run for Downey.

Although the Lady Vikings won their first game of the double header, they could not duplicate their efforts in the second match.

Rodriguez was 2-for-4 with 2 RBIs and a double. Alexis Zavala was 3-for-4 with three singles. Janette Rico had a hit in two at bats.

Downey manager Micah Karzen said his team played well in the first game, but unfortunately missed a play in the second.

"Andrea Arellano hit a single to knock in the winning run [in the first game]," he said. "In the second game, we loaded the bases with two out in the last inning and Andrea hit the hardest ball of the night, but the Lakewood baseman made a lucky catch to end the game. Daphne Gaspar and Brenda Martinez did real well considering the competition."

Karzen also praised Jazmyne Cortinas for her "great job" of handling inexperienced pitchers as their catcher and coming up with clutch hits several times.

Downey is hosting Santa Monica today and will travel to Sonora in La Habra next Thursday. The Lady Vikings will host Dominguez in the first league game of the season on April 5. Game times are 3:15 p.m.

Gonzalez calls team meeting after latest loss

■ BASEBALL: Manager Jess Gonzalez trying to get to root of offensive struggle.

By Scott Cobos,
Staff Writer

DOWNEY – After last Friday's 5-1 loss against Gahr to open up league play, a 20-minute team conversation ensued with Downey manager Jess Gonzalez leading the charge. Normally pretty cool and collective, Gonzalez became animated.

There's no surprise that he and his coaches are trying everything to get their team to wake up offensively during games.

The loss put his club 1-7 overall, a record that could be much different according to him. A few games should have been wins he said. Also, a couple others could've gone either way with a base hit here, or an executed bunt there.

Whatever it is, he's absolutely convinced the problem is not the work ethic of his team, nor is it a leadership problem, or even a talent problem. What's happening on the field is directly connected to what's happening in the 6-inch space between his players' ears.

"Right now being 1-7, we're not leaning the right way," he said when asked what direction his team is heading mentally. "We're just having trouble scoring runs. When you lose, everything is magnified. Every mistake you make is huge right now."

His team fields three very good high school baseball hitters, one of them being center fielder Josh Guerra who has committed to Cal State Long Beach to play baseball. Yamel Delgado and Eric Parra are the other two who fill the heart of the lineup.

But when you look at their statistics on the season, it's frightening to know the best three hitters on the team are all hitting under .300. The one statistic that refuses to leave the grasp of Gonzalez though is the 19 runs scored in eight games.

The on-going trend of being unable to come up with hits with runners in scoring position has prompted Gonzalez and his coaching staff to mix up practices in hopes that his team will respond and produce on the field.

"We've been doing a bunch of different things," he said. "I don't know how much we'll be able to practice [this week]. To me it goes back to 8 runs in five games. We've scored 19 total. Offensively we need to push some runs across early and take a lead."

Gonzalez said that he thinks he has a good pitching staff, and a quality defense. But the fact that his offense is sputtering -- and has been since the beginning of the season -- is putting a ton of pressure on the pitchers to be perfect and the defense to play air tight.

"We have to take advantage of the [early] opportunities we get," he said. "If we don't, it's going to be tough to win those games. We can pitch a bit, and we can play defense."

In practices, the kids respond well and do the right things he said. After games he's also communicating with the team, speaking to them and then allowing them to give their input. Two things he doesn't think the struggles are attributed to though are a distraction off the field or a leadership issue on the field.

"I think we have a good group of kids," he said. "If there was other stuff going on, I'd probably get a feel for that. Our practices are good. They're trying to do things right. I don't have a beef on that. If it was lack of effort, and not wanting to get better, we'd be running or doing something to correct that."

On the bright side though, he thinks that things have leveled off and will cease to go south.

"It's not getting worse," he said. "It seems like when you're down, it's tough with our offense right now to score runs. Every little mistake is big. Eight runs in the last five games is tough. We're lucky only one of those is a league game."

And like he said after their loss against Gahr, if they don't fix it soon, they could dig themselves a big hole in league play very quickly.

