SHARED STORIES: THE TIES THAT BIND

Japanese New Year

Nobuyo Avery grew up in Manchuria before World War II, and she describes the importance of the New Year in Asian culture. It is a time of cleaning, clearing out, and "opening a new book." Readers will notice that common household activities were carried out under strikingly different circumstances in Manchuria at that time. Shared Stories is a weekly column featuring articles by participants in a writing class at the Norwalk Senior Center. Bonnie Mansell is the instructor for this free class offered through the Cerritos College Adult Education Program. Curated by Carol Kearns

By Nobuyo Avery

Living here in this country for over fifty years, I should be used to the celebrations and excitement at Christmas, but to me the New Year's Day celebration is more meaningful. The beginning of the New Year means opening a new book. It is the most important start line. Don't you agree?

This is the way my mother kept the traditional New Year's Day celebration while we five children were growing up. My memory goes back to our old home in Hoten, Manchuria, which today is Shenyang, China, where we lived from 1932 to 1947. We are a Japanese family, but my father's business took us to Manchuria for fifteen years.

The winter break for school usually began a week or so before December 31st and lasted until January 7th or so. I still have a hard time getting used to going back to school or to work on the second day or third day of the typhoons in recorded history. new year.

We children, except our brothers, helped Mom with cleaning the house Manalili visited family in the inside and out, getting rid of the things that were old and no longer needed, Philippines over the summer and and washing dirty windows, doors, and floors.

Mother started cooking the New Year's traditional dishes - vegetables cooked with beef or chicken meat, fish with head attached, dried small fish cooked sweet, sweet black beans, colored hardboiled eggs with a face and body cut to look like yakkosan (a samurai), blue or green colored, and mashed sweet potatoes with chestnuts, to name the few.

I must admire and give credit to Mother who worked so hard to have everything ready and arranged, colorfully decorated, in ojyuu (stackable dishes) and special plates when we got up on New Year's Day. She was not to cook for three days except ozoni.

She not only prepared special food, but also she set out our clean or new clothes to wear on that day. It was customary that we bathed and cleansed our bodies the night before. On December 31st, our family stayed up until midnight, we ate soba, the traditional New Year's Eve buckwheat noodles, and heard the one hundred one New Year's Eve bells before we went to bed.

On New Year's Day, we were all dressed up, sitting at the table, and greeting each other "Happy New Year". Mother had a warm sumi, charcoal in the hibachi heater, ready in the dining room beside the table and we cooked the mochi on the heater. The typical New Year's Day breakfast is ozoni, tasty clear soup with rice cakes that were broiled over the charcoal and added to the soup. We stuffed ourselves with the tasty dishes that Mom cooked for many hours and had a great time.

The post office would hold the New Year's Day greeting postcards until • Barbara Lai, a language therapist January 1st and deliver them on that day. It is customary to write the New for DUSD, honored with Human Year's greeting cards and exchange the news among friends, relatives, and acquaintances. It is similar to the Christmas cards you write.

In general there are New Year's Day decorations. Outside the gate or door, people place a pair of decorative pine, bamboo and plum trees. Inside the house in the rooms they place small decorative mochi or hard rice cakes made by pounding steamed sticky rice and a leaf. Today these decorations are already made and sold for easy access. It is also traditional to go to a shrine and people promise God what they hope to accomplish in the New

Today we have the TV New Year's Eve program, kouhaku singing contest. It lasts for five hours before midnight. The selected popular singers are teamed up as females and males, they compete in solo or group performances. The audiences, TV listeners and special judges decide the winners. The White men's team has been the first place winner for a few years. Most of the family watch this show.

Do I still follow the traditions? I tried to do some but not always. This year on December 31st I came home sick with a cold from visiting the family in Virginia. I washed all dirty clothes but had no energy to clean the house or to cook food. Carl and I ate typical American food with our oldest son's family on January 1st. My niece cooked and treated me to the traditional dishes on January 2nd.

There are many Japanese families here in California who celebrate the New Year's Day in traditional ways. One year I might surprise myself by celebrating the Oshoogatsu (New Year) in traditional ways.

Students pack 25K meals for typhoon victims

 Local students spend Saturday packing and assembling meals for families in Philippines.

DOWNEY - Hundreds of students gave up their Saturday on Jan. 31 to pack approximately 25,000 meals for hungry families in the Philippines still struggling to recover from a deadly 2013 typhoon.

The entire event was coordinated by KIWIN'S, a youth service club sponsored by Kiwanis. The service initiative was inspired by KIWIN'S lieutenant governor Karina Gonzalez and Philippines project chair Liz Manalili, both seniors at Downey High School.

The goal was to help the families Bohol, Philippines and other towns that were affected by 2013's Typhoon Haiyan, one of the largest moved to get their fellow KIWIN'S involved in helping the children of the Philippines. Seven different KIWN'S clubs from Los Angeles County got involved in raising funds for this project and were able to raise close to $6,000.

The project is made up of three phases: the first is to feed the children by providing food for school feeding programs; the second is to give children the tools to succeed by sending them tsinelas (sandals), health kits, and school supplies; the third phase is to provide a brighter future by sponsoring a child through a pen-pal program where KIWIN'S write to an elementary school student and give them encouragement.

