Warren High named a national top 5 school for social inclusion

Warren High earned the honor for creating an "environment of inclusion" on campus.

U.S. Olympic ice skater Michelle Kwan was among those in attendance at a celebration rally Tuesday.

DOWNEY - Warren High School was honored Tuesday by ESPN and Unified Champion Schools for being named a national Special Olympics Unified Champion School.

This prestigious national recognition has named Warren one of five "ESPN Top 5" Banner Schools in the country for their strides in social inclusion.

ESPN and representatives from the Special Olympics were present to provide Warren with this national designation. Also joining the Warren Bears for this celebration was former Olympic ice-skater Michelle Kwan, ESPN SportCenter host Neil Everett and Assemblymember Cristina Garcia.

The pep-rally style ceremony was led by Diego and Karen, two Warren High School students who have been a part of Warren's inclusion revolution.

ESPN's Everett took the mic, revealing his "Bear Cave" shirt, while hyping up the crowd. He then introduced Olympian Kwan who congratulated Warren for creating an environment of inclusion on campus, referencing that "she sees first-hand the impact that the Special Olympics has on thousands of lives.

"What you guys have done is so special. You're pioneers of inclusion," exclaimed Everett as he addressed the crowd during the ceremony. "I think the world would be a better place if the world was more like Warren."

Warren High School principal Laura Rivas then took the stage to speak to the crowd followed

Beginning the effort of creating a unified campus nearly 10 years ago, Warren has bridged the gap between the general education population and students with special needs.

Lilac: Rock, roll and family

The Downey rock band is beginning to find success on a national level.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY - Take a stroll down Santa Monica Pier, and you're extremely likely to come across a group of young musicians jamming out in the vein of hard rock legends such as Metallica, Ozzie Osbourne, and Ronnie James Dio. More than just a talented ensemble, there is a deeper bond between them.

They're Liliac, and they're not just Rock and Roll, they're family.

The five-piece band is made up of the Cristea siblings; three brothers and two sisters ranging from ages 11 to 19.

According to Melody Christea, the band's formation is credited to the family patriarch. "It all started with our dad;

he actually is a music producer, said Melody. "He was the one that created the band. Basically, he gave us all instruments that we fell in love with, and then we found our genre of music and we fell in love with what we are doing right now.'

Father Florin Cristea, 39, also serves as the band's manager.

He says that his kids "grew up around the studio."

"I saw that they had a talent, that's how it started," said Florin. "I said for everybody to be involved, they had to play an instrument. So, I assigned each one an instrument, took them to Downey Music Center where they took lessons for three years, and then from there the band started."

"At the beginning I was trying to give them an activity...if they stayed home, they'd just play video games every Saturday and Sunday, so on the weekend when they have no school there's a chance to be

Downey space center anticipates 'one giant leap' in 2019

Columbia Memorial Space Center will celebrate several aerospace milestones this year.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY -With two anniversaries upcoming, 2019 looks set to be huge for The Columbia Memorial Space Center.

2019 will mark the 50th anniversary of the Apollo Moon landing, where astronauts Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin took man's first steps on the moon.

Because of Downey's rich and deep historical aerospace roots, CMSC Director Ben Dickow has said that the museum will feature plenty of exhibits, programs and activities, and events to pay homage to the landmark event.

"July 20 is 50 years since humanity stepped on the moon. Because this is where all that stuff was designed and built, we've made a really big play to be the Southern California hub of the celebration around that," said Dickow. "Starting with a special exhibit on Nov. 30 of this year, going all the way into Dec. of 2019 and maybe a little beyond, we'll be doing a ton of Apollo related

Part of the celebration includes a speaker series, which will feature several individuals who worked on the Apollo program. This also includes a partnership with the Los Angeles Public Library to get a smaller version of the series out to their various branches. While

"We want to make this moonwalk, Dickow says that CMSC will "stand out from the crowd.' "We have this asset that nobody else does which is access to the people who actually built this stuff," said Dickow. "There's no other location out there that has the number of first-hand stories that we can tell, so we're going to capitalize on that next year.'

out there performing."

The Cristea's are a common sight at Santa Monica Pier, having performed there most weekends for the past several years and drawing crowds of a couple hundred people while establishing their fan base.

Liliac consists of 19-year-old lead guitarist Samuel, 18-yearold drummer Abigail, 17-yearold frontwoman Melody on bass guitar and vocals, 12-year-old Ethan on rhythm guitar, and youngest brother Justin, 11, on keyboards.

The band name translates to "vampire bat" in Romanian, where the siblings' parents are from; Florin even claims to have been born not far from the Castle of Dracula.