Collecting a catch after shooting time

California Outdoors Q&A

By Carrie Wilson, Fish & Game

Q: This situation happened to me. Five minutes before the end of shooting time I knocked down a snow goose that fell out of range and started swimming. I waded after it in the flooded rice field but couldn't catch it or get within range until after shooting time ended. In a case like that, do I shoot late or let it go and risk a waste of game citation? Do wardens consider "spirit of the law" as opposed to "letter of the law?"

A: According to Department of Fish and Game (DFG) Assistant Chief Mike Carion, if you are "in hot pursuit" of the goose, you should be able to reach it before the end of shoot time, or at least within a minute or two! Bottom line answer is this: It is illegal to take the bird after legal shoot time.

If a warden was watching you pursue the game and shoot late, they would use their judgment as to whether a crime was committed. On the other hand, waste of game only applies when a person does not make a reasonable effort to retrieve. If the hunter tries to catch it and it swims off, it is a reasonable effort. Breaking the law is not a reasonable effort.

So, if the hunter doesn't shoot late, no laws are broken!

Q: I just saw some new trout lures containing little glow sticks to attract fish. Someone told me that using light to attract fish is illegal and hence these lures are illegal to use. What do you think?

A: These lures sound as if they are legal. There are no fish and game laws prohibiting using light to attract fish. Lights may be used at night when and where such fishing is allowed, and lights may be used on or as part of any fishing tackle.

Q: Several years ago, I lost my fishing license and could not locate the duplicate, so I was forced to purchase a new license. About a month later, I found the lost license, and at that point technically had two licenses for the same year (with ocean stamps, etc). I found that having an extra license gave me piece of mind because as I transitioned from my car to a friend's, to a boat, to a sport fishing charter, I could keep one in my dry box (that goes from car to boat) and another with my fishing gear. Is there any regulation prohibiting me from doing this intentionally? From an economic point of view, it would be worth the extra cost to me to have the extra piece of mind, and I don't mind that the funds go to an important state program. Can I purchase more than one license so that I can always be sure to have one in my possession, no matter how forgetful I become?

A: Unfortunately, you cannot purchase more than one license intentionally. However, if your license is lost, you may purchase a duplicate license.

According to DFG Sport Fishing Program Analyst Glenn Underwood, a person is prohibited from obtaining more than one license, tag, permit, reservation or other entitlement of the same type, except for certain short term licenses (Fish and Game Code, section 1053(b)). This section does allow a person to obtain a duplicate license, tag, permit, reservation or other entitlement upon the loss or destruction of the original, payment of the duplicate fee and completion of an affidavit certifying the loss or destruction of the license, tag, permit, reservation or other entitlement.

The DFG's new Automated License Data System (ALDS) keeps track of the licenses a person has purchased and makes obtaining a duplicate sport fishing or hunting license easy from any license agent. The ALDS enforces license rules regarding the number of licenses a person may possess and will not allow a person to purchase a second annual sport fishing or hunting license.

Q: I have a question about the halibut out at San Clemente Island. Is it a self-contained population due to the long distance between the island and mainland? If so, is it harder for this island population to mix and propagate with the mainland coastal halibut? I understand that all fertilized fish eggs, larvae and fry drift with the sea currents, but wouldn't it be easy to overfish this one "homegrown" species of fish at San Clemente Island?

A: Halibut do move inshore-offshore and along the coast to spawn. They also follow feed and follow favorable ocean conditions. Unfortunately, there is no good answer to your question regarding the fish at San Clemente Island, mostly because no data is available.

According to DFG Associate Marine Biologist Travis Tanaka, more than 26,800 coastal mainland halibut were tagged as part of a halibut study performed in Southern California from 1992 to 1997. The study seemed to indicate that migration was related to the size of the fish, but this was not statistically proven. Most of the fish in the study (64 percent) were recaptured in the same region as the original capture.