"It was great seeing so many students from different schools and backgrounds come together to complete phase one of the project and to know that we made a difference in the lives of children whose lives were affected by natural disasters in the Philippines," said Liz.

The project would not have been accomplished without the help of Griffiths and Sussman Middle school Builders Clubs who are also sponsored by Kiwanis.

Anyone interested in supporting the project via donation can contact Karina Gonzalez at diamondltg1415@gmail.com.

Don Cook passes away at 90

DOWNEY -Donald (Don) Cook, a Downey resident for more than 60 years, passed away peacefully at his home Feb. 3.

Although in his 90th year, Cook had never really retired from his local printing business, Edon Printing.

At the time of his death, he was president of the Downey Exchange Club which he helped found 35 years ago. He also served on the board of directors of the Downey Exchange Club Child Abuse Prevention Center.

Cook also volunteered as an after-school program teacher's aide in local elementary schools and at Rancho Los Amigos hospital.

He was born Sept. 28, 1924 in Franklin, Indiana. He was raised on his family's farm until World War II.

As a farm family member he was exempt from the military draft, but Cook did not want to be the only man who didn't serve, so he convinced his father to "release" him and enlisted in the U.S. Navy.

While in Navy basic training at Great Lakes Naval Base, Cook contracted rheumatic fever. The Navy transferred him to the Naval Hospital in Corona, Calif. for what was to be a long term convalescence. Cook often related a story of his Navy doctor telling him as a rheumatic fever survivor he couldn't expect to live much beyond 40.

Stationed at Terminal Island, Long Beach, Cook assisted the base chaplain to publish his newsletter. This introduction to printing led to a lifetime career.

Cook was preceded in death by his wife, Jeanne, and brother, Francis Cook. He's survived by his sister, Jean Jewell, and six nieces and nephews.

Services at the Riverside National Cemetery are pending. Donations to the Downey Exchange Club Child Abuse Prevention Center in lieu of flowers is requested.

REMEMBERING HUELL HOWSER

• Journalist's folksy storytelling and knack for digging out hidden treasures is missed.

By Mina Anne Chudilowsky Contributor

Huell Howser died on Jan. 6, 2013. He was 67.

He started out with a 15-minute had programs called "California's Gold," "Visiting," "Road Trip" and "California Green."

Do you remember the woman who crocheted tablecloths from the new experiences and discoveries. I twine that was tied around her daily L.A. Times newspaper, or the tiny dog who retrieved the paper, or the family who made and sold peach cobbler, or the old man who was reunited with the elephant that he had trained and donated to the San Diego Wild Animal Park?

Huell Howser taught us a lot of local history, and he went to many ethnic food venues and introduced us to areas that we may have thought were unsafe to visit.

His series on the California missions augmented the fourth grade class curriculum and gave us an indepth look at the Spanish influence on early California.

I have been to Morro Bay many times, but Morro Rock is not open to the public. I got to go up there with Huell and a ranger via his "California Gold" program.

He and a ranger took us up into the back country of Yosemite, and also the grueling climb up Half Dome. He also showed us the fire fall from Glacier Point which and Union Station from Huell. hasn't occurred since 1968. LETHAL REJECTION: Will the Supreme Court's lethal rejection review kill the death penalty?

 ${\it This story was originally published by ProPublica}.$

Last week, the Supreme Court put three executions in Oklahoma on hold as it reviews the constitutionality of the state's death penalty protocol.

If the nation's top court strikes down Oklahoma's lethal injection procedure, what would it mean for the death penalty? We've asked the experts what you need to know.

What exactly is the Supreme Court reviewing?

The court is assessing Oklahoma's use of the drug midazolam, a sedative used in its three-drug lethal injection protocol. According to the Death Penalty Information Center, five states have used midazolam for their executions, and at least five other states have proposed using it.

In the wake of several botched executions in 2014 involving the drug, a group of death row inmates in Oklahoma filed a petition challenging the efficacy of midazolam to mitigate pain, which they claim would render the state's executions in violation of the Eighth Amendment's protection against "cruel and unusual" punishment.

"[Midazolam] doesn't guarantee that the prisoners will be insensate throughout the execution," said Eighth Amendment expert Megan McCracken from U.C. Berkeley School of Law's Death Penalty Clinic.

Legal experts are not the only ones with concerns about Oklahoma's drug protocol. Several anesthesiologists have expressed concern about using midazolam for executions. The drug is typically used in surgical procedures to sedate patients before they receive anesthesia. To sedate an average adult in surgery, a dose of midazolam is normally no more than 2 milligrams. State executioners, however, administer the drug in much greater quantities. During recent executions, about 500 milligrams have been used.

Many medical experts have noted that little is known about how the body

"We don't know the effects of 500 milligrams of midazolam," said Dr. David Waisel, an anesthesiologist at the Boston Children's Hospital, an affiliate of Harvard Medical School. "We don't study it, and we don't use it clinically. They are experimenting."

Why did the Supreme Court agree to consider a challenge to lethal injection now?

The lethal injection landscape has been fraught with issues since 2011, when Hospira, the only American manufacturer of a key lethal injection drug, stopped its production in the midst of an international campaign by capital punishment opponents. The company's decision set off a scramble to find another supplier and ultimately another drug.

