THURSDAY, OCT. 1

At 6:30 a.m., Downey Police Officers responded to 9036 Firestone regarding a burglary. An employee of Café-n-Stuff had arrived at the location and discovered that sometime during the night a burglar had smashed the front glass door of the business and made entry. The only loss at the time appeared to be the cash register. Investigators are working the case.

SATURDAY, OCT. 3

At 1:00 a.m., Downey Police Officers responded to Kaiser Hospital regarding a robbery. Officers arrived and contacted a 48-year Bellflower resident who had been riding his bicycle in the area of Paramount and Florence when his path was blocked by two men walking on the sidewalk. The two suspects stopped the victim and demanded the man's bike and punched him. During the incident, a vehicle stopped to see what was going on which scared off the suspects before they could obtain any loss. The victim then took himself to the hospital to seek treatment of minor injuries he received from the incident. Detectives are investigating.

At 1:00 p.m., Downey Police Officers responded to 7121 Firestone, Home Depot regarding a robbery. Upon their arrival, officers detained and later arrested a 23-year-old man for robbery, after he had entered the store, taken merchandise, and then exited the store failing to pay for it. When the suspect was contacted by store security, the suspect fought with them but was ultimately subdued. He was booked for robbery and transported to the Los Angeles County Jail.

At 10:30 p.m., Downey Police Officers responded to 7356 Stewart & Gray, The Glen bar, regarding a subject brandishing a weapon. Fireworks debate could head to voters again

CITY COUNCIL ROUNDUP: Fed up with illegal fireworks, Councilman Roger Brossmer requests study of ballot initiative.

By Eric Pierce

DOWNEY – Despite hefty fines and a stated zero-tolerance policy, illegal fireworks continue to explode over Downey every July, scaring pets and igniting trees and homes.

Councilman Roger Brossmer has

His solution is neither new nor without controversy.

At Tuesday's City Council meeting, Brossmer instructed staff to begin work on a ballot initiative that would allow residents to decide whether to prohibit all fireworks in

The election is guaranteed to be controversial, as non-profit organizations rely on firework sales as significant sources of revenues.

This past July 4, Downey police officers issued only 20 citations for illegal fireworks. Officials said it's difficult to catch perpretrators in the act, especially when illicit fireworks are exploding alongside "safe and sane" fireworks sold by community Illegal fireworks are suspected of sparking a house this summer at a Chaney Avenue home.

More information on the ballot initiative, including potential costs, will be presented to the council at a later date.

Downey Nissan

On a 4-1 vote, Downey city council members Tuesday night approved loaning Downey Nissan

$1.25 million so it can build a new larger facility at the corner of Firestone Boulevard and Old River School Road.

The $1.25 million loan will be repaid to the city over 12 years at an annual interest rate of 4.25%.

The city's loan is secured by the current Nissan dealership property, which will be held as collateral and secured by a promissory note and deed of trust.

Dealership owner Hutcherson said Downey Nissan has outgrown its current location at 7559 Firestone Blvd. The new location will more than double the car lot's size, with a larger service area, more room for vehicle displays, and modern accommodations.

Hutcherson said he also anticipates doubling his staff to about 160 employees.

City officials recommended that council members approve the loan, and suggested Downey could potentially lose the dealership without a deal.

"The potential relocation of Downey Nissan and total loss of revenue would be much more detrimental and undermine the City's delicate economic recovery and cause significant impact to services," community development director Aldo Schindler wrote in a staff report. "The City is making a significant commitment to maintain the economic momentum it has gained over the past 18 months."

Mayor Luis Marquez and Councilman Roger Brossmer called the loan "a no-brainer" and a way to keep a tax-generating car dealership from fleeing the city.

Mayor Pro Tem Alex Saab called the deal "a smart investment as a Councilman Sean Ashton cast the lone dissenting vote.

The council also authorized a $1 million grant application through the Community Development Block Grant program that, if successful, would push the total amount of public assistance to Downey Nissan to $2.25 million.

Construction of the new dealership is expected to start before Tim the end of this calendar year and conclude in 2016.

