soldier killed in combat

SOUTH GATE - The Pentagon has identified the soldier killed in an apparent insider attack Saturday in Afghanistan as Army Cpl. Joseph Maciel of South Gate.

Maciel was killed and two other American service members were wounded in what US military officials called an "apparent insider attack" on July 7 while they were advising local forces at an Afghan military facility in the town of Tarin Kowt in Uruzgan Province.

This is the third combat fatality in Afghanistan this year.

The NATO-led coalition in Afghanistan, Resolute Support, said Saturday that the incident was under investigation and that the two wounded US service members are being treated and are in stable condition.

Maciel was assigned to 1st Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division, based at Fort Benning, Georgia, according to the Department of Defense. He had been serving in Afghanistan since February.

The Pentagon said Maciel was part of Operation Freedom's Sentinel, which counterterrorism missions targeting terrorist groups like al Qaeda and the local ISIS affiliate in Afghanistan and also focuses on building up local Afghan Maciel's task force was deployed in support of the 1st Security Force Assistance Brigade, a newly established unit that is focused on advising and bolstering local troops and is seen as critical to America's strategy in Afghanistan. The specially trained unit's 800 members are intended to advise Afghan forces in small teams, embedding more closely with their Afghan partners than conventional units.

US Army Security Jackson, the Force Assistance Brigade's commander in Afghanistan, told reporters last month that insider attacks were a threat but that US forces were taking necessary precautions.

"As the commander of this organization, I take all threats seriously, and I assess all threats," Jackson said in a briefing with reporters at the Pentagon by video teleconference from Afghanistan.

"And right now, you know, yes, green on blue could be a threat, but we have not had a single incident," Jackson said, using a military term for insider attacks. "And I will tell you honestly, we have had our Afghan partners come to us with intelligence that preempted potential attacks, and they have been proactively taking care of their own problems."

The last insider attack that resulted in a US casualty occurred two months earlier, in June of last year.

Maciel is survived by his father and mother.

LABOR AGREEMENTS:

LABOR AGREEMENTS:
Los Angeles County
Supervisor Janice Hahn has insisted that a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) be included in plans to develop the south-side of the Rancho Los Amigos campus in Downey.

Hahn has long advocated for PLAs as a means of investing in good jobs and guaranteeing fair treatment of workers.

"Not only do Project Labor Agreements help keep projects on schedule and on budget, they are a tool that helps us to protect workers and create a pipeline of good paying jobs," said Supervisor Hahn.

At this week's meeting of the Board of Supervisors, Hahn directed that the County include the projects proposed for the Rancho Los Amigos South Campus Development in upcoming project labor agreement negotiations with the LA/OC Building and Construction Trades Council.

These four projects include the Sheriff's Crime Lab, the new Probation Department Headquarters, the new Internal Services Department Headquarters, and other infrastructure projects.

"The Building Trades has had a long and fruitful partnership with the County and we are very proud to partner with Supervisor Hahn on the Rancho Los Amigos South Campus Project to put local people to work including veterans and the disadvantaged workforce that live in the County," said LA/OC Building Trades Executive Secretary Ron Miller, who testified in favor of Hahn's motion.

"Let's not just think about building projects," said Alex LaFarga of LiUNA, who testified at the meeting. "Let's think about building careers. That is what these PLAs do -- they provide us with opportunities to build careers."

Hahn's motion passed unanimously.

STEM CAMP: This summer, Downey student Elias Martinez will join middle school students from across the nation to take part in a unique academic and career-oriented development experience, the National Youth Leadership Forum (NYLF): Explore STEM in Los Angeles.

Elias was nominated to attend the forum by his seventh-grade math teacher at Lakewood Christian School. In addition to participating in band, Elias serves as the founder and president of his school's chess club.

He is also passionate about space exploration and recently completed the Quest for Space program at his school, where he created heat experiments that were used by NASA and SpaceX on the International Space Station. During his free time, Elias volunteers at spcaLA, where he helps socialize, train and enrich the lives of cats.

With dreams of becoming an engineer, Elias is looking forward to gaining the hands-on experience that the forum provides.

SKILLS USA: Two career and technical students from Downey won one of the nation's highest awards at the 2018 SkillsUSA Championships, held in Louisville, Ky., on June 27-

Cristina Fuentes from Warren High School and Damian Vasquez from Schurr High School were awarded a Skill Point Certificate in Esthetics and the high school gold medal in Mobile Electronics, respectively.