However, halibut larger than 550 millimeters (21.9 inches) in length averaged 29.5 kilometers (18.3 miles) in travel. At the same time, smaller halibut less than 550 millimeters averaged from 4.6 to 5.6 kilometers (2.9-3.5 miles) of travel. The greatest distance of travel was accomplished by a 559 millimeter (22 inch) halibut, which traveled 319 kilometers (198.2 miles). The lesson here is that fish do move, and in the case of this particular study, the movement was mostly to the north. (The results of this study can be found in DFG's scientific journal, California Fish and Game, vol. 85, no. 2.)

To assess the population size of San Clemente Island fish, someone would have to tag many of them, then catch them again and see where they ended up. Extensive tagging studies require money and time -- two resources that are in pretty short supply.

You are correct regarding fertilized halibut eggs. Halibut are broadcast spawners, meaning that when conditions are right, the males and females release their sperm and eggs into the water, and a meeting of the two by random chance takes care of the rest. Currents created during El Nino events improve recruitment (survivability of individuals) because the fertilized eggs will stay closer to the shore where they can settle out. While young halibut may spend their first few years around San Clemente Island, they won't necessarily stay there. The same applies to juvenile halibut along the mainland coast. They will move.

Q: I'm not a hunter but am wondering if there is a concern for hunters having to deal with fleas and/or ticks jumping off a cooling carcass when field dressing the animal?

A: Many animals have fleas and ticks and hunters are encouraged to protect themselves from bites by using appropriate sprays or products to reduce the chance of bites and diseases like Lyme disease.

Q: Can I use a throw net to catch baitfish (threadfin shad) in a private lake? Since it is private, it should be fine, right?

A: DFG regulations generally do not apply in any water that is self-contained without any hydrological connection to state waters, or to any fish that are planted by the owner or person in control of the property. In these waters fishing methods are not governed by DFG regulations.

However, it would be a violation of the law to transport fish alive from the water where they were taken.

Carpenter Center releases 2011-12 schedule

LONG BEACH – The Carpenter Performing Arts Center has announced its 2011-12 season, which features five subscription series and more – including inspiring and celebrated performers in theatre, dance and music as well as events for the entire family.

“Our patrons will find an eclectic array of artists and performances scheduled for the Carpenter Center’s 17th season of presenting,” said executive director Michele Roberge. “It is difficult to pick a favorite with the dance-illusionists of MOMIX, Hollywood icon Shirley MacLaine, and Ballet Maribor’s 'Radio & Juliet' among the choices. There truly is something for everyone as our season ranges from Broadway star Davis Gaines, to a performance by master DJ Paul Oakenfold on stage with the Bob Cole Conservatory Symphony Orchestra, to an appearance by ‘Jungle’ Jack Hanna, and more.”

The season officially opens with Broadway star Davis Gaines, who returns after two sold-out performances as part of the Cabaret Series, the Center’s most intimate experience where patrons enjoy table seating on the stage within feet of the performer.

Gaines performed the title role in Andrew Lloyd Webber’s "The Phantom of the Opera" more than 2,000 times during his run on Broadway, in Los Angeles (where he remains LA’s longest-running Phantom) and in San Francisco.

The Cabaret Series next features Grammy-nominated and Los Angeles-born Perla Batalla, who gained international attention as a backup singer for Leonard Cohen, and continues with Broadway star Rachel York, who has performed in "City of Angels," "Les Misérables" and "Victor/Victoria," among others.

The series culminates with Hot Club of Detroit and vocalist Cyrille Aimée performing gypsy jazz in the tradition of Django Reinhardt.

Academy Award-winning actress Shirley MacLaine kicks off the Wit & Wisdom Series with a montage of memorable film moments and revelations about her extraordinary life, career and spiritual journey.

The Wit & Wisdom Series also includes the return of NPR favorite, Capitol Steps, a group of former congressional staffers who put the ‘mock’ in democracy with their up-to-the-minute political satire songs and parodies.