Shellyfield Parking

Frustrated by overflow parking from nearby apartment complexes clogging their streets, residents of Shellyfield Road convinced the City Council this week to create a preferential parking district, prohibiting early morning parking except for residents that live on the

The district makes it illegal to park on Shellyfield, between Cecilia and Muller streets just north of Stonewood Center, between 2-6 a.m. except for vehicles displaying a parking permit. To obtain a parking permit, the vehicle owner must reside on Shellyfield.

At Tuesday's City Council meeting, Shellyfield residents complained that residents of nearby apartment complexes routinely parked on their street.

The practice is not only annoying, they said, but also dangerous, as the cars make it difficult to turn onto Cecilia Street.

According to a survey turned in to the city, 33 of 36 households on the street approved the parking restrictions.

Q&A: Don Lamkin

Don Lamkin will have his first solo exhibit at Stay Gallery on Oct. 3. The event marks the gallery's three-year anniversary.

a part of his hometown community.

Educated in the Downey Unified School District, he went to Dixie College in Southern Utah before returning to Los Angeles to pursue a career as a firefighter. After attending Rio Hondo College and completing the Fire Science program, he was hired as a firefighter for the Santa Fe Springs Fire Department, where he served the community for 30 years.

Growing up playing sports in Downey was a big priority for Lamkin and he is still active, playing hockey in the LEAF League here in Southern California. He is also nationally ranked with AHRMA in their national Thruxton Cup motorcycle road racing

When it comes to the arts, Lamkin has no education or formal training but has always been interested in many forms of art, culture, and design. Although uncomfortable referring to himself as an artist, he has experimented with acrylic and water color painting, pen and ink art, graphite and pencil drawing, porcelain tile mosaic work, metal sculpture, wood carving, graphic design and architecture.

DOWNEY - Don Lamkin is a organizations has reinvigorated Downey native that is proud to still be Lamkin's passion and in the arts. His first solo exhibit opens at Stay Gallery on Oct. 23 at 7 p.m.

Q: Why is art and culture important

A: I think art and culture is important in Downey because it nurtures creativity and involvement in one's community. Cultivating creativity, especially in our youth, means fresh and vibrant ideas will help development and sustainability for our city. Being a destination for events featuring art and culture will not only motivate the best and brightest to stay here, but it will also be an invitation to quality visitors to play and stay in our city.

Q: What is your role in Downey's

A: I have always been interested, on a personal level, in art, design, and cultural activities. Five or so years ago, I found a Facebook page that had just started up inviting locals to join a group called the Downey Arts Coalition. I attended the first meeting and soon we had a small group discussing our desires to improve art and culture in our city. Soon after that, I was introduced to the Downey Art Vibe [the group that manages Stay Getting involved with the Downey Gallery folks and got involved with Arts Coalition and other local arts them as well. It didn't take long before there was a sizable number of people and culture scene are funding and interested in the arts.

Eventually, I found myself involved in leadership or support roles with just about every arts group in town, including DAC, DAV, Stay Gallery, the Downey Art League, and the Downey Museum of Art. In all of these organizations, I have promoted and implemented ideas and events.

Q: Why did you decided to 'Stay' in

A: Simply put, I love my hometown. For all but some time out of state for education and a short try at living in Orange County, I have been a Downey local. I choose to stay because I appreciate the people we have here. We have a sense of community and pride here that is very rare to find elsewhere. We know and care for our neighbors. We have a special situation where we have fantastic diversity yet still operate as Team Downey first and foremost. Our local police and fire departments are as good as it gets and our Downey Unified School District is producing unbelievably impressive kids that want to stay here and continue our trend of community improvement... and we are now finally getting to a point where we have dining, art, and entertainment choices right here within the city limits. What's not to love?

Q: Where is this arts movement

A: I actually see a nice future for our arts scene here in Downey. The constant challenges to a vibrant art involvement. We have a handful of very effective groups that have found ways to get the community interested and engaged. With modern day social media outlets, I think there is great opportunity to continue the outreach as well as creating funding sources to ensure sustainability in programming that will keep residents within city limits on weekends as the favored entertainment option.

Q: What is education's role in all of

A: I have personally seen the results of Downey Unified's interaction product of Downey public schools, I am so proud of today's Downey youth! I spent a couple of months on Downey Avenue late last year working on a afternoon, I was compelled to write a letter to the Downey Patriot about the positive behavior exhibited each day by these kids. Clearly, Downey Unified is doing something very right.