More than 6,300 students competed at the national showcase of career and technical education.

Students were invited to the event to demonstrate their technical skills, workplace skills and personal skills in 102 hands-on occupational and leadership competitions including robotics, automotive technology, drafting, criminal justice, aviation maintenance and public speaking. Industry leaders from 600 businesses, corporations, trade associations and unions planned and evaluated the contestants against their standards for entry-level workers. More than 1,700 industry judges and technical committee members participated this year.

The SkillsUSA Championships is the largest skill competition in the world and covers 1.4 million square feet, equivalent to 20 football fields or 25 acres.

SYMPHONY ELECTIONS:

The Downey Symphonic Society has re-elected Pat Gil, Robert Goldstein, JoAnne Gronley, Cindy Kovach, Eric Pierce, and Mary Stevens to three-year terms to the Board of Directors.

Carol Kearns was elected vice president of the board, and President Don Marshall, Secretary Ruth Hillecke, and Treasurer Bill Hare were reelected, all for 2018-2019.

The Society's board comprises 16 unpaid volunteers. They carry out all activities needed to support the Society's mission "to serve and engage our diverse community by presenting outstanding live performances of symphonic and orchestral music and educational programs for all ages."

The Society sponsors the Downey Symphony Orchestra, which is currently in its 60th season presenting great music to Downey and surrounding communities.

ENDORSEMENTS: City Council district 4 candidate Claudia Frometa has announced endorsements from a trio of community leaders.

Mayor Pro Tem Rick Rodriguez, former mayor Mario Guerra, and school board member Martha Sodetani all have endorsed Frometa, who is seeking Councilman Fernando Vasquez's seat when he is termed out of office this November.

Edith Lehman passes away at 100

DOWNEY - Edith May Debow was born in Neptune, New Jersey on July 7, 1917, the oldest of 7 children. She was raised by her grandparents from an early age.

When Edith was in the 9th grade, her grandfather died and she had to quit school to work at W. F. Woolworths. Soon after that she met Kenneth Lehman, who was a clerk in his father's grocery store. They married in 1937, and a year later moved to Huntington Park, California.

Ken was a carpenter (later a general contractor) and built several of the houses they lived in, including the house in Downey where she spent the last 63 years of her life.

She had two children, Karl born in 1942 and Christine born in 1947. Edith was very active in her church and enjoyed the time she spent as a Sunday School teacher and as a sponsor for the church Luther League, especially enjoying outings with the teenagers. She also liked to play bridge and pinochle with friends, sew clothes for her children and others, paint china (for which she had many Pomona Fair ribbons), work as a manager at an Anaheim yardage store, and cook meals for her family and friends.

By the time Ken passed away in 1997, Edith had retired twice. Because she drove well into her 90s, she remained active and continued with her hobbies and activities. In her last years Edith was an avid reader and also kept journals.

At the end of this life, on June 21, Edith passed away at PIH Hospital in Whittier – less than three weeks before her 101st birthday.

Edith is survived by her son, Karl Lehman (and wife Ann Meierdierks), a grandson, Jay Herman (and wife Leila), a granddaughter, Sheya Meierdierks-Lehman (and husband Mike Baker), and two great-grandchildren, Nadia Herman and Maia Baker. Two sisters and a brother (Agnes Keefe, Delia Stout, Arnold Debow), and many nieces and nephews also

Tab Hunter, 1950s teen heartthrob, dies at 86

LOS ANGELES - Tab Hunter, the blond actor and singer who was a heartthrob for millions of teenagers in the 1950s with such films as "Battle Cry" and "Damn Yankees!" and received new attention decades later when he revealed that I'm talking sexually now — was impossible in 1953.' he was gay, has died. He was 86.

Producer and spouse Allan Glaser said Hunter died Sunday of a blood clot in his leg that caused cardiac arrest. Glaser called the death "sudden and unexpected."

Hunter was a star for several years. In addition to his hit movies, his recording of "Young Love" topped the Billboard

But in his 2005 memoir, "Tab Hunter Confidential: The Making of a Movie Star," Hunter recounted the stresses of being a love object to millions of young women when he was, in reality, a gay man.