Rounding out the series is Aquila Theatre Company’s performance of Oscar Wilde’s "The Importance of Being Earnest." This world-renowned troupe is known for their fresh and lively interpretations of classical theatre.

The Dance Series begins with a rare U.S. engagement of Ballet Maribor performing "Radio & Juliet," a modern interpretation of Shakespeare’s "Romeo and Juliet" set to music by Radiohead and choreographed by Edward Clug.

The series continues when Doug Varone and Dancers – celebrating their 25th anniversary – bring their acclaimed new work, "Chapters from a Broken Novel," to the Carpenter Center stage.

Ballet Memphis wraps up the Dance Series with a performance that includes "In Dreams" – a passionate journey through six of the most popular songs by legendary artist Roy Orbison, as well as the West Coast premiere of their latest work, "S’epanouir."

Thrill seekers will be drawn to the Spectacle Series, which opens with MOMIX reMIX, with two performances that feature the very best of more that 30 years of MOMIX creations, combining unimaginable feats with powerful grace and creating scenes of dream-like splendor.

The series continues with MarchFourth Marching Band as stilt-walkers, unicyclists, fire eaters, puppets, flag twirlers, clown antics, acrobatics and more accompany this big band that consists of a 12-piece horn section, a 10-piece drum/percussion corps and is anchored by electric bass.

The series ends with Jack Hanna’s "Into the Wild Live!" Hanna introduces the audience to a variety of his wild furry and feathered friends as he shares his extensive knowledge of wild animals, enthusiasm for wildlife conservation, humorous tales and fascinating footage of his worldwide journeys.

As previously announced, the Carpenter Center is taking over presenting responsibilities from the Long Beach Community Concert Association (LBCCA). The Carpenter Center’s newly named Sunday Afternoon Concert Series begins with Igudesman & Joo, the classically trained violinist and pianist who have taken the world by storm with their hilarious theatrical shows – combining comedy with classical music and popular culture.

Next up is the Grammy-nominated Linda Tillery and the Cultural Heritage Choir, a percussion-driven vocal ensemble with strong Caribbean and Deep South influences that has been performing together since 1992.

The series continues with "Swinging with the Big Band," an afternoon of Big Band swing featuring the Gene Krupa Tribute Band, Mary Lou Metzger, String of Pearls and the Demarche Sisters.

Rounding out the season is Susan Egan’s "The Belle of Broadway." Egan’s Broadway credits include the title role in "Thoroughly Modern Millie," the longest running Sally Bowles in "Cabaret," and the original Belle in "Beauty and the Beast."

To complete the season lineup, the Center is also presenting an entertaining mix of non-series events. First up is Grammy Award-winning a cappella vocal ensemble Sweet Honey in the Rock.

Next is the return of last season’s popular Zoppé Italian Family Circus. Following that, master DJ and producer Paul Oakenfold teams up with CSULB’s Bob Cole Conservatory Orchestra to create an unforgettable music experience in three acts.

Then Metales M5, Mexico’s leading brass quintet, unites classical and world music, contemporary repertoire and pops arrangements in a program that breaks the barriers of musical genres.

For the holidays, patrons can enjoy the timeless tradition of big band swing with the Harry James Orchestra Holiday Concert. Next up is "In Conversation:" legendary musician Lou Reed and producer Bob Ezrin, presented in conjunction with the world premiere of Lou Reed’s Ambisonic 3-D soundscape Metal Machine Trio: The Creation of The Universe – an update of his 1975 album Metal Machine Music – at the University Art Museum at CSULB.

The next Carpenter Center stage event is "An Evening with Azar Nafisi," the author of the national bestseller "Reading Lolita in Tehran: A Memoir in Books" – which electrified readers with its incisive exploration of the transformative powers of fiction in a world of tyranny. Nafisi takes audiences on a journey inside a repressed culture, speaking out against authoritarianism and censorship.

Following that is "An Evening with the T.S. Monk Sextet," offering jazz that’s both smooth and funky and for St. Patrick’s Day, "An Evening with Solas," proclaimed as the most popular and exciting Celtic band to ever emerge from the United States.