In late 2013, Florida became the first state to execute an individual using midazolam, but it wasn't until April 2014 that concerns about midazolam became widespread. That month, Oklahoma botched the execution of prisoner Clayton Lockett. Despite receiving an injection of midazolam, Lockett groaned and writhed on the gurney for about 40 minutes until his death, witnesses reported.

"I think the Supreme Court would prefer not to have to get involved in the details of executions, but felt compelled to because of what happened last year," said Richard Dieter, executive director of the Death Penalty Information Center. "Something went really wrong, and somebody's got to monitor this thing or states will keep repeating it."

The Supreme Court is expected to hear the Oklahoma prisoners' case in April and make a final ruling by July. According to the Death Penalty Information Center, midazolam was used for at least 11 of 35 executions in

Is this the first time that the Supreme Court has weighed in on lethal injection?

No. The last time the court weighed in was seven years ago, when it upheld Kentucky's lethal injection protocol in the case Baze v. Rees.

According to McCracken, it's critical to look at what has changed since then. "In 2008, all of the states were using a very similar protocol--all the states were using the same three drugs," McCracken said. "Because some pharmaceutical companies have made their drugs unavailable for executions, the states have been changing their methods."

McCracken considers the botched executions a "consequence of using untested, untried combinations."

What happens if the court strikes down the lethal injection method?

It's possible that midazolam would no longer be used. Other drugs might Friendships take its place or Oklahoma might decide to use a single-drug protocol in place of the current three-drug cocktail.

"I don't think that the death penalty is going anywhere," said Michael Rushford, president of the Criminal Justice Legal Foundation.

Even if the court limits the use of lethal injection and states continue to face difficulty getting approved drugs, there are other methods that prisons could employ. Virginia lawmakers have already discussed bringing back the electric chair when the approved drugs are not readily available. Wyoming lawmakers have proposed allowing firing squads.

Death penalty experts doubt that such methods would become the primary protocol for execution. "States changed from hanging to electric chair because it was a modern, supposedly painless method of execution," said Dieter of the Death Penalty Information Center. "There has been a continuous attempt to make executions appear more palatable, humane, and modern."

Could this be the beginning of a larger trend moving away from the death penalty?

Not really. "The Supreme Court position is that if the death penalty is constitutional, some method of execution will be allowed," Dieter said. "But you have to try to do the best. You have to minimize the harm. You can't just use any drug that's on the shelf. It has to be something reputable that stands up to scrutiny. [The Supreme Court] is not going to narrow it so much that it makes it impossible."

The rate of executions across the United States, however, has decreased markedly over the past decade. Ten years ago 60 inmates were executed. In 2014, there were 35. Among the 32 states that allow the death penalty, only seven had executions in the past year.

"In many places in the U.S., the death penalty is at best a symbolic gesture," said Austin Sarat, Amherst professor and author of "Gruesome Spectacles: Botched Executions and America's Death Penalty".

Regardless of this downward trend, more than 3,000 people remain on Dear Editor: death row in the United States.

Congress stalls as evidence of fracking harm mounts

By Sharon Guynup

Last month, the Senate voted for the first time on closing a dangerous loophole in the Clean Water and Safe Drinking Water Acts. The "Halliburton" one-third of this water/chemical/sand mix flows back to the surface, bringing loophole" allows oil and gas drillers to inject hazardous chemicals into the ground during fracking operations—without revealing the content of their chemical cocktail. The vote failed 35-63.

This comes at a time when evidence of health and environmental damage caused by fracking is growing.

The U.S. is amidst an unprecedented drilling boom, spurred by hydraulic fracturing which uses pressurized water, sand, and a secret mix of chemicals month, another investigation found that untold amounts of fracking and to shatter shale bedrock, releasing deep-earth natural gas and oil deposits.

Some 15 million Americans now live within a mile of these operations, which are fast transforming America's pristine rural landscapes into industrialized, polluted, scarred drilling zones.

From the start, those living near fracking sites reported unbreathable air, tainted drinking water, livestock deaths, unlined wastewater pits, and drilling accidents. Many suffer from similar symptoms, including severe headaches, skin rashes, lesions that won't heal, blackouts, seizures, neurological problems, deafness, heart problems, and nerve damage.

New research documents other, insidious effects: many fracking chemicals disrupt the body's hormonal messaging system. One study showed that infinitesimal doses of 24 chemicals tested at fracking spill sites in Garfield County, Colorado, can disrupt endocrine functions.

At least 130 fracking chemicals are known "hormone disruptors" that interfere with growth; alter brain development, reasoning and memory; increase breast cancer risk; alter sperm; and limit the ability to fight disease. The unborn, infants, and young children are particularly at risk: exposure can impede gene-controlled signaling systems that guide development. Pregnant women living near drill sites face higher risk of miscarriage or of bearing a child with birth defects.

The Concerned Health Professionals of New York say there is "no evidence that fracking can be practiced in a manner that does not threaten human health."

While the fracking industry claims groundwater is unaffected, these companies are acutely aware that wells routinely leak. Schlumberger, one of the world's largest frack firms, estimated in 2003 that five percent of wells leak immediately, while 60 percent leak within 30 years.