"I believed, wholeheartedly — still do — that a person's happiness depends on being true to themselves," he wrote. "The dilemma, of course, that was being true to myself — and

Hunter was born in 1931 in New York City, the second son of a mechanic and his German immigrant wife. His father left the family two years later and the boy took his mother's name, Gelien. Young Arthur Gelien grew up in San Francisco and Long Beach, California, and joined the Coast Guard at 15, lying about his age.

While in New York, he saw Broadway plays and became interested in acting. Back in California, Willson arranged for a two-word role in a small Western, "The Lawless." He got $500 and a new name.

Roe vs. Wade is yesterday's fight

By Froma Harrop

If the Supreme Court were to overturn Roe v. Wade, the right to an abortion might no longer be law of the land. But the ability to obtain one would remain a fact of the land. It might be harder to end a pregnancy in some states, but there would be no returning to the pre-Roe world.

That's because a lot has changed since the 1973 decision. For all the passionate anti-abortion activism, Americans have been, if anything, moving toward greater acceptance. Support for making abortion illegal in all cases has fallen to 18 percent, down from 22 percent in 1976, according to Gallup polling. The percentage of people who want it legal in all circumstances has risen by 7 points over the period, to 29 percent.

In the middle stand the 50 percent who want it legal under certain circumstances. That is the position of Roe. The ruling held that the right to an abortion lasts only to the point that the fetus could live outside the womb. Back then, viability was placed at about 28 weeks.

Some alleged abortion foes want to make exceptions for cases of rape or incest. This is "pro-life" hypocrisy. The circumstances of the conception in no way change the nature of the fetus.

In deference to "pro-life" groups, some states have tried to ban abortions performed for reasons of sex selection or Unprescribed opioids are illegal, and they're everywhere. a genetic disorder, such as Down syndrome. One can share their distaste for favoring one sex over another — and admire parents who choose to raise a child with Down syndrome. But none of this matters. A woman currently has a right to an early abortion, no explanation required. Why is nobody's business.

What would happen on the ground if Roe were thrown out? Conservative states might put new restrictions on abortion that sound radical but, in many cases, wouldn't change the situation much. Mississippi's 15-week limit for abortion, now in the courts, may not be so restrictive as the fact that the state has only one clinic providing it.

The ongoing debate should recognize that since Roe became law, the abortion rate has fallen by half. That's thanks to improved birth control methods, including morning-after pills, which can prevent a pregnancy up to five days after unprotected sex.

Another reality is that nearly a third of abortions outside of the right to end a pregnancy isn't going away. hospitals are now being performed noninvasively with pills. Medication abortions require two pills, one supervised by a doctor, another taken in the privacy of one's home.

Arkansas passed legislation to virtually ban all medication abortions. Even if it gets through the courts, it's unclear how any state is going to stop people from taking pills.

In states that make abortions hard or impossible to obtain, middle-class women will travel elsewhere to end their pregnancies. The poor will be forced to have children they don't want or can't afford. The states will be left with the hard socio-economic consequences.

Many who support a basic right to abortion are unsettled by new medical technology that has enabled doctors to save fetuses at 23 or 24 weeks. Tightening the rules to recognize these developments is in order. Sweden, for example, allows abortion for any reason until 18 weeks into the pregnancy. After that, the request goes to a government agency, which grants it when something has gone wrong with the pregnancy.

There's no point in arguing with those who want to ban abortion altogether. They are entitled to their views. But the pro-choice majority remains a decided majority. And that's why whatever happens to Roe — and let's hope it survives —

Explaining American leftists: Part I

By Dennis Prager

As I watch a great number of my fellow Americans and virtually all of the mainstream media descend further and further into irrational and immoral hysteria — regularly calling the president of the United States and all of his supporters Nazis, white supremacists and the like; harassing Republicans where they eat, shop and live; ending family ties and lifelong friendships with people who support the president; declaring their opposition to Trump and the Republican Party the "Resistance," as if they were American reincarnations of the French who fought real Nazis in World War II; and so on — I ask myself: What is going on? How does one explain them?

Here are some answers:

1. Naivete

Many Americans are naive, about life, about good and evil, and about America. They don't realize how rare America is and how good they have it. This mass naivete was vividly expressed by the reaction of tens of thousands of mostly white middleclass Americans to then-candidate Barack Obama in 2008, when he was campaigning in Columbia, Missouri. Obama announced, "We are five days away from fundamentally transforming the United States of America."

