In a motion passed at Tuesday's Board of Supervisors meeting, Hahn and Solis county instructed to report back in 90 days with a comprehensive plan to permanently close the unlicensed cannabis operations in unincorporated areas of the county.

In addition to enhanced enforcement, the plan will also include public education and outreach so consumers know which businesses are licensed and how to report an unlicensed cannabis business.

The plan may also include outreach to property owners about the potential legal and financial risks of leasing space to an unlicensed business.

"For the past year and a half I have been working closely with many community members from my district to combat illegally operating marijuana businesses," said Solis.

County "Before the considers recommendations expanding marijuana businesses, we must put into place effective measures to end illegal operators. Today's action is a step forward in countywide ending this game of 'whack-a-mole' and reassuring our communities that LA County will protect our residents, consumers, and our neighborhoods."

Downey voted to restrict dispensaries marijuana within city limits but several marijuana stores are located minutes away, including in Bellflower, Paramount and Compton.

According to WeedMaps. com, unincorporated Whittier has nearly a dozen marijuana shops, including several on a stretch of Whittier Boulevard.

Although recreational marijuana is legal to possess in California, local governments still have abilities to regulate their sale and distribution.

Longtime resident Frank Redd mourned

DOWNEY – Frank Matthew Redd was born in Los Angeles on March 17, 1933, a week after the big Long Beach earthquake of 1933. His St. Patrick's Day arrival caused just as much excitement for his parents, Frank Edward and Kathleen Redd.

He grew up in Long Beach with his three older sisters. He attended St. Matthew's grammar school and graduated from St. Anthony's High School in 1952, where he excelled on the football field.

Shortly after high school, Frank joined the Army and was stationed in Fairbanks, Alaska. He caught a serious case of pneumonia that kept him out of harm's way in the Korean Conflict. He was a metal worker for many years.

In 1966, he married Barbara Blackstone. He also became a dad to three children: Sherrill, Michael and Robbin. Their daughter, Kathleen, was born in 1975. They raised their family in Downey.

Barbara passed away in March 2016. Their son, Mike, passed away suddenly on Dec 2, 2017.

Frank fell ill on June 2, with lung cancer. He passed away June 19 with Kathleen, and grandson, John Paul, at his side.

Frank was predeceased by his parents, wife, son and sisters Mary Ellen Drapeau (d. Hank) and Margaret Buckley (d. Dan). He is survived by his children: Sherrill Redd, Robbin Spears and Kathleen Richard (Ben); grandchildren: John, Chris, Tiffany, Barbara and Ryan, and eight great-grandchildren. He is also survived by his sisters, Patricia Redd, and Jeanne Callon, and many cousins.

Mass of Christian Burial will be celebrated on Thursday, July 12, at 11 am at All Souls Mortuary in Long Beach. Reception to follow services at this location.

Last week's concert was headlined by Knyght Ryder, an 80's and 90's tribute band.

This support goes back more than a century when the Downey City Courier opened in 1875. Since then, Downey has been fortunate to have always had a newspaper of record. Which makes last week's mass shooting at the Capital Gazette newspaper in Anapolis, Md., all the more personal. The victims were innocent victims who, by all accounts, were hard-working members of their community, putting in long hours at probably low pay for a cause - journalism - that they believed in.

The persistent attack against our nation's free press is only one of the issues tearing our country apart. Let's hope our country begins to heal and unite sooner rather than later.

To do that we need to be informed. And to be informed, we need to value our journalists.

By Alex Dominguez

I love being a reporter, but it's desensitized me to the gray and black clouds that occasionally hang not only over our city, but the world in general. The negative is out there, I just don't let it affect me; not outwardly in the public eye, at least.

Take for example the shooting that just occurred over the weekend at Rick's Motel. While the Crime Watch pages frenzied and everybody and their mother tweeted us at The Downey Patriot, Editor Eric Pierce and I had a simple conversation that amounted to one text each:

"Need me to get over there?"

"No, just monitor online."