And accidents happen. Pipes and cement casings crack. Tanks and wastewater pits overflow, equipment malfunctions, and valves break or are

In January, 4 million gallons of brine, oil, and frack residue leaked in Marmon, South Dakota, contaminating the Missouri River. It's a common occurrence. In 2012, companies self-reported 15.6 million gallons of spilled some states don't log the size of accidents.

It takes up to 5 million gallons of freshwater to frack a single well. About along heavy metals like lead and arsenic. Some of that toxic wastewater is injected into deep storage wells—causing earthquakes in Ohio, Oklahoma and Texas—or is treated and recycled for crop irrigation. With so many chemicals involved, it's impossible for conventional water treatment plants to adequately clean it. Truckers sometimes illegally dump it on roads, in woods Dear Editor: or streams—which prompted a recent Congressional investigation. This drilling wastewater has been illegally injected into California's aquifers at 170 history! sites—3 billion gallons were dumped into just nine disposal wells.

Under industry pressure, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) abandoned fracking-related contamination investigations in Wyoming, Texas, and Pennsylvania—despite disturbing levels of diesel, benzene (a carcinogen), arsenic (linked to prostate, lung, skin and liver cancers), heavy metals, and other chemicals in groundwater.

Treating patients exposed to drilling chemicals is nearly impossible since the Halliburton loophole prevents anyone from identifying which chemicals they've been exposed to. When families are sickened and sue, industry settlements include non-disclosure agreements that prohibit them from discussing their experiences.

These gag orders, in combination with industry secrecy and government inaction continue to shackle scientific study of fracking and limit public awareness. Release of EPA's in-depth fracking report has been delayed until 2016, even as increasing numbers of doctors and scientists urgently call for comprehensive studies of health impacts and long-term risks.

Since its inception, the fracking industry has skirted federal clean water laws. It's time Congress closed the Halliburton loophole, EPA released data on fracking's health and ecological harm, and that we, as a nation, made energy choices that don't further harm our planet—or our health.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR:

Heroism

Dear Editor:

Regarding Frank Kearns' Feb. 6 letter. It seems as if he is devaluing the service of those men who served in Iraq and Afghanistan because he believes that those wars were wrong.

I do not know if Mr. Kearns ever served but if he had then he would remember that when one takes the oath to defend the United States, there is not a provision which allows one to pick and choose which action he believes to be right or wrong.

He also says that "we should learn from our own history that sometimes the heroes are those who have the courage to stand up and say no." I am just wondering who he considers those heroes to be?

From the Revolutionary War forward, there have always been those who did not believe in the action for various reasons but I never considered them heroes.

Ed Romero

Dr. Seuss said, "Be who you are and say what you feel; because those who mind don't matter and those who matter don't mind."

Another helpful quote is, "An honest answer is a sign of true friendship." (Proverbs 24:26)

When we live this in our everyday life we learn to be ourselves and not go along with the wrong crowd who bully, shame and hurt others just to be accepted. Friendships have the power to help kids and other people to be strong. If you're a kid without siblings, and your parents are sometimes too busy, good friendships are very important, because you can talk to your friends, they want to listen to you when you have a problem and want to laugh with you, and not at you.

When I first joined the Boy Scouts of America, there were some tasks that were difficult for me and became even more difficult as I went up the ranks. For example: learning to tie complex knots and lashing, compass readings in different terrain, my backpack got heavier (though I didn't). I helped dig a drainage ditch in Red Rock Canyon for the water to bypass a road.

My Grandpa always told me, "Never give up, work hard, do your best, and keep a smile on your face." Because I respect my grandpa I followed his motto; then the tasks got easier.

I'm proud of what I have accomplished. When new Scouts come into our troop I try my best to lead by example. We all help each other so the tasks/ requirements won't be too difficult. Our friendships are important. Caleb J. Gomez

Lynching charge

In the Crime Report for activities on Feb. 1, there is an entry describing lynching. In our culture, we usually think of this as something other than what the state of California describes it as. I feel that this needs to be addressed before others misunderstand the police action.

Penal Code 405a provides the definition: "The taking by means of a riot of any person from the lawful custody of any peace officer is a lynching."

Penal Codes 504a and 504b deal with "attempted lynching" where everyone attempting to cause lynching when not successful in the attempt can be arrested.

Political priorities

What am I missing? Our President is over in India promoting global warming while New York City is experiencing the worst snowstorm in Now they're predicting glaciers melting, oceans rising, etc. when they can't accurately predict rain and snow a few days ahead, much less 20 or 30 years ahead. Guess he has no other issue for his legacy.

Finally gas prices have gone down, not to the $1.86 a gallon when Obama took office, but now the feds and state want to tax it more. Those who could afford to buy a hybrid car use our highways, but don't have to pay for them, only the cars that use gasoline. Kind of reminds me of the recent tax put on Downey homeowners for our schools, even though 39 percent of the students don't live in Downey. Downey schools encourage this so as to get ADA, but we homeowners pay for it for 30 years. The state of California taxes should support the schools equally.

Another thing that's worrisome -- from the governor down to state senators and Assemblymen are sworn to uphold the California constitution. It's one of three things: 1.) They didn't read it; 2.) They didn't understand it; or 3.) They weren't honest and decided not to pay attention to it.