In addition to giving up most of their weekends, the Cristea children are also home schooled in an effort to dedicate as much time as possible to their music. Samuel, Abigail, and Melody also graduated early at 16 to free up precious rehearsal time.

The band's number of fans has steadily grown with over 48,000 subscribers on YouTube. 20,800 followers on Instagram, and 8,400 likes on Facebook.

These fans also include a wellknown member of an iconic rock

"Stuart Copeland - he's the drummer for the band The Police - he's a big known drummer," said Abigail. "I still remember the day he came over and jammed with us; he got on my drum set and played. He's an overall nice person, and he's a fan of us so that means a lot."

"It's very insane. It's mind-

"He rides his bike every weekend by the pier and he saw us many times and stopped and filmed us secretly," added Florin.

This led to an opportunity to be featured in a documentary alongside Copeland, which aired on BBC 4.

Liliac released their first original album, Chain of Thorns,

Creating their own music - of course - has also been a complete family effort.

"Basically, it starts with the riff. I'm the guitarist so I come up with the guitar riffs, then we show everyone. If they like it [Abigail] comes up with the groove," said Samuel. "My dad and Melody come up with the melody lines for the songs and then we come together to write the lyrics. Then if we think the song is really good then we record

"We try to write relatable songs that everyone can relate

"Sometimes they have their differences," added Florin. "But we always go for what is the best thing for the band. That is the final decision."

In addition to their new album, the group was recently featured on the CBS's new talent show "The World's Best."

Beyond all the exciting developments immediately imminent for the band, the group hopes to continue making music and expand past the Santa Monica Pier.

> "We want to keep making music and touring the world," said Samuel. 'Gaining more fans, the rock

Report: Columbus among poorest performing schools in state

Columbus High School ranked in the bottom 5 percent in a study by the California Department of Education.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY - Columbus High School is among California's performing schools, according to a new state report.

A study drafted by the California Department Education listed Downey's continuation school amongst the lowest five percent academically in the state, using data pulled from the California School Dashboard, which measures school performance using factors such as suspension and graduation rates, college and career readiness, and subject performance.

The Dashboard ranks each from red, to orange, to yellow, to green, to blue, representing poorer performance up to highest performance respectively.

On this ranking system, Columbus scored a yellow ranking in suspension rates and graduation rates, while scoring reds in college and career readiness, mathematics, and English language arts.

By comparison, Downey High School received yellows in college / career readiness, mathematics and English language arts, a green in suspension rate and blue in graduation rate.

Warren scored slightly lower than Downey, earning oranges in suspension rates and mathematics, yellows in English language arts and college / career readiness, and blue in graduation

> "This is the first-time alternative education schools have been included within the Dashboard results, so with this initial baseline-data we are happy to receive these results to both celebrate our areas of achievement and work on the areas that need to be improved.

"Clearly test scores are important, but the focus at Columbus High School is more than test scores, it's the whole child. With the largest number of students that are categorized as 'at risk' we work every day to provide them with academic support as well as the social and emotional support needed to make them successful upon graduation.

Space center plans celebration for Apollo 11 anniversary

Special hands-on, Apollorelated STEM programs are also being designed for the over yearlong celebration.

"This is a big deal. We would be crazy not to capitalize on this huge anniversary," said Dickow.

Plus, as a special tribute to the landing, the Space Center hopes to host a slew of more intensive, immersive activities to engage and involve the community.

"Apollo 11 launched July 16 and it came back on July 24," said Dickow. "It just so happens that the 20th in 2019 is on a Saturday. That whole week we want to have more intensive events like reenactments of stuff.'

"Downey had a mission control...we're going reconfigure the mission control that's part of the Challenger learning Center to make it look like the old Mission Support room, and do some reenactments there."

This will include a collaboration with the Nixon Library. President Richard Nixon made the famous phone call to the moon.

CMSC also plans to live tweet the mission during the anniversary week.

For fans of the popular "Dapper Days" at Disneyland, CMSC has a real treat.

"We would love to do a citywide 'Walk Back into 1969' Day, maybe on the 20th," said Dickow. "The dream is to have everybody in town dress like 1969 and meet up at a few locations that were around 50 years ago just to watch Oct. 23 next year.

one day about the moon landing."

For those who are fans of the CMSC's annual events and activities, never fear; popular CMSC mainstays such as Rocket Fever, Space Expo and Long Beach Comic Con, and its participation in City of Stem will not be phased, now including some moon landing footprints (no pun intended).

"It's going to pop up throughout the year and just sort of layer on to what we do already," said Dickow.