I frequently play the recording of Obama's statement on my radio show not only to explain a basic difference between right and left — the left believes America needs to be fundamentally transformed, while the right thinks America needs to be incrementally improved — but also for people to hear the crowd's reaction.

Very few contemporary American recordings are as depressing as the ecstatic and prolonged cheering the crowd gave that terrible promise from Obama. I believe it is not an exaggeration to say that had he announced a cure for cancer, the cheering could not have been louder and probably would not have been longer.

world today, and certainly than anyone who ever lived thunderously applaud a call to fundamentally transform their decent country?

One answer — one of many, as we will see — is naivete.

Earlier this year, I had a debate/dialogue with two left-wing students at the University of California, Berkeley. I thought debating left-wing students, rather than giving a speech, would accomplish two objectives: deter left-wing protesters from disrupting my appearance and enable young people at Berkeley and around the world (via the internet) to hear differences between right and left clearly spelled out. Both aims were

My final question to them was "Do you believe people are basically good?" Without a moment's pause, both students said

I told them they think that way because they live in such a decent country. It is easy to remain naive in America, where most are insulated from the suffering inflicted on so much of humanity in deeply corrupt, poverty-stricken and war-torn societies. Nevertheless, given the way humans have treated one another throughout history, and only two generations after Auschwitz, only the naive can believe people are basically good. And since no Western religion (i.e., any religion based on the Bible) has ever posited that people are basically good, this naivete is abetted by secularism, which allows for the pursuit of knowledge but destroys wisdom.

Only the naive — or willfully ignorant — could equate support for Donald Trump with Nazism. Are most Israeli Jews Nazis? Are a third of America's Jews Nazis? (Many on the left would probably answer yes, which gives you an idea how mean and sick many on the left are.)

2. Boredom

Boredom, at least in our time, is the most overlooked source Why would middle-class Americans — people who have of evil. In the past, before people went to college and abandoned more affluence, more opportunity, better health, better religion — the two greatest reasons there is so much moral health care and more liberty than almost anyone alive in the idiocy in our time — people knew how dangerous boredom was. "Idle hands are the devil's workshop" was a commonly used aphorism that wouldn't even make sense to most young people

> By bored I am not referring to a lack of things to do. There is more opportunity to do and experience things today than ever before. By bored I mean a deep boredom of the soul, what the French call "ennui." This is the boredom that emanates from lack of purpose and a yearning for excitement.

> The combination of affluence and secularism produces boredom as surely as the combination of hydrogen and oxygen produces water. Without affluence, people have a built-in purpose: obtaining food and shelter, supporting oneself and one's family, etc. And religion, with or without affluence, likewise has always provided people with meaning. Without religion, therefore, purpose is often lost. Add to that the number of people who are not married and do not have children (also a result of the combination of affluence and secularism) and you remove another universal source of meaning.

> A disproportionate percentage of those on the left (not traditional liberals) do not lack for material needs, have no religion and are single and/or childless. Those left-wing screamers you see in restaurants, the left-wing mobs on campus, the left-wing "antifa" thugs and the left-wing Black Lives Matter demonstrators who close down bridges and highways do not generally consist of married people with children who attended church the previous Sunday.

> These people find this lack of purpose assuaged by leftism. It provides meaning and excitement, a very heady combination.

These are a few explanations. In Part II I will offer others.

What's at stake if Kavanaugh joins the court

By Olivia Alperstein

President Donald Trump has nominated Judge Brett Kavanaugh to replace former Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy. Why should you care? Because everything from reproductive rights to voting, education, and health care is now at stake.

Kavanaugh, a judicial ideologue committed to pulling the Court further to the right, may also reverse decades of key rulings that uphold the constitutional right to personal liberty and autonomy.

All Americans say they value personal freedom, especially the right to make our own decisions about our private lives. Every day, we take that liberty for granted, from exercising our right to free speech to lighting up sparklers on the Fourth of July. Cherishing our liberties is as American as apple pie — but our right to exercise those liberties could be undone.

Nowhere is the issue more critical than on reproductive rights. Kavanaugh's nomination will mean a major battle to undo key protections in Roe v. Wade, the landmark 1973

Supreme Court case that firmly established the right to access safe, legal abortion.