I have also been featured in Stay Gallery's youth initiative programming with the Downey Doodle-icious program which pairs community history along with art lessons for third graders. That really created a spark within these kids for art art and culture groups can only create ways. an even better experience for our community's youth.

Q: What's your vision for the future with our arts scene?

A: I think our path to success is to continue to create alliances between organizations in our community. We have an extraordinary amount of groups that do fantastic things with and for our citizens. The common goal for all of us is to promote an ever improving quality of life for all

If I were to have a wish list for the arts, it would look something like having a symbiotic relationship between our city leadership, the Downey Unified School District, our in our arts scene and community. As a city service clubs, and the various arts organizations to promote art and culture at all levels. I'd love to see more public art installations around the city. I'd love to see progress in mural and after interacting with high the downtown district in regards to school students walking home from a pedestrian-friendly square with a Downey and Warren high school each stage and lighting for entertainment of all kinds. The development of a 99-seat theatre with city and private sponsorship would invite more sustainable entertainment on a regular basis. We have a fantastic 738seat civic theatre that serves larger and more infrequent events so a 99-seat 2. space could fill the gap for smaller and more frequent events.

Most importantly, I would like to see more and more of our community getting hooked on art and culture and and community pride. A partnership getting themselves immersed into our between the school district and the community and involved in positive

When we broke the news to our family and friends that we were going to open a nonprofit art gallery in Downtown Downey, everyone thought we were out of our minds. So why do it?

It Takes a Village

We received the keys to 11140 Downey Avenue, and had zero dollars - but we were rich with ideas, support, and motivation to bring our community together through creativity.

In less than 8 months, we built a multi-use creative space for the entire community to enjoy through the generous contributions of local businesses, organizations, and individuals. Since then, Stay Gallery has become "more than just an art gallery".

In three years, our organization has touched the lives of thousands of local students, hundreds of local artists, showcased nearly every form of art, and formed strong relationships with our local government, school district, and beyond to implement branding initiatives that reinvigorate the City of Downey in creative and engaging ways.

On behalf of our Board of Directors, staff, interns, and volunteers, we would like to dedicate Stay Gallery's third year anniversary to our village - to those who have encouraged, supported, and contributed to our mission of civically engaging our community through the arts to build a vibrant sense of place where people can live, work, and play.

Downey Former Mayors Coalition

Another day, another massacre

By John Morlino

Yes, it's happened again. A man with a legally acquired arsenal walked onto a college campus. Moments later, 10 people were dead, and nearly as many Sick to your stomach? Of course you are. Surprised? Didn't think so.

Like Aurora, Newtown, and a lengthy list of similar tragedies, the October 1 mass shooting at Umpqua Community College in Oregon aimed the spotlight on the debate over guns in America. But there shouldn't be a debate at all.

Arguing that guns are a sacred part of our culture just doesn't cut it anymore. They're instruments of death. Nothing else you can own can kill more easily or efficiently.

Guns in private homes extinguish the lives of loved ones far more often than they prevent the advance of an intruder. Children shoot other children. Adults shoot their spouses and their children. Accidental death or suicide is just a trigger pull away.

This, apparently, is the price we've agreed to pay to uphold a convoluted interpretation of the Second Amendment.

Sure, there'll be calls for background checks to keep these weapons away from people stricken with severe mental illness, served with a restraining order, or convicted of violent crimes. But gun owners appear to have nothing to worry about.

After all, who's going to suggest disarming ourselves completely?

From the Brady Campaign to Everytown for Gun Safety and Americans for Responsible Solutions, no prominent organization purportedly working to end gun violence — actually, they prefer the word "reduce" — has been willing to explicitly endorse giving up our firearms.

Instead, some of them — along with nearly any elected official you can think of — seem to go out of their way to express support for the Second Amendment. "Sensible" gun control, they say, is their objective.

Making it harder for the most troubled among us to acquire a gun would, of course, be a good thing. As would comprehensive mental health care for all, and a ban on assault weapons.