Not only do they not enforce it, just recently 38 percent of Hispanics took their driving test in Spanish and many did not have to take a driving test. Did you have to take the driving test when you got your first driving license? Of course, we only had to open four new DMVs and hire 1,000 new employees

But then, the state is flush with extra money, our confiscated money. Elsa Van Leuven

How to win the war with OPEC

By J. Michael Barrett

The national average for a gallon of gasoline is quickly approaching just $2. Drivers can mostly thank the highest level of domestic oil production in oil, fracking fluid, wastewater and other liquids—an underestimate since four decades -- over 9 million barrels per day -- for these low prices. With American energy production booming and gas prices plummeting, it's difficult to imagine a return to the shortages that characterized the 1973 Arab oil embargo. But Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and the rest of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) have recently launched a price war to force Americans back to a dependency on foreign energy. They are being aided by an outdated U.S. policy prohibiting the export of domestic crude oil.

The best way for American legislators to combat OPEC's aggression is to lift this ban. Scrapping this outdated policy will secure American progress towards energy independence.

It's easy to see why OPEC is scared. Innovative extraction techniques like hydraulic fracturing and horizontal drilling have boosted U.S. oil production by 4 million barrels per day in just the last six years. Consequently, U.S. demand for OPEC oil has dropped to its lowest level since the Reagan administration.

OPEC can't stand to see one of its biggest customers move toward energy independence. But the cartel might not be able to endure the self-inflicted wounds caused by rock bottom oil prices for very long. Of OPEC's 12 member countries, only Qatar can balance its budget with prices at $60 per barrel. Six OPEC members need the price to stay above $100 to avoid fiscal ruin.

By contrast, most U.S. producers still make a profit below $60 per barrel. That's why, in late November, the governing board of OPEC decided not to cut oil production despite a global surplus of 2 million barrels per day. Instead, OPEC maintained its production levels to push prices down in hopes of driving American firms bankrupt. The cartel believes that American energy firms will break under pressure.

Congress can strengthen our domestic economy while countering these plans. It should lift the ban on crude oil exports. Domestic firms could then sell oil to the many overseas buyers eager to reduce their own energy dependence, thus reducing the power of OPEC to maintain a throttle on U.S. and global oil supplies. What's more, if U.S. producers are allowed to expand to foreign markets, they'll be able to compensate for lower oil prices with greater total sales.

Fortunately, the effort to repeal the ban is gaining traction. Texas congressman Joe Barton has introduced bipartisan legislation to lift it. However, some lawmakers argue that permitting crude exports might contract local oil supplies and push up the price paid by domestic drivers at the pump.

They needn't worry. In a new report, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office finds that allowing U.S. crude exports will actually save American drivers up to 10 cents per gallon of gasoline. The CBO explains that the price of gas depends "primarily on the world price of crude oil, which would decline slightly once lower-priced U.S. crudes were available in the international market."

If Congress lifts the ban, crude exports could add 300,000 jobs and $38 billion to the U.S. economy by 2020.

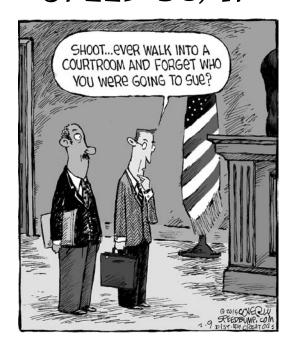

Congress should lift the ban on U.S. crude exports. Repealing this outdated law will lower energy prices, jumpstart the economy, and cement America's role in the global oil market while furthering collective independence from OPEC's oil-based price manipulations.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

U.S. News and World Report recently announced their winner for the best overall diet for 2015: the DASH (Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension) diet. Their panel of experts evaluated 35 diets, and the DASH diet has maintained the number one spot for five straight years. It beat out better-known and well-respected diets for its nutritional completeness, safety, prevention and control of diabetes, and promotion of heart health.

Note that the DASH diet had stiff competition from the excellent Weight Watchers diet, which won for the best weight loss diet, the easiest to follow, and the best commercial diet. I have long been a big proponent of Weight Watchers; it requires no special foods, provides support systems, and when followed has a great success rate. In the end, however, DASH won first place overall. Why?

The DASH diet is based on National Institute of Health studies, and was originally developed to help prevent and treat hypertension. Eating properly is critical, but exercising 30 minutes each day, not smoking, and drinking alcohol in moderation is included in the overall plan for blood pressure control. The plan has no tricks - just an emphasis on low salt, high fiber food, and plentiful fresh fruits and vegetables in a 2,000-3,100 calorie per day plan. It recommends either 2,300 mg of sodium in the standard diet, or 1,500 mg for those who are more susceptible to salt or who already most of your grain servings to get have high blood pressure.

It is simple, sensible, and cheap. There is a limit on high calorie saturated fat meats and sweets. The daily plan includes whole grains; fruit; vegetables; nuts, seeds or free or low-fat milk or milk products legumes; dairy; lean meats, fish and poultry. Fats make up about a quarter use lactase products or switch to of daily calories, spread over two or alternatives like almond milk. three servings.

What is the best way to convert a day, with just three ounces of lean from your current diet to the DASH meat (about the size of a deck of diet? The Mayo Clinic recommends that the transition be gradual, adding healthy food choices and replacing poor food choices while slowly cutting back on sodium. Increase your physical activity steadily as well; this will have a positive impact on both weight and blood pressure.