On top of the Apollo anniversary, CMSC will also be celebrating its own anniversary on "It all lines up," said Dickow.

Dickow hopes that both "Basically, we want to do a anniversaries will help bring 'Dapper Day' for a whole town on more patrons and attention to the already growing Space Center.

"We feel that this is going to be a national story and it should drive attendance, hopefully it'll drive membership," said Dickow. 'It gets us out into the world a little bit more and with a bigger playing field.'

"A year ago, this was the future, but now we're almost in 2019. Now I'm starting to think 'how do we follow this up?'... We're already starting to become if not the, maybe the second or third place that people think about for this kind of stuff. In the next five years, we can really be the place for this kind of stuff."

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

Growth in humans and other animals is stimulated by naturally produced growth hormones. In 1950s, the approved the use of *artificial*growth hormones to enhance the growth rate cattle and poultry, as well as to increase egg, dairy, and meat production.

Artificial growth hormones are quite effective at expanding our food supply and increasing profits for the food industry, but just how safe is it when we end up consuming them in the foods we eat? Concerns include cancer, early puberty in girls, and other issues. Consumer advocates have fought for years to support a ban similar to one in Europe, where regulations are generally more stringent.

One of the earliest artificial growth hormones to be approved was *recombinant bovine growth *(RBGH), hormone which increases milk production by dairy cows. Although RBGH has been shown to have no discernible direct effect in humans, is it possible that using growth hormone may increase the presence of another hormone, *insulin-like growth diabetes as well.

factor*(IGF)? One study found that milk from cows that had been given RBGH contains up to 10 times more IGF. Higher levels of IGF have been associated with an increased risk of breast, prostate and colon cancers in humans, and there may be a higher risk for Happy Valentine's Day to my daughter Samantha Mia Gonzalez who I love every single day of the year. You are the sweetest thing that's ever come into my life. It has been fascinating watching you grow with such grace. May God guide you and bless > you always. Love Mom

However, even if consuming milk, other dairy, and some fish does indeed raise human blood levels of IGF, the amount appears to be negligible compared to the much higher amount that is naturally found in our body. To match the amount of IGF found in our saliva and digestive tract, we would need to drink about 95 quarts of milk, or eat 170 threeounce servings of genetically modified salmon in a single day.

It is possible, however, that even negligible increases might be enough to cause harm. Unfortunately, this question has not been conclusively answered

Also dating from the 1950s, ranchers began to fatten up cattle with sex hormones, including estrogen. Today, most beef cows in the United States have an implant in an ear that delivers these hormones. One major concern is that once this beef enters the human food supply, it may lead to earlier puberty (note that today's children, on average, enter puberty at a younger age than did those of a generation

However, once again, the amount of estrogen found in beef is tiny compared to the levels that are naturally in our bodies. Could even miniscule amounts of estrogen affect prepubescent girls and boys? One study showed that children who consumed the most protein from animal sources entered puberty about seven months earlier than those who consumed the least.

However, it is still not clear whether this is purely a result of hormones added to the food supply, and not due to a number of other factors.

Note that organic meat, poultry, eggs and dairy products arecertified by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to have nohormones or antibiotics added. These foods also come with a much higher price tag. While some experts recommend staying away from all hormone-treated beef and milk, others suggest simply limiting consumption of meat to twice per week and dairy to three servings per day.

The data gathered does not yet show conclusive serious harmful effects from the use of these hormones, but in my opinion, concerns are valid. More research is needed, and in the meantime, we each must come to our own conclusions as to whether changing our diets, or our shopping habits, is worth it.

Your grandchildren are already in debt

By Steven Rattner

Medicare for All. The Green New Deal. Free college tuition.

With each new entrant into the Democratic presidential sweepstakes comes a fresh cascade of ambitious social programs to entice and excite would-be supporters.

The list of "payfors," to use a bit of Washington jargon, grows more slowly. They'll pay for this how, again? Tax the rich, tax the rich — or take cover behind a convenient bit of progressive dogma: Don't worry about the fiscal impact because America's rising budget deficits and debt levels don't much matter.

That's a scary drift of thought, and it should set off alarm bells for all Americans. Vast increases in debt will ultimately compromise Washington's ability to maintain its current array of spending programs, let alone add new ones, and threaten our standard of living.

A short history: While Republicans once were the party of fiscal responsibility, President Ronald Reagan threw that out the window by embracing enormous tax cuts justified by a fiction: the idea that the resulting growth would more than pay for them.

More than a decade later, President Bill Clinton nursed the budget back into surplus, only to have President George W. Bush force through his own tax cuts. His vice president, Dick Cheney, once reportedly said, "Reagan proved deficits don't matter."