Yet well-intentioned as this strategy may be, it's cursed with a deadly flaw: There's no guarantee that anyone deemed a "responsible gun owner" today will

The human mind is ever-changing. And there's no end to the number of things that can send people into a nosedive — disintegrating relationships, devastating unemployment, unlucky biology, profound trauma. Passing a background check on a given day does nothing to ensure that a person buying a gun will remain emotionally stable for the rest of his or her life.

So how do we dig ourselves out of this mess?

The answer, I believe, lies in confronting the two-headed monster that's left us in a state of perpetual paralysis.

Fear and distrust lurk beneath our collective psyche.

For example, people who wholeheartedly distrust our leaders delude themselves into thinking that, if properly armed, they'll prevail in an apocalyptic shootout with the government.

Some gun buyers fear the neighborhood "bad guy" and comfort themselves by fantasizing about winning a duel in their living room. Others fear the aftermath of a prolonged natural (or man-made) disaster where fighting over rather than sharing — food, water, and shelter becomes the norm.

To varying degrees, the odds would be stacked against us in any of those situations — just as they would be in a mass shooting. It's only on the front end that we can improve our chances. The sooner we develop a genuinely compassionate and trusting society, the less likely any of us will find ourselves in such dire circumstances.

John Morlino is a former social worker and founder of The ETHIC (The Essence of True Humanity Is Compassion). He's been writing about gun violence for more than a decade. Distributed by Other Words.org.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR:

DUSD election

Looking at our upcoming school board election, I have to vote for one person out of the three names on my ballot but it appears to me this is just another big waste of our taxpayer dollars.

I bet only about 12%-18% of the registered voters will even show up and most of them will be friends and family of the incumbents who will probably get re-elected anyway. My suggestion is that we combine the school board election with our annual political election to get a better turnout and save hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars.

Past newly-elected Downey city councilman Mario Guerra's first big mistake, just weeks after getting into office, he had us pay for a special election to get rid of term limits for city council members, even though we Downey citizens had already made it clear by voting for term limits. Mario insisted on a special vote and the cost to Downey citizens back then was said to be $75,000. We won the vote but paid the price. Mario lost, this was his deal.

This happened even before Mario got his three other council member buddies to pull off a nasty trick by doing a first time ever rotten stunt, when they voted Ann Bayer out of the mayor position and put Mario in because he was such an important person. We don't vote for mayor, they rotate into that position. Mario thought he was such an important person at that time but guess what? His mayor term failed. Just look at what Tesla Motors did to him when they signed with San Jose for their manufacturing plant instead of signing However, I do believe he set a new record of having pictures of himself in the Downey Patriot every Friday. And still to this day in 2015, you can almost guarantee Mario's picture will be in the paper on Friday.

Will the carnage ever cease?

Every time some demented loser would haul a gun — usually some sort of automatic — into a public place and lay waste around him (it's always a him), I would get on my soapbox and excoriate the National Rifle Association, gun dealers, and our cowardly politicians for letting this outrage go on unchecked.

And do you know what came of it? Nothing. Unless you count the fact that gun sales always spiked.

One of the last columns — a response to the Sandy Hook school massacre — came to the attention of Fox News viewers and gun enthusiasts across the nation. Their obsession fully metastasized, producing an avalanche of email. Two readers said they were reporting me to the FBI. And that was some of the

Worse were the telephone calls, particularly the ones at midnight featuring a low voice telling me he knew where I lived. (That might not be a death threat exactly, but it wasn't an invitation to exchange Christmas cards either.)

After one more column on the failure of Congress to take action after Newtown, I decided to stop writing about guns. It was going get me killed. And anyway, what good did it do?

Besides, this isn't a gun problem — it's a mental health problem, right? Surely that explains what happened at Virginia Tech and Columbine and in Aurora, Charleston, Tucson... Oh, who can keep track?

Then, a student at Umpqua Community College in Roseburg, Oregon gunned down nine people before fatally shooting himself. And the politicians came out with the same sad lying faces and made the same sad lying speeches, relevance to contemporary reality. We should change it or get rid of it altogether. and I knew I had to write another column about guns.