What do I find most interesting about the DASH diet? It follows the precepts that I've been recommending for years for weight loss, heart health, diabetes control and prevention, and general health. It's sensible, not based on a fad, and not extreme. It will improve your health, yet avoid exorbitant fees, special packaged foods, etc.

Here are some specific DASH diet, I encourage you to recommendations for getting started on the DASH diet. Make small changes over days and weeks, with the goal of incorporating them into your daily routine:

STUDY: 58 million Americans still exposed to secondhand smoke nonsmokers -- 58 million people -are still exposed to SHS, according to a new Vital Signs report from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Data from the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES) show that declines in exposure to SHS have been slower children, blacks, those who live in poverty, and those who live in rental housing. The report finds two in every five children aged three to 11 years are still exposed to SHS. The study assessed exposure using cotinine, a marker of SHS found in the blood.

"Secondhand smoke can kill. Too many Americans, and especially too many American children, are still seven in 10 black children -- are still exposed shows how much more we have to do to protect everyone from this preventable health hazard."

Additional key findings in the Vital Signs report include that:

Nearly half of black nonsmokers are exposed to SHS.

More than two in five nonsmokers who live below the poverty level are exposed to SHS.

More than one in three nonsmokers who live in rental housing are exposed to SHS.

The study used rental status as a way of identifying people who live in multiunit housing, which is an environment where the issue of SHS exposure is of particular concern. "About 80 million Americans live in multiunit housing, where secondhand smoke can seep into smoke-free units and shared areas from units where smoking occurs," said Brian King, Ph.D., acting deputy director for research translation in CDC's Office on Smoking and Health. "The potential of exposure in subsidized housing is especially

The report credits the overall decline in SHS exposure to several factors. To date, 26 states, the District of Columbia, and almost 700 cities have passed comprehensive smokefree laws prohibiting smoking in worksites, restaurants, and bars. These state and local laws currently and exposure remains higher among cover almost half the US population. In addition, a growing number of appears on the first Tuesday of the households have adopted voluntary smoke-free home rules, increasing from 43 percent in 1992-1993 to 83 percent in 2010-2011. Also, cigarette smoking has declined significantly in the last two decades and smoking around nonsmokers has become much less socially acceptable.

The Surgeon General has concluded that there is no safe level exposed to it," said CDC Director of exposure to SHS, which contains Tom Frieden, M.D., M.P.H. "That over 7,000 chemicals including 40 percent of children -- including about 70 that can cause cancer. It is a

Each year exposure to SHS causes more than 41,000 deaths from lung cancer and heart disease among non-smoking adults and 400 deaths from Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, as well as about $5.6 billion annually in lost productivity.

Vital Signs is a report that month as part of the CDC journal, Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. The report provides the latest data and information on key health indicators. These include cancer prevention, obesity, tobacco use, motor vehicle passenger safety, prescription drug overdose, HIV/ AIDS, alcohol use, health careassociated infections, cardiovascular health, teen pregnancy, and food

Congresswoman's statement on Black History Month

DOWNEY - Rep. Lucille Roybal-Allard released a video statement this week in honor of Black History Mnth.

Below is a copy of her statement: "Hello, I'm Congresswoman Lucille Roybal-Allard, representing California's 40th Congressional District.

"Every February, we as a nation come together to celebrate Black History Month and recognize the many contributions African Americans have made to the foundation and greatness of our country. African Americans continue to strengthen our country and to pave the way in all walks of life, including in public office, the military, health care, education, small businesses, and community-based organizations. "Among the many champions my constituents acknowledge from our 40th Congressional District is the late Juanita Tate. Juanita founded Concerned Citizens of South-Central Los Angeles, and successfully led efforts to bring affordable housing and new businesses to her South Los Angeles neighborhood. We also acknowledge small business owners like Vivian Bowers of South Los Angeles, who is leading efforts to create a Business Improvement District along Central Avenue – while continuing to operate her family's 40-year-old dry cleaning business. And we acknowledge community activists like Brenda Shockley, who has worked to revitalize South Los Angeles neighborhoods through her leadership roles in nonprofit organizations like Community Build and the Coalition for Responsible Community Development.

"While African Americans contribute and lead in many of our communities, the fact remains that there is still much work to do, including fighting for equal access at the ballot box.

"2015 marks 50 years since the passage of the historic Voting Rights Act of 1965. With the 2013 Supreme Court decision to invalidate a key section of the Voting Rights Act, governments with a history of racial discrimination no longer have to prove their new voting laws ensure access to the right to vote for all, regardless of race, skin color, or language. Many states have also passed controversial voter identification laws which severely burden many American citizens and make it harder for them to exercise their constitutional right to have a voice in our democracy.

"Rest assured, I will fight until Congress passes a renewed, revised, and strengthened Voting Rights Act that will once again ensure voting discrimination is not allowed in our country. I am also working with local community leaders to increase local voter turnout. And I recently joined several of my House colleagues on a new Outreach and Engagement Task Force. Our task force is developing a strategy to encourage all Americans to vote, by helping you to better understand the power of your vote and how it impacts policy decisions that affect every aspect of your life.