That attitude, plus the puncturing of the dot-com bubble, two wars and a financial crisis, brought us our first $1 trillion gap in 2009. But by 2015, President Barack Obama had whittled the deficit down to $439 billion

Then came President Trump, with his vast tax cuts along with a bipartisan move to abandon spending restraint with the fiscal 2018 budget. The resulting legislation added $400 billion to the deficit, according to an estimate from the Committee for a Responsible Budget, and the consequence is a deficit for the current fiscal year of nearly $900 billion.

On present course and speed, the United States is on track to experience the highest deficits in its history, reaching more than $2 trillion a year by 2029. Those annual gaps are projected to bring America's total debt to nearly $33 trillion by that date, according to the Committee for a Responsible Budget. That's double today's level and more than the size of our economy, a peacetime record.

One concern often raised by deficit hawks is that so much borrowing by the government could force interest rates higher, making it harder for businesses to borrow and reducing the amount of capital available to the private sector. In the worst case scenario, they fear that credit markets could partially or completely shut down, putting a hard brake on the economy

While that's not impossible, my principal fear is that all this irresponsible borrowing amounts to intergenerational theft. America is simultaneously indulging in two deficit-busting desires: for lower taxes and for robust government programs. Eventually, the interest on all the debt will force the governments of future generations to reverse those fiscally imprudent policies in order to pay for today's profligacy.

It's like a couple in their 40s deciding to borrow money to sustain a lavish lifestyle and then leaving the debts for their kids to pay off after they're gone.

But that's not all. The generally accepted measure of America's national debt doesn't include obligations for future retirement and health care benefits.

In a perfect world, those programs would function like insurance; each generation's annual premiums would pay for support received during its golden years. That principle was abandoned long ago. Based on the current demographics of the American population, we would need to set aside $49 trillion to make the Medicare and Social Security Trust Funds truly solvent.

Meanwhile, progressives argue that certain kinds of spending are, in reality, investments that will bring large dividends in the future. With interest rates still near historic lows, they contend that the returns from borrowing for these investments would greatly exceed interest costs.

While that's true, deciding what is an investment and what is just an expense with no potential return would inevitably become a political debate. Democrats and Republicans might quickly agree about investing in building roads and bridges but what about spending on education? Should that be considered an investment? What about work force training or research and development? I fear that in the end, many spending programs would be classified as investments simply to make the budget deficit appear smaller.

Regardless, taxes need to go up, starting with unwinding the Trump tax cuts for individuals, which favored the rich. Next, we should take a tougher look at corporate taxation. Reducing the corporate tax rate to maintain our global competitiveness made sense, but it didn't need to go all the way from 35 percent to 21 percent.

Then there are potential new sources of tax revenue. I've expressed support, for example, for eliminating the special treatment of capital gains and dividends. Let's also reform overly generous estate tax provisions. While I'm all for putting most of the burden on the rich, we need to be mindful of realistic boundaries to ensure that tax avoidance or even expatriation don't start to rise.

On the spending side, unfortunately, taking a hard look at the entitlements programs is essential. I'm not suggesting eviscerating them, but ideas like modestly raising the retirement age or scaling benefits based on need should be explored.

room for expansive new social programs. Adopting those would require still tougher choices about raising taxes and trimming spending.

Even implementing all these adjustments won't prudently provide

If we care about our kids and the country we are leaving them, Americans will make these tough decisions instead of continuing to duck them.

Grand Canyon University's disgraceful cancellation

By David Limbaugh

It's disturbing that Grand Canyon University canceled a speaking event on its campus by Ben Shapiro arranged by the student organization Young Americans for Freedom. Under criticism, the university folded.

An outspoken and hard-hitting conservative, Shapiro has been protested and threatened, as well as disinvited by other schools, but it is troubling that a Christian school, especially one that holds itself out as a Bible-believing institution, caved to leftist thought-police bullies rather than promote the free exchange of ideas in the public square.

In its statement of cancellation, the school hid behind its desire to unite all communities, elevating that "virtue" above all others, including the freedom of academic inquiry and open dissemination of ideas — not to mention the school's own mission statement. It is particularly objectionable that the university would reflexively acquiesce to the insidious leftist notion that right-wing ideas are inherently divisive rather than recognize that a greater threat of divisiveness emanates from those who demand that politically conservative views be silenced. Has it even occurred to this feckless institution that disunity does not evaporate when you suppress expression or that such suppression may very well exacerbate

The school stated: "We believe in many of the things that Ben Shapiro speaks about and stands for, including his support for ideals that grow out of traditional Judeo-Christian values and his belief in a free market economy. Our decision to cancel Shapiro's speaking engagement is not a reflection of his ideologies or the values he represents, but rather a desire to focus on opportunities that bring people together."