Two more students, at Texas Southern University and Northern Arizona University, have been killed since then in yet more shootings. Ye gods! Will the carnage ever cease? There's no country in the developed world that kills as many of its own people as we do. Surely we can't be the only rich country that's grappling with mental illness.

The argument that good people will have to arm themselves against the crazed monsters among us is superficially attractive. Who among us hasn't channeled his or her inner Clint Eastwood and dreamed of stopping a mass murderer in his tracks with a well-aimed bullet?

But reality isn't like that. Even police officers confronted by armed assailants shoot and shoot until their guns are empty, seldom hitting the target. Good marksmanship is hard when you're terrified.

The chances that you, an untrained shooting range wizard, can prevail against an insane guy with an assault weapon are less than nil.

The real culprits in this fiasco are our Founders, who wrote the Second Amendment. It's a sloppy and ungainly piece of work, even for a government

The wording is almost perfectly ambiguous. The amendment's claim that "the right of the people to keep and bear Arms shall not be infringed" would seem to indicate that the gun lobby is on solid ground to resist all laws dealing

But the Founders introduce that thought only after stating that "a wellregulated Militia" is "necessary to the security of a free State."

The truth is, it's not, not any longer. They were envisioning a state without a substantial standing army, which they feared. It was a conjured-up notion of a country of minutemen ready to run out of the door and defend their nation with muzzle-loading rifles.

In case you haven't heard, we've got a standing army. And the Pentagon's "arms" are way more destructive than anything our Founders could conceive of.

In other words, the Second Amendment is an 18th century relic with little

Your internet provider is distorting free speech

By Timothy Karr

Earlier this year, the Newseum Institute asked 1,000 Americans to name their rights under the First Amendment. A clear majority listed freedom of $speech \ first-before \ freedom \ of \ religion, \ assembly, \ and \ other \ core \ civil \ liberties.$

And that makes sense. Protecting free speech is essential to the health of their business practices as speech. any functioning democracy.

exercise this right every time they connect with others online. But if you ask some of the lawyers working for the companies that sell you Internet access, they'll insist that it's more important to protect the free speech rights of phone and cable giants like AT&T, Comcast, and Verizon.

In a convoluted twist, they argue that the First Amendment gives these same companies the right to block, throttle, and degrade the communications of everyone using their services.

Did you get that? Comcast thinks it has the right to censor you.

We owe this Orwellian shift in thinking to a growing number of court decisions, among them Citizens United, that define corporations as people and

Harvard Law School's John C. Coates documented this change in a study Free speech matters to the hundreds of millions of Internet users who released last February, noting that "corporations have begun to displace individuals as the direct beneficiaries of the First Amendment." This trend, Coates writes, isn't just "bad law and bad politics." It's also "increasingly bad for business and society."

> It was only a matter of time before Internet service providers — or ISPs for short — decided to get in on this dangerous game.

> In February, they lost a monumental battle when the Federal Communications Commission adopted strong Net Neutrality protections that prevent providers from blocking or slowing down online traffic and services. By summer, their legal teams had filed 10 lawsuits against the FCC's ruling to undermine the protections it extends to Internet users.

> "Broadband providers are First Amendment speakers," reads a brief filed by one of these ISPs. The new FCC rules, the brief claims, "strip providers of control over which speech they transmit and how they transmit it."

> When it sued the FCC over the agency's 2010 rules on Internet access, Verizon's lawyers explained this position in more detail. "Broadband providers possess 'editorial discretion," they claimed. "Just as a newspaper is entitled to decide which content to publish and where, broadband providers may feature some content over others."

> Not quite. ISPs aren't like newspaper editors — their services merely transmit our speech. A long list of prominent First Amendment scholars agree: Acting as a conduit for our messages isn't the same as engaging in free

> "Whether it's a phone call, a text, an email, a webpage request, or a video stream the carrier transmits, making that delivery isn't an editorial function," notes my Free Press colleague Matt Wood.

> Indeed. The framers of the Constitution couldn't have foreseen a time in which technology allowed more than 2.7 billion people to communicate worldwide via interconnected digital platforms. This exponential growth of speech is without precedent — and it requires us to be clear on who the real speakers are.

> As the court case against the FCC's Net Neutrality rules unfolds, the First Amendment shouldn't be used to take communication rights away from the very people it was designed to protect.