Patrons who subscribe to one of the five subscription series get the best seats in the house, as well as numerous benefits – from significant discounts on single tickets to free parking for all subscribed events. A 2011-12 advance priority subscription order form is available online at CarpenterArts.org.

The Wit and Wisdom Series three-event subscription is $99, the Dance Series three-event subscription is $99, the Spectacle Series three-event subscription is $79, the Cabaret Series four-event subscription ranges from $136-$282, and the Sunday Afternoon Concert Series four event subscription is $100.

Census stats to be examined

DOWNEY – A three-person committee is set to analyze data collected from the 2010 census that could be used to consider district boundary changes.

The committee includes senior planner David Blumenthal, civil engineer Ahmed Husain and assistant to the city manager Shannon DeLong, all employees of the city of Downey.

According to a plan approved by the City Council this week, "the committee will report to the City Council and recommend a process to view the information and consider possible district boundary changes."

"The process might include the suggestion for criterion on which district boundaries should be drawn, the creation of public information packets, a schedule of public review meetings and creation of a special district review committee," DeLong wrote in a report.

The city charter mandates that a committee review census results and make recommendations regarding city council district boundaries.

The committee should complete its review by May 1.

Virtual reality games a vital role in rehabilitation at Rancho

■ Virtual realty video games aiding patients in physical rehabilitation.

A Rancho patient plays virtual bowling on the Nintendo Wii. Virtual reality games are used to aid in patient therapy.

DOWNEY – Rancho Los Amigos National Rehabilitation Center clinicians are using virtual reality to reinvent the art and science of rehabilitation medicine at the world-renowned hospital.

"By having patients play virtual reality games, we are challenging and motivating them in unprecedented ways during their physical rehabilitation," says Bobbi Jean Tanberg, BS, COTA/L, ATP, program manager for a visionary Rancho team that is using many new methods to revolutionize rehabilitation. "The concept is simple…for our patients to have the best possible recovery, they need the most intense rehabilitation."

By allowing therapists to personalize virtual reality treatment based on each patient's interests, age and function level, Rancho has opened a new therapeutic world where patients happily engage in intense therapy for much longer periods than they would normally tolerate conventional therapies. They are getting better while they play.

"Because the virtual reality experiences have been specially tailored to provide maximum therapeutic benefit, the gains the patients are capable of making are simply amazing," says Rancho Chief Medical Officer Mindy Aisen, MD. "Based on our proven results, Rancho has made one of the largest commitments to virtual reality technology of any hospital in the nation."

Rancho is also pioneering a new standard for rehabilitation intensity.

"We believe our patients will have better clinical outcomes if they receive not just the traditional two or three hours of therapy a day, but at least four or five hours daily," Rancho Chief Executive Officer Jorge Orozco explains. "The more therapy they get in the shortest time period, the better their clinical outcomes will be."

Rancho created an easy-to-use Virtual Reality Center for therapy by installing commercially available gaming systems such as Nintendo Wii, PlayStation EyeToy and Xbox Kinect. "These gaming systems have been modified by faculty at USC's Viterbi School of Engineering to meet the special needs of our patients," says Dr. Aisen. "These virtual reality systems motivate people to properly do the movements necessary to recover as much ability as possible."

Clinical leadership is nothing new for Rancho. The hospital invented the framework of modern-day rehabilitation medicine in the 1960s and 1970s. Now Rancho is again leading the way.

"Rancho's Occupational, Physical and Recreation therapists are maximizing patient participation through the use of this exciting new capability, both in the hospital and in patients' homes," Bobbi Jean says. The patients who are currently using the Virtual Reality Center are from Rancho's Unified Stroke Service, ranging in age from 35 to 76 years old.

"The virtual reality platforms allow patients to work on thinking skills such as making choices and following directions," says Rancho Recreation Therapist Tim Taylor. "They work on balance while standing either on their own, with a front-wheeled walker, using a standing frame or while seated in their wheelchair. Patients work on motor skills with reaching and moving forward, backwards and side to side." They also learn to incorporate the side of their body most affected by their stroke or other conditions.