Excuse me, but how much do you really believe these things if you are not willing to allow people to articulate them on campus because of your fear of vocal opposition? How important are these beliefs to you if at the first hint of conflict you effectively abandon them, thereby lending credence to the protesters' position that these ideas are innately offensive and divisive?

Why not demonstrate the courage of your professed convictions and respond that you will not be intimidated by those who demand censorship? Why not call out the objectors for their intellectual intolerance and affirmatively state that the communication of ideals you believe in is not divisive but healthy?

Our society and its institutions are increasingly falling for this misguided notion that unity and harmony are the greatest virtues and should be promoted at all costs. It is gloriously fortunate that the Black Robe Regiment — Colonial preachers active at our founding and promoting the cause of independence — did not suffer from the same type of pathetic indifference to the cause of the American Revolution, or else we wouldn't be having this debate, and you wouldn't be able to even pretend to believe in ideals that flow from the great American experiment in constitutional governance.

If you truly believe that bringing people together is the highest good, then why do you even bother to promote the Gospel? Haven't you heard that millions find it offensive and that many of Jesus' and the Apostle Paul's statements are considered hate speech today? It would be bad enough if your mission statement endorsed some watered-down version of the Gospel, but you hold yourselves out as adhering to Christian orthodoxy and expressly embracing the Nicene Creed, which, among other things, does not look favorably on theological heresies. Thank God that the Creed's formulators didn't have a lukewarm attitude toward doctrine. It's one thing to have a strong mission statement; it's another to honor it.

I'm not fond of the practice of "proof-texting," or cherry-picking Scripture in support of arguments, but I think these arresting words of Jesus' are quite applicable here: "I have come to bring fire on the earth, and how I wish it were already kindled! But I have a baptism to undergo, and what constraint I am under until it is completed! Do you think that I came to bring peace on earth? No, I tell you, but division. From now on there will be five in one family divided against each other, three against two and two against three. They will be divided, father against son and son against father, mother against daughter and daughter against mother, mother-in-law against daughter-in-law and daughter-in-law against mother-in-law."

stand for his Gospel, which is guaranteed to offend vast swaths of human beings who visit your campus and possibly even students who attend. Does your unwavering priority to foster unity supersede the Gospel truth? Do you — or will you in the future — muzzle yourself in service to it?

If you are going to stand for Christ, you have to be willing to Preach unity all you want, but at what cost are you willing to pursue this ephemeral aspiration? Indeed, I wonder whether it is actually unity you seek or freedom from criticism from notoriously vocal leftist ideologues. What a regrettable turn of events!

The President and chilling free speech

By Judge Andrew Napolitano

While the public discourse has been consumed over the realization that abortion physicians actually let viable babies who survive late-term abortions die — as well as whether President Donald Trump or House Speaker Nancy Pelosi will blink first over the issue of congressional authorization for building a wall at the country's southern border, to say nothing of the race- and sexinfused mess at the top of the government in Virginia — a profound free speech issue has been bubbling below the radar.

A former White House communications aide and former Trump campaign adviser who has written a blistering tell-all book about the Trump White House now finds himself in litigation about whether he can freely publish his book — which he has already done — and freely profit from it.

The former Trump friend and colleague is Cliff Sims, and his book is called "Team of Vipers." It makes Chris Christie's book about his bitter experiences with those around the president look as if it were written by Mother Teresa by comparison. The president and his folks, who knew of the book before it was published, apparently bristled at the stories related and allegations contained and opinions expressed in it.

This is an unhappy tale, not with regard to accuracy or fairness in reporting but with regard to the doctrine of fair comment and the natural and constitutional right to the freedom of speech. Here is the back story.

When Sims began his time as an official of the Trump campaign, he signed a nondisclosure agreement, or NDA. NDAs typically bar the revelation of information gathered during one's employment. They were nearly universal in the Trump campaign.

Sims' NDA also provided that if there was any dispute between him and the campaign over the meaning of the NDA or whether he or the campaign violated it, that dispute would be resolved in secret arbitration, not in a public courtroom in front of a judge and jury. The NDA further provided for liquidated damages — a pre-agreed-upon amount of money that Sims would owe to the campaign if arbitrators found that he violated the NDA.