Striking down Roe would immediately outlaw abortion in states where pre-Roe anti-abortion laws are technically still on the books. As many as 22 states could be impacted over the course of two years.

That's bad enough. But it's also critical to remember the reasoning behind the historic 7-2 ruling: that people have a constitutional right to privacy.

Specifically, the Supreme Court upheld and enshrined the protections included in the First, Fourth, Ninth, and Fourteenth Amendments, holding that those protections applied to decisions a person might make about their own body.

Ultimately, that decision informed several other critical rulings, including cases that forbade bans on same-sex romantic relationships and affirmed the right to same-sex marriage. According to Roe, the right to make your own choices is one of the founding principles that govern this country.

If Roe is overturned, that could set off a chain reaction that upends this critical foundation behind other landmark cases both those that came before and those that came after.

Judicial precedent set by the Supreme Court has built a solid foundation for interpretation of the law — but all it takes is a stacked court to have that foundation tumble like a house of Supreme Court appointments are for life. The rulings these

Magnolia tree

Dear Editor:

In Apollo Park is a Magnolia tree planted 67 years ago by the Old River School Mothers Club to commemorate the soldiers who gave their lives in the Korean War.

I'm not an arborist, but the tree (Magnolia grandiflora) is beginning to struggle for lack of adequate water. There are quite a few dead branches at the top of the canopy.

When they refurbished Apollo Park a few years ago, they added several rows of picnic tables in the vicinity of the tree and paved the entire area with crushed granite. The granite is practical, and looks nice in the picnic area, but they covered the entire area around the tree with seemingly no allowances for properly watering it.

The Magnolia tree is native to the wetter temperate forests of the southeastern United States. They withstand heat well but require regular watering in order to thrive in our dry climate.

Parochial schools

I read the article in the June 29 issue of the Downey Patriot talking about Downey history. My parents moved to Downey in 1946. I have resided in my home since 1967.

The article, written by Bobbie Bruce of the Downey Historical Society, mentioned that in 1948 there were two parochial schools in Downey. I was in the ninth grade in 1948 and lived in Downey and attended St. Matthias school in the ninth and tenth grades.

After consulting with a lady named Sade West (nee Kindness) and after asking her about the article, she thought as I do about no parochial schools in Downey that year. At the time, Downey and Bellflower were part of L.A. County. The cities were not incorporated at that time as I remember.

St. Raymond's Church and school were not built until 1956. I think Pius X High School did not start until the 50's sometime. St. John Bosco High was a boarding school; my parents could not afford to send me there.

I have not spoken with Larry Latimer or anyone about the article. I wonder if Bobby Bruce can enlighten me.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

Summer is here, and with it, even more sun and its ultraviolet

We've gotten pretty good at using sunscreen to protect our bare skin from UV rays, right? What about our naked eyes? Here is what we all need to know about sunglasses.

In a recent survey, less than half of 10,000 Americans recognized the health benefits of sunglasses, and 27% reported never wearing host of conditions are caused by ultraviolet (UV) radiation? Some not all the same. They can cost very little, or quite a bit. How do of the eye problems that the sun can cause include:

* Cataracts, a clouding of the eye's lens which makes what Health Organization reports that approximately 900,000 people A pair is acceptable if it offers UV protection of at least 95%. worldwide are blind due to cataracts.

*Pterygium, also called surfer's eye, is a growth of tissue over the white part of the eye's surface. This can alter the curve of the eyeball, leading to astigmatism.

*Skin cancers, which can be found on the eyelid. In fact, they are surprisingly common there, representing about 10% of all skin cancers.

*Photokeratitis, essentially a sunburn of the eye. Fortunately it is temporary, and typically heals within 48 hours. It can be painful, and cause blurred vision, sensitivity to light, and the sensation of having sand in the eye.

So, this is why it is so important to protect our eyes from the them. Does it make sense to leave our eyes unprotected, when a harmful affects of UV rays! Now let's discuss sunglasses. They are we choose the right pair?

The most important thing to consider is that brand and price we see appear darker and blurry. Some 20% of cataracts are matter far less than does selecting a pair that blocks out both triggered by excessive exposure to UV rays, and the World UVA and UVB radiation (UVB is actually more harmful than UVA).