Power of volunteers

This past weekend I was proud to be a citizen of Downey.

My hubby and I took the CERT training class on Saturday morning. Two more Saturdays and we will be official Community Emergency Response Team members.

Saturday evening we had a wonderful time under the stars with a very funny man, Charles Phoenix. He presented an entertaining Kodachrome slideshow of vintage Downey. We enjoyed it even more than expected and found ourselves laughing out loud all evening! Charles served Pineapple Upside Downey cake to finish off the evening. The topping on this cake was that it benefited two very worthy organizations; Downey Conservancy/ Downey Rose Float! By the way, did you know it is free to be a member of the Downey Conservancy?

On Sunday, I along with eight invited family members attended Glennfest (after reading about it in the Patriot). This free screening of a documentary titled "Landfill Harmonic" was sponsored by the Downey Arts Coalition at the Downey Theatre. A very uplifting, touching, true story of perseverance! All ages in our family enjoyed it

Wednesday night my husband and I took a chance on another Glennfest movie with subject matter outside of our comfort zone. This time the location of this free movie was at our very own Downy neighborhood Krikorian. "Boy Meets Girl" is a movie I now can't stop telling my friends to see. We were once again educated and Tonight we went to see "Butterflies of Bill Baker." For the first time on the big screen and right here in Downey with the producer in attendance! An intelligent, suspenseful story that at times had us on the edge of our seat. All this entertainment in Downey with free soda and popcorn included. After the closing night screening there was a free after party. My first time ever at the Epic Lounge. We were treated to a wonderful late dinner and delicious Porto's dessert. I finally had the pleasure of meeting Glenn Stephens, film fest coordinator extraordinaire.

I realized something as well. This entire educating and entertaining weekend was due to one huge factor: volunteers. From the Saturday morning CERT class to the evening fundraiser at the Columbia Space Center put on by the Conservancy and the Rose Float, to Sunday's art show and documentary, a week of free movies ending with the after party, it was completely due to the selfless citizens in this city that spend countless hours volunteering.

After being inspired by the likes of long time community volunteers such as Pat Gil, current neighbors Harold and Ann Tseklenis and many others my husband and I are making a pledge to become more involved and civic minded. In fact we are looking forward to it, starting by becoming part of the Downey Conservancy, spending time volunteering with the Downey Arts Coalition, as well as signing up to volunteer and help publicize this outstanding film festival that Glenn and friends work so hard to make available to the fortunate citizens of Downey.

This week's activities are just the type of events that makes Downey a great city that people should be proud to live in. I know we are!

Downey's Dia de los Muertos festival one of the best in the region

By Lee Wade

DOWNEY - The 3rd annual Downey Dia de Los Muertos Art Festival is just weeks away, and we're just hitting our stride. In fact, I don't think there is another free Day of the Dead Festival in the Los Angels area that can rival us for class, presentation, variety, quality and value.

I've been "in" event marketing, both Hispanic and general market, for 25-some years. I've developed a keen eye for what's going to take hold, and work, long term, and what is not. I've observed that if an event is destined to become a local, annual tradition -- an ingrained part of the community—it will become apparent within its first three years. Otherwise, it will just peter out; it was apparent within 4 or 5 hours, that first year, that this event was a

My part of the Festival is to secure sponsorship, assist with marketing, make suggestions and help as needed, but that happens lots of times, and the events don't always turn out as special as this one. Sure, the perfect weather helped, as does free parking and free admission, but mainly, it was "the vibe." People felt good; they were smiling.

Here's why I think this Festival is so special:

There is a "real" 738-seat theater with continuous live entertainment: colorful, dramatic ballet folklorico;

This year, there's a second film, "Rock 'n' Roll Made in Mexico," about the repressed Mexican rock music scene in the 50s and 60s, including its exclusion from radio, concerts, clubs, juke boxes, and record stores. A fascinating peek, with interviews from the big stars of that era. That showing is at 5 p.m.

There's a romantic "zocalo" with continuous live music, with space to dance, have a glass of wine or a beer surrounded by colorful decorations and greenery.