What about the freedom of speech and the right to a fair trial? The theory of an NDA is that the signer has knowingly waived those rights in return for the employment contemplated by the NDA. This is a quid pro quo. You get hired at a job you want; you get the pay and perks you sought; you agree to keep silent the secrets you learn. And if there is a dispute about what you can say and to whom you can say it, the dispute itself will be resolved in secret because you agreed to that in the NDA. If the arbitrators find that you violated the NDA, you owe a certain amount of money to the other party — in this case,

$10 million to the Trump campaign — whether you caused damages in that amount or not.

That is at least the theory of how these NDAs are supposed to work. The courts do not favor these agreements, because they often stifle free speech — and often it is speech in which there is a material and serious public interest. Yet as they are between private parties, NDAs are enforceable.

In this case, the speech is about Trump — not as a candidate but as the president. So after Sims' book was published and after the folks in the West Wing, where he worked for a year, read what he wrote, the Trump campaign — it still has a skeleton staff and lawyers on the payroll — filed a complaint with the designated arbitration entity, demanding the liquidated damages of $10 million.

Then Sims' lawyers filed a complaint in federal district court, asking a judge to enjoin the arbitration proceeding because what Sims' wrote he learned about while working for the government, not on the campaign. The campaign will no doubt point to an NDA it claims Sims signed when he began his tenure in the West Wing and argue that it applies as effectively as the NDA he signed for the campaign. Sims recalls no NDA at the White House.

Here is the problem for Trump. The campaign is not subject to the First Amendment, but the White House clearly is. Even if Sims did sign an NDA at the White House, the First Amendment bars the government from enforcing it, and several federal statutes protect whistleblowers, no matter what they agreed not to say at the outset of their work, unless it is classified material being protected. In the West Wing, Sims worked for the federal government, not Donald Trump personally and not the campaign.

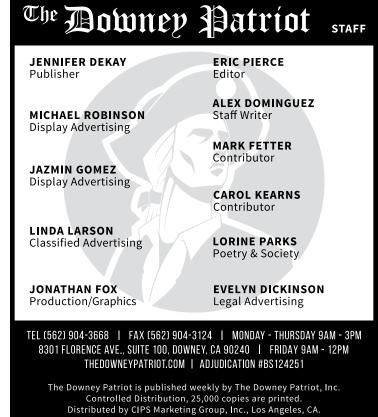

Can the government punish speech of someone who agreed to remain silent? In a word: No. It cannot deter speech, and it cannot chill speech. Chilling takes place when government behavior is so oppressive that the potential speaker is afraid to speak about what he knows

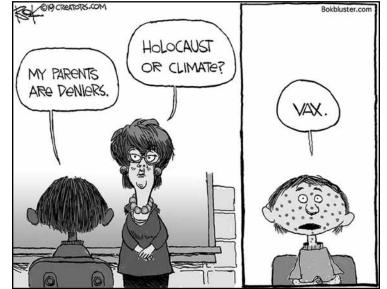

And if the speech is comment about public people or public policy, it is protected by the doctrine of fair comment. That is a Supreme Court rubric underscoring the truism that the whole purpose of the First Amendment is to protect and encourage open, wide, robust speech about the government — speech that sheds light on dark government corners, speech that is unafraid of and immune from the slightest whiff of government redress, speech that can be harsh in tone and discomfiting in delivery.

It is that brand of public free speech that the Framers intended to protect by the First Amendment. As one of President Trump's no-holds-barred predecessors famously said, "if you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

If presidents can use legal artifices to punish the speech they hate and fear, they are no longer presidents in a free society. They are princes in an empire.

Downey Rotary gets first-hand look at Rancho's new outpatient building

Downey Rotary's history with Rancho Los Amigos dates back to

By Lorine Parks Society Columnist

DOWNEY – A blustery rainy morning confronted visiting Rotarians, but it cleared just as everyone arrived at Downey's world famous Rancho Los Amigos (RLA) National Rehabilitation Medical Center. We met in Building, that compliments the new Jacqueline Perry Inpatient Wing of the hospital, which opened in September, and the big Don Knabe Wellness Center. All are part of project Rancho Rising 2020, right on target for completion.

Bill Kirkwood recalled Downey Rotary's history with RLA. Bill Harriman, one of the founders in 1924 of the Rotary Club of Downey, was Superintendent of Rancho when it was still a work farm for the country poor to serve farming families who could not afford medical services.

Bill also remembered that Bill H., for whom the impressive RLA Administration Building is named, sponsored for membership into the Rotary Club of Downey a young man whom he called "The Boy Wonder." Guess who? It was Angelo Cardono, now 91 and the club's - and District 5280'slongest serving member since 1948. As a sailor from Rhode Island freshly discharged from the Navy after World War II, he decided to stay here and make Downey his home.