"Patients often forget they are playing a game, because they see an avatar or even an image of themselves that represents them in the virtual reality experience," Dr. Aisen says. "Many people have experienced this feeling of being 'in the game' when they play video games in an arcade or on a computer or mobile device. Now we are introducing this concept to the therapeutic environment."

Commercially available gaming systems make it possible for patients and families to continue to use this technology for further recovery in their home environment. "Family members also learn how they can include their loved one who is returning home from the hospital after rehabilitation in meaningful and fun activities at home," Bobbi Jean says. They are in essence continuing their rehabilitation program at home, while involving their family and having fun while doing it."

The Rancho CEO says this is just the beginning of Rancho's rehabilitation revolution.

"This is one of many exciting new therapeutic approaches we're pioneering," Jorge says. "We are focused on creating better patient outcomes and a better patient experience as we invent the future of rehabilitation right here in Downey. Because at Rancho Los Amigos National Rehabilitation Center, the horizons are virtually unlimited."

Recent disasters raise interest in water barrels

■ More than 700 water barrels donated by Coca-Cola distributed to residents.

By Mark Sauter,
City of Downey

Volunteers helped distribute more than 700 barrels two weeks ago. Future giveaways are planned, with dates to be determined.

DOWNEY – The Downey Emergency Preparedness Committee and CERT volunteers, with considerable assistance from the Downey Fire and Police Explorers and the Warren High School Red Cross Club, distributed more than 700 free plastic, food-grade barrels for emergency water storage on March 12.

The event was the fifth barrel distribution event since last summer.

The barrels were donated by the Downey Coca-Cola facility. Over 3,000 water barrels have been distributed to the community since this program was started.

Storage of an ample supply of fresh water is one of the most important actions community members can take as they prepare for an emergency.

One staff member noted there were more cars in line for this event at 8 a.m. than at any previous event. The increased interest was attributed to the recent disasters and supply shortages in New Zealand and Japan.

Despite the large number of cars in line, the volunteers' efficient efforts enabled them to nearly eliminate the wait time for community members by mid-morning. The last barrel was distributed at 10:45 a.m.

News agencies have reported fresh water has been in short supply after the disasters in New Zealand and Japan. Experts recommend each person should store a minimum of 3-7 gallons of water for emergency use. Additional water should be stored for pets.

Each barrel is cleaned and rinsed by Coca-Cola staff members before delivery to the distribution site by Coca-Cola trucks and drivers. The barrels vary in size from 15-55 gallons. The exact quantity of each size of barrel varies for each event. A special instructional label is attached to each barrel.

Details for future distribution events will be carried in The Downey Patriot and the City website downeyca.org.

CENSUS: Vacancy rate at 4.7 percent citywide.

and more user-friendly than in decades past, also recorded housing occupancy around the city. In Downey, the amount of housing units, nearly 34,700 in 2000, increased to 35,601 units. However, amid the growth, the vacancy rate is higher than in previous years.

Today, more than 1,600 housing units remain empty across the city. The vacancy percentage is now 4.7 percent, the highest figure since 1990.

Marquez ensures that Downey is not the only city with housing woes as the state continues to recover from a deep economic recession.

"It's a pattern with a lot of cities and we're not immune to it," Marquez said. "We've lost families due to this mortgage crisis. This year, the city projects to lose $900,000 in property tax because of the housing bust."

Nonetheless, Marquez said the Census data will help the city in many regards including matters of redistricting and the allocation of federal funds.

"People need to understand that the Census information is very important," Marquez said. "The Census is a big thing for us and we'll be looking at the numbers closely."

On Tuesday, the City Council voted to approve a small Census Data Technical Committee made up of staff members that will review the Census information and make recommendations based upon the data.