Working for a small community newspaper you kind of learn the flow of the city: how it breathes, how it moves, its pulse and heartbeat. You learn who to talk to, when, and how. You learn to expect what will be available to you.

It's like my editor told me while we talked about the role of small newspapers in preparation of me writing this article, "It's yeah, I took it damn personal. our job to stay cool when everyone else is panicking.'

As small-town journalists, most of our days aren't too exciting. Boston Globe reporter Maria Cramer said it best when news got to me; to us. she tweeted, "Local newspapers don't win tons of Pulitzers or cover flashy stories. They cover the zoning board, the town planning board, the town budget..."

That's not to say that we don't still get our fair share of strong opinions thrown our way. We get letters telling us why our articles are wrong. Phone calls asking why one argument was addressed over another. My favorites are the individuals who come into the office and hover over our desks, persistently asking us the same questions that we've answered several times already.

This is by no means a complaint at this kind of behavior, as it just comes as part of the territory and it's easy to let it roll off our backs.

But when reports came in last week that someone had opened fire on a local newspaper in Annapolis, Maryland it was hard to not take it personally. When stories broke of Milo Yiannopoulos "trolling" journalists by commenting on how he "couldn't wait for vigilante death squads to gun journalists down on sight,"

As a result, you're seeing one of the rare instances where the

The purpose of this article (if you can even consider it an article in its purest form) is not to start a debate on gun control. It's not to call for the head of a shallow-minded political instigator. We want this to be the least political as possible.

That begs the question: What is this about then? It's something that I've sat at my desk wondering about for the last several minutes.

This is the product of mourning.

Small-paper reporters nationwide are mourning the loss of five similar, like-minded individuals to ourselves. We may not have known them before the tragedy, but our passion to keep our residents informed is the same; our motivations ingrained in pride and loyalty to our cities.

I hope to God that The Patriot is never the centerpiece to a story like that of the Capital Gazette. This week, say a prayer for Annapolis, Maryland.

The values underlying Independence Day

By Judge Andrew Napolitano

The Declaration of Independence — which was signed on July 3, 1776, for public release on July 4 — was Thomas Jefferson's masterpiece. Jefferson himself wrote much about the declaration in the 50 years that followed.

Not the least of what he wrote offered his view that the declaration and the values that it articulated were truly radical — meaning they reflected 180-degree changes at the very core of societal attitudes in America. The idea that farmers and merchants and lawyers could secede from a kingdom and fight and win a war against the king's army was the end result of the multigenerational movement that was articulated in the declaration.

The two central values of the declaration are the origins of human liberty and the legitimacy of popular government.

When Jefferson wrote that we are endowed by our Creator with certain inalienable rights, he was referring to the natural law. The natural law teaches that right and wrong can be discerned and truth discovered by the exercise of human reason, independent of any commands from the government. The natural law also teaches that our rights come from our humanity — not from the government — and our humanity is a gift from our Creator.

Even those who question or reject the existence of the Creator was Jefferson himself among them? — can embrace natural rights, because they can accept that our exercise of human reason leads us all to make similar claims. These claims — free speech, free association, free exercise or non-exercise of religion, selfdefense, privacy, and fairness, to name a few — are rights that we all exercise without giving a second thought to the fact that they are natural and come from within us.

The view of the individual as the repository of natural rights was not accepted by any governments in 1776. In fact, all rejected it and used violence to suppress it. To the minds of those in government in the mid-18th century, the king was divine and could do no wrong, and parliament existed not as the people's representatives but to help the king raise money and to give him a read on the pulse of landowners and nobility.

Jefferson and his colleagues had no difficulty breaking from this type of ancient regime. Unlike the French, who destroyed their monarchy, the American colonists seceded from theirs and they did so embracing natural rights. Regrettably, they did not recognize natural rights for African slaves or for women. We all know and profoundly lament the sorry history of those errors.

The idea that each human being possesses inherent natural rights by virtue of one's humanity is not just an academic argument. It has real-life consequences, which Jefferson recognized. Those consequences are implicated when government seeks to curtail rights for what it claims is the protection of another's individual rights, the common good or the good of the government itself.