Deborah Arroyo, Director of the Rancho Foundation, served as hostess and was joined by Walter Afable, Assistant Hospital Administrator. By now nearly 40 members had found their way to the appointed spot, the Auditorium with its pictures windows that showed the lowering Deborah introduced Administrator Eric Zapata, who explained that the Rancho Foundation is the non-profit fund raising arm at RLA, whose purpose is to improve the life of the patients, and enable them to be productive citizens again.

"If you were a skier," said Deborah, "You might think your skiing days were over after your accident. But we organize trips to the slopes in Colorado, and put them out there again. If not on skis, then on a sleigh or toboggan. Kayak trips, surfing. biking, these activities can be made available to patients during and after rehab. So there is life after your accident, and life can be good.

Paul Mathis of the Rotary Club of Downey is Treasurer of the Foundation, and Jesse Vargas, Program Chair, is a member of the Board. Deborah invited everyone to come to the Foundation's Gala Ball on March 23, and Rotarians were handed an elegant envelope. Held at the Westin in Long Beach, the Amistad (Friendship) event is a fun, glamorous evening, and the theme this year is A Black and White Ball. Downeyites Sam and Beverly Matthis will be there, as always: they're deeply involved with the Foundation.. She's a Soroptimist, he's an Optimist, though the service clubs are not related.

Late Rotary member Pat Gomez Pratt, who died in 2014, was for many years President of the Rancho Foundation Board. She also served as President of the Downey Chamber of Commerce and Grand Marshall of the Christmas Parade. As a young hairdresser, Pat gave her Sundays,

Residential • Commercial Apartments • Condominiums

her only day off, for cutting and styling the patients' hair, both men and women, a great moral booster. Later as proprietor of Johnny & Company, Pat even got married at the Amistad Ball, to Cliff Pratt, a Rotarian from the South Gate Club, making cherished memories for many at the Amistad.

Members were divided up into three groups for a tour of the newly opened building, and I joined the one led by Administrator Gilberto Salinas, himself a polio survivor who moved through corridor traffic expertly in his hand-propelled wheelchair.

We stopped by a glass mural wall at the entrance, showing the history of Rancho. Prominent there were Downey Doctors Vern Nickell and Jacqulin Perry. In 1955 they invented the "halo" head brace for patients with spinal or head injuries. And then came Dr. Perry's ground-breaking Gait Analysis studies in 1968, so useful for rehabbing stroke victims. The Downey Symphony will present a Gershwin! Concert in April, dedicated to Dr. Jackie. Today's discoveries at Rancho are almost magical: brain-to-computer interfacing.

We whizzed through marble corridors, up in brushed steel elevators, past the new Rehab Facility, custom designed to meet the special needs of patients. The $190 Million building is a "one-stop shop" where patients can get all their therapy, medical and nursing needs all in one place. "They can even get their prescriptions filled speedily here," Gilbert told us.

We walked through the wide enclosed connectors between Out-Patient Building and Hospital. Everywhere we saw smiling wheelchair patients and workers.

When one employee in dark blue scrubs unexpectedly joined the twelve of us on our elevator ride, she was asked to tell what she does, and she willingly explained

A friendly, casual and up-todate and upbeat place. RLA's new Out-Patient Building is expected to serve an amazing 70,000 patients in 2019. That's a lot of well-spent tax-payers dollars in LA County Supervisor Janice Hahn's Fourth District, doing good work for the community.

Villalobos Brothers delight in Downey appearance

The trio of Mexican musicians spent time with aspiring Downey musicians ahead of their concert at the Downey Theatre last

By Lorine Parks

eady!" said Ernesto, the oldest of the Villalobos Brothers. It was more of a maestro's command than a question, because the entire audience of young people and their young parents were standing on their feet, ready to clap and stamp to the 6/8 time San Jarocha beat the Brothers had just taught them.

The biggest rainstorm of the year couldn't dampen the energy of the Villalobos Brothers, nor the enthusiasm of the 100 or so young people, student musicians who had been invited to come to the interactive demonstration the Brothers gave at 1 pm, the afternoon of their evening concert at the Downey Theatre. The excitement came from both sides of the footlights.

Spotted in the audience was Lars Clutterham, active local Downey musician and Downey Symphony Society Board member, who has been helping to spearhead the Downey Foundation for Educational Opportunities, which operates within the Downey Unified School District.

I sat down in front of Liliana, 10, who plays violin and goes to Gallatin Elementary School. She has been studying for two years, and admitted bashfully that she practices "nearly" every day, and wants to become a musician. "She plays in an ensemble," her mother Elizabeth said.