There are amazing sculptures. The alley off of Brookshire will be converted to an "Urban Art Alley" which includes three large sculptures by Martin Sanchez, whose work was a hit last year with his 22' high skeleton on a bicycle. This year he's showing three, new magnificent DOWNEY - Jim Stecklein, a Downey resident from 1934 to 1952, will be guest speaker at the Downey Historical Society's meeting Oct. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the John Downey Room at the Barbara Riley Center.

Downey native Jim Stecklein to speak at Barbara Riley Center

Stecklein was born in Denver in 1929 and his family moved to South Gate that same year. In 1934, the family moved to Downey.

Stecklein attended Downey Grammary, Junior High and Senior High schools, graduating from Downey High in 1947. While at Downey High, he was senior class president, elected as senator in the California Association of Student Councils, sports editor of the "Norseman" school newspaper, and was on the yearbook staff. He also played varsity football, basketball, track and baseball.

Moving to Whittier in 1952, Stecklein attended Whittier College, playing football and baseball. He was elected "Athelete of the Year" in 1951, and selected as an All Conference Player in both football and baseball. He also made the Associated Press All Pacific Coast football team.

Stecklein played in the College Azteca Bowl against Mexico City in 1950.

Stecklein attended Whittier College graduate school from 1951-53, where he also coached the junior varsity football team. He graduated with a BA in Business Administration and a master's degree in Recreation and Physical Education. He also earned a teaching credential.

Stecklein graduated from the U.S. Naval Officers Shcool in 1953 and served in the Navy for three years as a recreation and special services officer and legal officer. It was there that Stecklein coached U.S. Naval Station basketball and baseball teams in intercollegiate play.

After the military, Stecklein was in the retail hardware, furniture and appliance business in Downey for 29 years. He also worked as the assistant superintendent of recreation for the city of Whittier for 11 years, and was director of parks and recreation for Manhattan Beach for 23 years. He retired in 1992.

From 2002 to 2015, Stecklein also bred and sold Alpacas, a domesticated species of South American Camelid. (It resembles a small llama in appearance.)

Stecklein's presentation Oct. 22 is free and open to the public.

SHARED STORIES: THE TIES THAT BIND

Neighbors Matter

Maria Garcia grew up in Manila and moved to this country many years ago. In this piece she reflects on the importance of neighbors in her life. Shared Stories is a weekly column featuring articles by participants in a writing class at the Norwalk Senior Center. Bonnie Mansell is the instructor for this free class offered through the Cerritos College Adult Education Program. Curated by Carol Kearns

By Maria L. Garcia

I did not grow up in Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood (1968-2001 Educational Show). But vicariously having watched Mr. Rogers on television when our family just moved from Manila to San Francisco, I became more aware of how neighbors do count.

Staying in a condo on 19th Ave. was a bit of a culture shock for us; we felt so suddenly removed from our country of origin. We could literally hear the sound of footsteps in the hallway and some other sounds, knowing for sure that we had neighbors sharing our walls.

Our first brush with our neighbors was on the elevator. We soon realized after a brief chat that they were Philippine investors whose condo unit was a place for them to stay when they were in the U.S. After several chance meetings, they introduced themselves as Mr. and Mrs. Delgado.

Right away we knew they the Philippines that owned the Hilton Hotel. They now were establishing a shipping company to transport goods from the U.S. This proved to be an acquaintance that gave my husband Ed his first real job, apart from his selling vacuum cleaners door-to-door with unemployment at 15%. In the midst of a recession my husband was offered a job, requiring our family to relocate to Southern California.

Neighbor. I've never ever given that word great meaning until late. Last month I met a stranger by the parking island by our house who introduced himself as the new owner of the home belonging to our longtime neighbor George. George didn't say goodbye to us. His home had been foreclosed and he never even breathed a word that he was leaving. Every morning now, as I see the house, I am saddened by his absence. This brings to mind that neighbors do matter.

My first memory of a neighbor elevated, private road, where only our house and our neighbor's house stood. I was a curious seven-year-old when I would climb the balimbing tree to access the roof of our house and peer over to the neighbor's home where a senator and his princess wife and two boys lived. There was always this crowd of people that would come next door, and I would hear some loud chanting that would resonate to our

My dad told me that they were Muslims from the Southern big island. I was a bit puzzled with their attire because they wore wrapped around clothing material that would hang onto their shoulder up to their heads. At one time, I had a chance to see their sunken side yard where the people would be crouched in some kneeling position and they'd be bowing and kissing the cemented ground. It was belonged to a prominent family in like when my family would kneel down every night to pray the rosary without having to kiss the floor.