Jefferson recognized that you can consent to the curtailment of your rights but you cannot consent to the curtailment of mine. To Jefferson, government can take away your rights without your consent only if you have violated someone else's rights.

Surrendering rights is also implicated in the second radical idea that underscores the Declaration of Independence. It is the concept that no government is valid unless it enjoys the consent of the governed. This, too, was unheard of in 1776, because British kings did not claim consent of the governed as the basis Andrew Napolitano is a senior judicial analyst for Fox News. for legitimacy.

Yet consent of the governed is perfectly consistent with natural law. Under natural law, what is yours is yours and what is mine is mine. If I attempt to take your land or car or cellphone. you can stop me, either directly or through the government we have both consented to. If one of us has not consented to the government's existence, it can still enforce natural rights as the agent of the person whose rights are being violated — just as it does for bank depositors when it captures a bank robber.

This idea of consent of the governed was a serious issue in the days and years following July 4, 1776, because about one-third of the adults living in the United States in the last quarter of the 18th century remained loyal to the king of England after the Revolution, and they did not consent to the new popular form of government that took the British government's place. The new government was thrust upon them without their consent.

The last letter Jefferson wrote was to his enemy-turnedfriend John Adams, in anticipation of the 50th anniversary of the declaration — a day on which both Jefferson and Adams would die. In that letter, Jefferson argued that the greatest achievement of the declaration was its arousing men to burst free from the chains imposed upon them by superstition and myth by bringing about a recognition of their individual rights and an embrace of self-government.

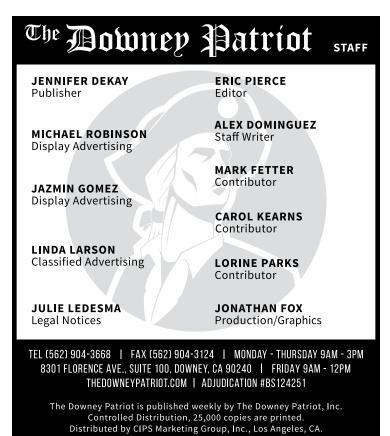

Today the Jeffersonian ideals of individual natural rights and government's legitimacy's being conditioned upon the individual consent of the governed have themselves become myths.

In Jefferson's day, the voters knew all that the government did, and it knew nothing about them. Today government operates largely in secrecy, and it knows our every move and captures our every communication.

In Jefferson's day, the government needed the people's permission to tax and regulate them. Today the people need the government's permission to do nearly everything.

Do you know anyone who has consented to the government? Do you know anyone who could avoid the government by not giving consent? Do you consent to the government by voting? Do you consent to the government if it is run by those you voted against? Did you consent to a government that steals liberty and property and prosperity and gives them away?

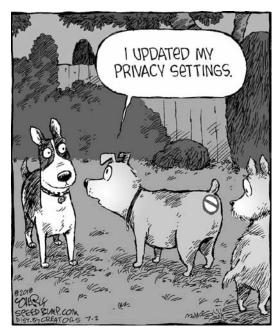

Happy Fourth of July.

Mayor's Corner: Summer fun

Hello Downey,

This summer there are several events happening in the city to take the family to and to take a break from the summer heat.

The pool at Downey High School is open for recreational swim now until July 20. Family Fun Nights with a live DJ as well as swimming classes will be offered throughout the summer.

Twilight Summer The Concert Series will feature bands every Wednesday at Furman Park. Come out and join your neighbors for evenings promised to be full of fun and with great live music.

Also, save the date for the Havana Nights Rooftop Concert on August 30. This rooftop concert is a free event that celebrates live music and art in Downtown Downey.

Last year, the event was a huge success with a record number in attendance. This year it's expected to be even

On August 4, the Summer Music & Movie event will take place at Golden Park with jazz music from the Amanda Castro Band, and the movie "Ferdinand" will be displayed on an outdoor screen.