'Homecoming' to honor Vietnam vets

WHITTIER – A celebration in honor of Vietnam veterans will be held Sunday at the California High School football stadium from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Coordinated by Rep. Linda Sanchez, the event is "intended to commemorate the day when the last U.S. combat troops completed their service and left Vietnam."

"When our troops returned from Vietnam after honorably serving our country, too many of them never received a proper homecoming," said Sanchez, a member of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee. "Many returning veterans faced hostility, harsh ridicule and criticism from the American public. We owe it to these veterans to honor them for the dedicated service to our country."

Engineering student earns award

LONG BEACH – Ellen Skow, a senior mechanical engineering major at Cal State Long Beach (CSULB), has received the Outstanding Engineering Student Award from the Orange County Engineering Council (OCEC). Candidates were engineering majors from all universities in Southern California.

"This is a great honor for her, the Mechanical Aerospace and Engineering (MAE) Department, the College of Engineering and Cal State Long Beach to be recognized among the outstanding engineering students from all universities in Southern California by a prestigious organization such as OCEC," said Jalal Torabzadeh, professor, advisor and vice chair of the MAE Department at CSULB who also sponsored Skow on behalf of the Society of Petroleum Engineers.

"I was honored to receive the Outstanding Student Award from OCEC. It is gratifying to be recognized for the things I have done as an undergrad at Cal State Long Beach, but I do the extracurricular work because I am interested in learning more about the topic or I care about it," said Skow. "I stay motivated in the classroom by remembering my goals, remembering other problems that I have overcome in the past, and remembering that there is a whole world out there. So, it is okay to let little things go in order to focus on something more important."

Expected to graduate in May, Skow is a President's Scholar with a 3.9 grade point average. She has been on the President's and Dean's Honor lists several semesters. She is the recipient of several scholarships, including those from the Society of Women Engineers (SWE), Boeing, and British Petroleum.

Skow is currently an intern with the Boeing Company involved with stress analysis of 787 Dreamliner floor panels and improving training efficiency through production of training and procedural documentation. On campus, she was an active member of CSULB California Launch Vehicle Education Initiatives (CALVEIN), the Rocket Project, in 2008-09.

Skow was an acoustic engineering research intern with German Academic Exchange Service in summer 2009. During her stay in Berlin, she was involved in designing and conducting experiments, developing a MATLAB script to convert test data, performing modal analysis of systems using Diamond toolbox, and producing an instructional manual on the use of toolbox for modal analysis.

Skow was the President of CSULB SWE Chapter last year and a co-organizer of Women Engineers at the Beach for more than 300 middle and high school girls, promoting engineering and encouraging women to become engineers. Also as president, she increased collaboration with on- and off-campus groups to improve and initiate new events and increased SWE active membership by 65 percent.

She is currently serving as vice president of Tau Beta Pi (engineering honor society) and as secretary for Pi Tau Sigma (mechanical engineering honor society) chapters at CSULB. She is also involved with several other organizations including the College of Engineering Associated Engineering Student Body Board of Directors, Brass Ensemble (a French honor society), and Concert Band (a French honor group) and campus residential halls. She is also a volunteer for many community services, including First Congressional Church of Long Beach, Children's Hospital and homeless centers.

Students help build campus garden

DOWNEY – Students from Downey High School's construction technology class visited Gallatin Elementary School on March 10 where they spent an entire day working with kindergartners on a campus garden.

The kindergarteners worked alongside the high school students to get the plants and beds ready for the new Gallatin Garden.

The students were joined by Downey High principal Tom Houts, botany teacher Greg Pittenger and construction technology teacher Vince Appel.

Superintendent Dr. Wendy Doty also paid a visit and said "she was pleased to see that the knowledge the students are learning from their classroom is being applied to real world situations."

Downey Rotary Club and Warren High School's Interact Club partnered to paint a house last Saturday. More than 30 volunteers helped spruce up the home. "The outcome was beautiful and much appreciated by the family and friends," said Downey Rotary president Ingrid Martin. [Editor's note: This item ran last week but with the incorrect photo.