> I grew up in that house, but being married and with our first child, we decided to have a house built for our growing family. Our neighbor this time was a midwife. One day she rang the doorbell and asked me if I would like to assist her in delivering a baby. Feeling a tug of war between reluctance and eagerness, I walked with her to this small house up the road where pregnant mother was in labor and already reclined on a bed. With some warm water, an old newspaper, and a basin I actually assisted in the birthing of a baby girl.

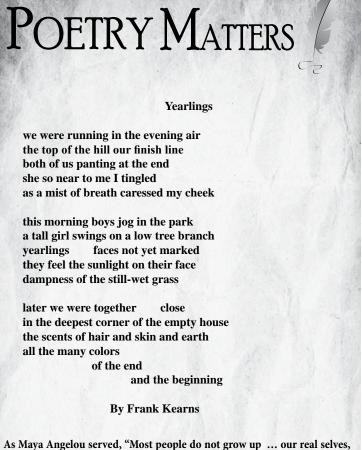

When we were compelled to move to an apartment in Bellflower, we were readily welcomed by a neighbor who introduced himself as Tatang, a respectful appellation for grandpa. Tatang was like my dad - he had the patience of a saint. This old man drove me in his old beat up car to pick up is when we lived on the end of an my daughter from her Kindergarten

A small fire in our garage in 2005 brought us back to our first house in Bellflower. Our neighbor then was Daniel, an Egyptian fellow who would invite us to his house for tea. Icons of his religious background of Coptic Orthodox were on his wall. He was also the friendly Neighborhood Watch

Last night a neighbor from across the street gave us some food in celebration of their Muslim background. Deja vu!

I ask myself like the lawyer in the parable of the Good Samaritan, who asked Jesus, "Who is my neighbor?" The more definitive answer for me is - the neighbor who showed me love because I mattered.

As Maya Angelou served, "Most people do not grow up ... our real selves, the children inside, are still innocent and shy as magnolias." Why you should brake for possums

The possum is not the brightest of animals. When they are threatened, they pretend to be dead, which is where we get the expression "playing possum." Sometimes, they do this in response to threats from oncoming traffic, which results in possums becoming roadkill.

Many people don't give a lot of thought to some of the forest animals that may be crossing a road or trying to scurry out of the way as a car comes speeding around a corner. Well, there may be a lot more thought given to possums, now that they have been connected to being the saviors of human beings against Lyme disease.

As the Poughkeepsie Journal reported, possums are an American marsupial that have a name which most people can't even pronounce correctly. Yet, here "Lyme disease goes to die."

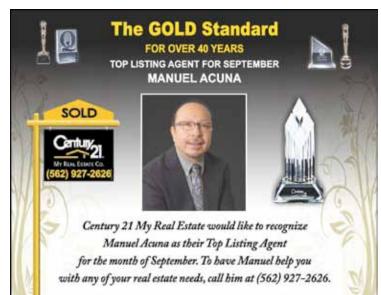

Lyme disease and other tick-borne diseases are most prevalent during the warmer spring months, such as May and sometimes April. It is possible for them to come about at other times of the year, too.

The Lyme disease-carrying ticks are often found in large numbers of mice, shrews, and chipmunks, but they are often eaten by opossum.

Research done by the scientists at the Cary Institute of Ecosystem Studies have placed different species into cages for experiments. At that point, the species were covered with ticks and the researchers waited for the arachnids to jump off, and then counted how many survived.

In staggering numbers, possums ended up removing or eating as much as 96 percent of all ticks that land on them. Rick Ostfeld, from the Cary Institute, explained that possums are actually the "unsung heroes in the Lyme Disease epidemic."

Not many people know a lot about Lyme disease, but it became quite well known when Yolanda Foster revealed she was battling it. The star of Real Housewives of Beverly Hills has struggled with issues with her health for some time now, and it has gotten to the point where she can't function or read.