The annual Gangs Out Of Downey (G.O.O.D) backpack giveaway will also take part at Golden Park on the same night. Bring the kiddos so that they may receive their backpacks and school supplies for the upcoming year. The first day of class for the Downey Unified School District is August 15.

Before school though, bring the family to the organizations such as the Civic Center for National Night Out. This event is an annual community-building campaign promotes policecommunity partnerships and neighborhood camaraderie to make our neighborhoods safer, more caring places to live.

National Night enhances the relationship between neighbors and law enforcement while bringing back a true sense of community. There will be games, food and live demonstrations from the Downey Police Department. This is a great opportunity to bring police and neighbors together.

The Columbia Memorial Space Center will be holding a community focused event called Rocket Fever on August 18. This will be the 8th year that the Space Center holds this event, the only one like it in the Los Angeles region.

Shared Stories: My New Millennium Shoes

Yolanda Adelé's humorous piece was inspired by a real ad for a real product. Some of you may have tried the product yourself. Tennis anyone? If so, lace up your tennis shoes, wrap your Shoes you will have to do your part." sweat-band around your head and you are good to go.

However, if you are like me, athletically challenged, and harbor an aversion to sweating that melts your make-up, messes up your hair do, overpowers your Giorgio Armani Perfume, and you fear the sweat that leaves gym equipment sticky, attracting all kinds of living organism bacteria, etc. there is an alternative.

As advertised in the paper, this new sports shoe by a wellknown company is called Shape-Ups, and it is the 'state of the art' for our new millennium.

This "fitness footwear" is advertised to firm the buttocks and calf muscles, reduce dreaded cellulite, tone your thighs, and promote weight loss. The company slogan is, "Get in shape without setting a foot in a gym."

After seeing the commercial for this promising shoe, I put down my third bowl of Skinny Cow Chocolate Diet Ice Cream, got off the couch, slipped on my sandals, grabbed my keys, and sprinted to my car. I drove down the street to the strip-mall where the shoe store is.

When I got there, I saw women lined up in front of the door. Some were holding a copy of the shoe store's glossy colored picture ad of the New Millennium Shoes.

That's when I realized how expensive the shoes were. The ad read, "Just $99.99 plus tax. While supplies last!"

"Ouch! That's quite a bite out of my budget at fifty dollars for each foot," I said, to no one in particular. A large lady in front of me, wearing a jelly stained shirt and sucking on a Starbucks Mocha Chocolate Chip Frappachino, echoed my sentiments.

The Women's Guild of Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church has announced its 2018 eighth grade scholarship winners. The $500 scholarships, awarded to six students this year, are provided to help meet the costs of attending a Catholic High School.

Another woman sporting a tattoo of Tinker Bell on her wide forearm chimed in, "Hey, a hundred bucks is still cheaper than buttocks and abdominal muscles just by standing in them." a gym membership, right!" "Right!" I agreed.

Right away I felt taller. The clerk explained, I was indeed taller New Millennium Shoes. in these shoes "because of the built in kinetic wedge inserts."

"My part? What's that mean?"

"Well, you will have to find your center of balance which means changing the way you are used to walking. The dynamic rolling feature of the shoe may make you feel unstable or dizzy at first. It is important that your ankles do not bend inward or outward but remain parallel to the position of your back. Your neck should be straight. Don't look down while you are walking."

"How am I supposed to remember all that?"

"That's easy! These shoes come with a DVD and booklet. There is also a support web-site!"

"That is amazing when you consider that as an eighteenyear-old, I was allowed to take a newborn baby (my own) out of the hospital without so much as a manual. Now, I will be better educated when I bring home a DVD along with my pair of New Millennium Shoes!'

The young clerk was not amazed. "Lady, do you want the shoes or not?"

"I'm thinking about it."

"What's to think about? These shoes work even while you are standing and doing nothing."

"Huh? How is that possible?"

The clerk sighed deeply, then said, "Conventional footwear does not provide proper support or aid in correct posture for long periods of standing. With these New Millennium Shoes the simulation of soft ground will ease the stress on your joints,