Avoid sunglasses that are not labeled at all. Recently I visited

*Macular degeneration, a result of damage to the retina that a sunglass kiosk where there were no such labels, and was told destroys central vision. It is the leading cause of blindness in the that they had been removed to make the sunglasses look more attractive. Perhaps that was the truth, but nevertheless, I took my business elsewhere!

> Consider that the ideal sunglasses are wraparounds, which protect us from UV rays coming in from the sides. And, note that even if your contact lenses have UV protection, wearing sunglasses is still important. Pay special attention to wearing them at higher altitudes where the UV rays are even more intense, and when you are near water or snow. Some medications can cause even greater sensitivity to light, including certain antibiotics, nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) and diuretics.

> Please get into the habit of wearing your sunglasses year-round. Cloudy days do not stop UV rays! Please remember that children's eyes are even more susceptible to UV rays. While you're at it, throw in a wide brimmed hat for extra protection. It

Shared Stories: I Saw the Inside of Hell

Anthony Caldwell is one of the thousands who worked at the fabled Bethlehem Steel plant in Vernon. Anthony's graphic description of the process of making steel highlights the powerful forces required for this product so necessary to our way of life. There has to be a heaven because I saw the inside of hell.

In the 1970's you could get a job doing anything. All you had to do was have the qualifications, or 'lie' about it. I got a job at 'Big Beth' - Bethlehem Steel in Vernon, California.

Bethlehem Steel recycled steel from scrap yards, junk yards, home products and the plant ran twenty-four hours a day.

On Vernon Avenue, cars waiting for trains or traffic lights to change had to roll up their windows to keep the heat out. The plant sat right next to the street and the heat came from red-hot raised up and moved with its hundreds of cables of copper wires ingot cars coming out of the melt-ladle department.

My job with the maintenance department was to lube the equipment while it was working. You had to be fast, unless all was locked-out (stopped).

We were on top of the red-hot heat ovens powered by natural gas and whose covers were made of bricks. If you had the bricks fail, well, goodbye! That didn't scare me too bad.

But on top of the gantry crane, overlooking the electric, carbon-arc melting crucibles, the foreman called, "Hang on! We have to make a dump into the melt. So stay put!

The 50-ft. gantry crane started moving down the hundredyard long dark, dirty building. It picked up a dump container junk steel was in it and went back to the electric melt-crucibles the electric power returned. department.

I looked over the side and my hand brushed the black, gritty the spot. slag – dust – over the side. The top of the forty-foot wide lid and carbon arc electrodes swinging out of the way.

I looked down at the white-hot and red molten steel and slag. The dump container opened its bottom and the contents poured into the molten brew.

Then all hell broke loose. Explosions - red, green, purple, black, yellow - clouds like a storm enveloped us and the gantry crane!

Breathing the whirlwind of complete pollution was impossible! You had to cover your face and your dust mask with anything handy. I did my best with paper towels and felt my skin react to many poisonous types of chemicals.

Finally the gantry crane moved away from the big pot and the full of refrigerators, electric irons, pots, pans, and whatever lid swung back and closed. Then the cables started dancing, and

SHORT STORY: The Attack

By Jennifer Martinez

The sun began to disappear, the evening air was cool and light. The wind blew the flowers lightly in the meadow which made everything so calm, so beautiful, so delicate.

Yet I sat there and thought to myself: How can I take control? How do I stop this? How do I handle this? Will I just continue to gain pressure and allow my anxiety level to rise? How can I control my breathing? How do I allow this to happen without panicking?

He put his arm around me as if to comfort me, and suddenly my heart began to race. I felt the sweat begin to form at my

With every breath, I felt my heart pound more and more; every inhale and exhale got faster and faster. My heart increased in speed; it felt as if it was going to beat right out of my chest. My mouth slowly dried up. With every breath, my eyes wandered somewhere else, yet they stayed glued to the floor.

I remembered the flowers, there were sunflowers that trapped over, multi-colored lilies, lupines, wildflowers, and foxtails. I could see the roots of each flower, how they are intertwined, causing there to be no path in the meadow, just flowers upon

I took control of my breathing and my heartrate slowly decreased back to a normal speed. Suddenly I felt his eyes staring at me -- my stomach dropped to the floor, and my heart rate increased speed again. With my head still down, I slowly looked

He used his finger to lift my head, and stole a kiss; a deep, stern, yet refreshing kiss. His smooth lips brushed over mine, it felt like he had painted a picture with his lips, and mine were the canvas. It had instantly brought my heart rate to a normal speed. His touch of a kiss had calmed me.