"So, as we celebrate Black History Month and reflect on the great achievements African Americans have made across the centuries, let us also rededicate ourselves to making America a more just and perfect union, full of opportunity for all who call this country their home. Thank you."

Bellflower community unites to clean up park

BELLFLOWER – More than 100 Bellflower Unified elementary and middle school students were joined by Bellflower Mayor Sonny R. Santa Ines, Bellflower Unified trustees Jerry Cleveland and Paul Helzer, Kiwanis Club members, teachers and parents to beautify Ruth Caruthers Park during a Jan. 30 community service project the students designed as a civic learning lesson.

The project, which ran from 8 a.m. to noon, was the brainchild of Woodruff Elementary Assistant Principal Holly Hennessy and arose from classroom lessons at Woodruff and a workshop on civic learning at Bellflower Middle School.

"It was amazing," Hennessy said. "Everyone, especially the kids, worked so hard to clean up Caruthers Park. In the end, it looked spectacular."

About 60 of the volunteers were sixth-graders in Woodruff Elementary School's engagement classes. They were joined by their teachers, about 30 students from Bellflower Middle School and their teachers, plus the mayor, board members, parents and Kiwanis Club members.

The team removed pine needles, leaves and trash from fitness areas, batting cages, playground equipment and a wading pool, scrubbed away graffiti, washed picnic tables, swept walkways, spread woodchips and created posters for park office windows at the 20-acre park.

Hennessy said she began designing the civics effort after Superintendent Dr. Brian Jacobs shared information with Bellflower elementary principals about the state Department of Education's 2014-15 Civic Learning Award for Public Elementary and Middle Schools.

Hennessy turned for help to Woodruff sixth-grade teacher Carlos Jimenez and to Bellflower Middle School history teachers Todd Davenport and Alison Kawashima, who coordinate an existing Civic Learning Initiative. Mayor Santa Ines visited Woodruff to discuss the city's history, strengths and attributes.

After learning about civic roles and responsibilities, the students

SPORTS BRIEFS: Downey wrestlers win CIF championship

• Downey defeats Santa Fe and Gabrielino in opening rounds before beating Millikan for title.

By Mark Fetter Contributor

The Downey High School wrestling team won the 2015 C.I.F. Southern Section Western Division dual meet championship after defeating top seeded San Marino in the final at Millikan High School last Saturday night, 33-32.

The Vikings were down 32-30 entering the final match when Rigoberto Garcia (174) clinched the victory for Downey with his 7-4 decision over Adrian Licon.

The Western Division consisted of eight league champions and eight at-large teams. Leagues represented included: the Almont League, Del Rio League, Mission Valley League, Moore League, Pioneer League, Rio Hondo League, San Gabriel Valley League and the Suburban League. Downey has now won four C.I.F. wrestling championships (2004, 2010, 2011 and 2015) and have been C.I.F. runner-up three times (2009, 2012 and 2014).

The dual meet started at 186 pounds when San Marino's Tino Maese won by technical fall and secured five team points. San Marino's Tino Lopez (110), Zander Silva (117) and Sebastian Velasquez (130) all won by decisions. San Marino's Julian Flores (136) won by Zander Wick (149).

After the loss at 186 pounds, Downey's Miguel Bravo (195) won second period. Downey held an 18-5 before finding the back of the net. lead after four matches.

San Marino defeated Lakewood 59-24 in the first round, John Glenn 49-18 in the second round, Warren 46-17 in the third round before falling to Downey in the final.

The Downey High School boys' soccer team lost a tough game to Paramount Monday night 2-1. With the loss, Downey is now 12-9-2 overall and 3-5-1 in San Gabriel Valley League play. With the win, Paramount is now 14-5-2 overall and 7-0-2 in league play.

Interestingly, four of Downey's five league losses have come against Paramount and Warren. The other league loss was a 2-1 defeat at Gahr pin as did fellow Titan teammate on 2/5. The Pirates and Bears are two of the area's best teams.

In the Downey-Paramount game, the Vikings took a 1-0 lead by forfeit, Immanuel Bravo won into halftime after Downey striker by pin at the 1:45 mark of the first Bryan Mojano scored the only goal period and heavyweight Angel Baez of the first half in the 38th minute. won by pin at the 2:45 mark of the Mojano's strike hit the crossbar

Downey hosted Dominguez (8-9-1, 4-5) on Wednesday (score unavailable at press time) in their league finale. Downey defeated Dominguez 5-2 in their first game on 1/27. With a win against Dominguez on Wednesday, Downey would claim the number three entry from the S.G.V.L. in the Division I playoff

The Warren High School girls' basketball team played Lynwood at Warren Tuesday night with the S.G.V.L. title on the line.

• Lorine Parks will read from "Persons of Interest" next Thursday at Stay Gallery.

By Carol Kearns Contributor

DOWNEY – Downey poet Lorine Parks will introduce her new book, "Persons of Interest," at February 19, 7:00 PM, at Stay Gallery. Parks is a prolific writer, inspiration.

Her poems span both time and place as she gives voice to such disparate figures as Ariadne from Greek mythology, a medieval peasant paying his tithe, a woman betrayed by an errant husband, and a priest ministering to inmates on death row. The tone of each piece shifts, sometimes reverent, sometimes humorous, sometimes horrifying, as Parks assumes each new perspective and voice.

Parks is a well-known figure service activities with the Rotary Club, Downey YMCA, Soroptimists, and the Downey Symphony, and for time for poetry and she sets aside several hours each morning to write.

While she is disciplined about using the mornings to revise and edit, she says the idea for a poem can occur anywhere - in the car, at the breakfast table, or while taking a bath. "I usually stop and write as much as I can while the moment is with me," she explains, "even if it means pulling the car over to the side of the road." When she is inspired, she writes as much as possible. "I don't ever try to harness perspective of the dog.

Current and historical events are also sources for Parks, and her well crafted pieces lead to unexpected and chilling places. In "Ali Monsoon" she gives voice to the thoughts she imagines the mind of a Palestinian suicide bomber. Chilling for a different reason is "the singing of the Titanic," a piece in which the crashing and crushing of the ship unfolds as orchestral music.

Balanced against these poems of imagination are writings that stem from Parks's heart and spirit. Women will recognize the grief as palpable in "the French call them love tips," a poem about the loss of a child. Some mothers will concur with the life lesson expressed in metaphor as a woman thinks of her mother while playing computer solitaire - "if it isn't going to be a winner / toss it don't waste your time don't settle." And both men and women will nod with understanding as the Old Woman considers her "exit" strategies - "she refuses to rot and go to mulch.... she'd rather be road kill / fully alive until hit / like the young men at Parks's first book, "Catalina Eddy" was published in 2012. This collection grew from the human tendency to personify our weather with human names and attributes - Mae Gray, June Gloom, Polar Flo. Parks imagined distinct personalities for each name, and together they became a "noir-ish" clan of mobsters and molls with their fierce hurricane relatives -Camille, Gustavo, and Ernesto.

"Catalina Eddy" grew from the culture and climate of southern California. Park's second collection, "Persons of Interest," spans the world and human history. Both books will be available during the

Larkin steps down as parade chairman

DOWNEY – Longtime volunteer Maria Larkin has retired from her post as chairman of the Downey Chamber of Commerce Christmas Parade committee.

Larkin chaired the committee for 14 years, starting in 2000.

She was instrumental in the "huge success of the parade year after year and her presence as a volunteer leader will be deeply missed," the chamber said in a statement.

"This is certainly the end of an era not only for the Chamber but for the committee."

Larkin's committee partner, longtime parade announcer Marsha Moode, has also announced that she will step down from her role in the parade.

Moode has sat alongside Los Angeles County Supervisor Don Knabe as co-anchors for the parade for the past 23 years. Moode also produced the filming of the parade with such notables as John Croshaw, Congressman Del M. Clawson and Broadway producer Joseph Culliton.

Larkin said her best parade memory was the last one, with people waving to her from the crowd as she rode down the streets of Downey Avenue for the last time.

Larkin said she also remembers the first Downey Chamber Christmas parade when her children were very small and "how excited they were to see the festivities."

The parade was previously put on by another service group, but when that organization decided they weren't going to continue with the parade, Larkin decided that was the time she needed to step up and take on this event.

"We thank Maria for her many years of success not only with the Parade Committee but also as past president of the Chamber Board," said Elizabeth Trombley, president of the Chamber board of directors. "Maria has been triumphant in every role she played at the Chamber as a volunteer."

Downey firefighters rescued a bird from the top of an 80-ft. palm tree on Monday, and officials now are hoping to reunite the pet with its owner.

Firefighters rescued the bird -- either a falcon or a hawk -- from a palm tree on Gallatin Road and turned it over to SEAACA. The bird was reported to be calm and in good health.

By coincidence, a local resident had earlier approached firefighters who were responding to a residential fire on Lubec Street. The man claimed his pet falcon had escaped from its enclosure and asked fire personnel if they had seen Officials are now hoping to reunite the bird with its owner. If the owner of the bird reads this, he is asked to contact SEAACA or the Downey Fire Department.

Cristina Garcia finalist for Rising Star Award

DOWNEY - EMILY's List, the nation's largest resource for women in politics, announced Wednesday that Assemblywoman Cristina Garcia is a 2015 nominee for its Gabrielle Giffords Rising Star Award.

Named in honor of former Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords, the Rising Star Award celebrates an extraordinary woman serving in state or local office.

The award honors women "who demonstrate the sort of commitment to community, dedication to women and families, and determination and civility that have been the highlights of former Rep. Gabrielle Giffords' career, in and out of office?

The first ever Rising Star Award was given to Georgia House Minority Leader Stacey Abrams in 2014.

"As a former educator, advocate for reform in her community, and mentor to other women considering running for political office, Cristina embodies the passion for community and dedication to working families that we need from our leaders," said Stephanie Schriock, President of EMILY's List. "The EMILY's List community - now more than three million members strong - is proud of her achievements as a local leader in California, and is thrilled to nominate her for this award."

A math teacher turned activist, Garcia has been an advocate for reform in her community previously plagued by municipal scandals. She's worked to increase transparency and fight corruption in the state government. Cristina has risen quickly to join the Democratic leadership team in the California Assembly. Used to being in a male dominated field, she realized that didn't need to be the case - she now actively recruits and mentors more women to run for the

The Gabrielle Giffords Rising Star Award winner will be chosen with community input. Online voting can be found at emilyslist.org.