I thought to myself: Learn, learn how to take control. Breathe, decrease heart rate, take control: the ringing in my ears turns to muffled noises. It felt like so much time has passed by when I heard something past the noise in my ears.

The noise was him. He began to rub my arm and softly said, "Breathe, slowly, with me, in 1, 2, 3 out, 1, 2, 3 again, in, out, there you go.'

As he helped me take control, I thought: How... How does he do it? How does he control it so well? How are his attacks minimized? How does he know how to cope with it so well? How does he know how to help me?

I know he suffers from the same disease. Yet he handles it so much better than me. Still, I am comforted by his touch, his voice, it now calms me, it now has a new effect on me. But at times it's the cause of my anxiety; I wonder what triggers and what calms?

I continued to think and wonder, as half of me listened to him. He instructed me, calmed me. Finally, I was back to a normal heart rate. We talked about him picking me up again the next

Downey's flood of 1886

Ms. Josie McKellar MaGee (sister of Ms. Judy McKellar), a pioneer school teacher for many years, kept a diary and recorded events of her early days in Downey.

Her comments about the flood of 1886 noted that on January 18, school started as normal with good attendance even in spite of the weather. It rained incessantly from the middle of forenoon, until night. One by one pupils and teachers went home through mud and rain. The school trustees said school must stop until better weather. She stated she had a wet walk home in spite of overshoes and umbrella. At night, the rain came down in a perfect flood, and the wind blew loudly. It seemed to rain all night.

Tuesday, January 19 - There was water everywhere. The rivers were up and many homes were deluged. The County bridge was gone and railroad is impassible along with wires being down.

Parties went to rescue a man who was surrounded by water. The water was up to shoulder height - much damage was down in town, and many houses have been swept away. Later found out several lives were lost. One man and his team had been caught on the First Street bridge as both ends of it having gone down.

Wednesday January 20 - Heard particulars of flood in Los Angeles and noted how terrible to be cut off from life for some people for hours - with no warning.

Thursday, January 21 -Ma and Father, Florence Newcombe, Willie and I along with many others went down to New River today to see signs of the overflow. Fences were down, roads washed away, R.R. tracks turned in various directions and water stood in high ponds in many places.

Men were occupied on both sides constructing a footbridge of ropes and planks. A neat looking structure finally afford a wavering foot-hold for the anxious travelers to connect with their homes and to start their business affairs.

60 Words

to celebrate the Downey Symphony Orchestra's 60th anniversary

A core group of Downey residents interested in music, formed in 1948, decided in 1957 to try something big: the newly-incorporated city needed a symphony orchestra. They formed a board, hired a conductor to audition and rehearse musicians, located a performance site, set a date for a concert. Publicity went out. Then everyone held their breath. Would the fledgling fly?

POETRY MATTERS

Essay

So many poems about the deaths of animals. Wilbur's toad, Kinnell's porcupine, Eberhart's squirrel, and that poem by someone - Hecht? Merrill? about cremating a woodchuck. But mostly I remember the outrageous number of them, as if every poet, I too, had written at least one animal elegy; with the result that today when I came to a good enough poem by Edwin Brock about finding a dead fox at the edge of the sea I could not respond; as if permanent shock had deadened me. And then after a moment I began to give way to sorrow, not merely because part of my being had been violated and annulled, but because all these many poems over the years have been necessary - suitable and correct. This has been the time of the finishing off of the animals. They are going away - their fur and their wild eyes, their voices. Deer leap and leap in front of the screaming snowmobiles until they leap out of existence. Hawks circle once or twice above their shattered nests and then they climb to the stars. I have lived with them fifty years, we have lived with them fifty million years, and now they are going, almost gone. I don't know if the animals are capable of reproach. But clearly they do not bother to say good-bye.

- Hayden Carruth, "Brothers, I Have Loved You All," Copper Canyon

Press, 1978

Today any poet's celebration of nature includes a sense of cultural responsibility. Carruth ruefully acknowledges that nature in not impressed with his inventory of poems of atonement and praise. Poetry Matters is curated by Lorine Parks.