That would be the Chamber Ensemble Group that Lars has been conducting and writing music for. Liliana's favorite piece to play is "Arc of My Life," a new piece by Lars which the Downey Symphony Orchestra played in its world premiere at the Downey Theatre in January. Her other favorite piece? Beethoven's "Ode to Joy."

Seated beside me were a young family from Old River School Road Elementary. Daughter Abigail, 10, plays the violin and her brother Josue, age 11, plays the guitar. They have lessons at school they said. Both mothers had heard the Brothers before, and knew what a treat was coming.

60 Words

to celebrate the Downey Symphony Orchestra's 60th anniversary

A non-profit's fund-raising is forever. Vigorous work by our two boards has included countless graceful teas, dinner-dances, salon lectures, flea markets, ice cream socials, garden parties, barbecues, bus tours, auctions, baton auctions, boutiques, fashion shows, cooking classes.

Another constant: publicity informing readers of Music in the Schools' educational outreach programs, and every outstanding concert and soloist. Downey has a Symphony!

Compiled by Joyce Sherwin

The house lights dimmed and the backstage was lit with an apricot sunrise glow. Out came the three brothers, with their violins, and their back-up, two acoustical guitars and a drummer. Ernesto as the oldest introduced himself and then Alberto and Luis.

Ernesto said they were going to play and teach us some rhythms from the rich Mexican tradition of their home near the port of Vera Cruz. They began with a spirited folk song, and soon Alberto was dancing a zapateado, a foot–stomping kind of dance with intricate tapping by his polished boots.

Then Ernesto stepped forward and began to play a beautiful high melody, simple and yet obviously complex in its power to mesmerize.

"Everybody up," Alberto said, and proceeded to introduce a fast little 1, 2, 3 clapping melody that syncopated to a 1, 2 and then a 1. Soon everyone was clapping and stamping. Some snapped their fingers. "No words," said Luis. "Just sing ai yi."

"Fantastico." said Ernesto. "How many violins do we have?" and many hands were raised. "Guitars?" Yes. "Drums?" One student nudged another and nodded. And singers?" Many raised their hands for that, Lars included. Boys and girls volunteered to come up to the stage and demonstrate their clapping and stomping prowess. Several pairs of rain boots were on display, as well as sneakers of various colors and heights.

"We participate, in Mexico," said Ernesto, "when we play and when we sing. And by dancing, we all talk together. People don't just come to listen to something beautiful. They come to be part of it."

"When the Brothers offered us this package with the interactive student participation," said Amber Vogel, Venuetech's Theatre Manager, "we were thrilled to have it." Amber held the lobby door open for us as we came in, the rain pounding down behind us. From a table in the lobby, DFEO members gave everyone an 8-page color handout, outlining the Villalobos fascination with the Mexican Folk Music traditions. A checklist showed the students' names, instrument, and years of playing.

"This is so important," said Lars, "to have these kids hear their instruments played at the peak of performance like this."

The term "son" refers to music from the countryside, not the musica of the church and court, in colonial times. There are 80 sones, or songs, in the San Jaracho tradition, and the Brothers played "El Pijol," about a black bird with a long tail and a large, curved beak that loves to cluster in noisy groups.

"How much do you practice?" asked a student during the question period. "When we began it was very little, maybe 15 minutes," said Ernesto. "But we increased that to half an hour, an hour, two hours, four hours. Now seven hours is how much we practice every day."

"How old were you when you began?" asked another youngster. "Maybe... about your age," came the reply.

Actually, the Brothers' cred and props in classical musical are Considered child prodigies, they had early soloist debuts with the Xalapa Symphony Orchestra playing the Sibelius, Brahms, and Saint-Saens violin concertos. They also had solo appearances with the National Symphony Orchestra of Cuba.

"High Octane Mexican Fiddling" said The New Victory Theater; "They develop their own style of playing, called "Fast-Chatting Violin" consisting in a rapid succession of notes and percussive sounds that imitate the human voice."

"These are only labels," says Ernesto, the oldest brother. "We grew up together, making music for many years in the tropics of Veracruz, Mexico."

The Brothers use their violins and their voices to redefine contemporary Mexican music. With masks, poems, traditional Veracruz and European classical music, they layer melody and meter in an exciting new way.

That evening, the audience was treated to original music that featured complex patterns of interwoven three-violin harmonies, intricate call-and-response arrangements and lyrical melodies carried out by one of the brothers as the other two reinforce it in counterpoint.

Evening refreshments of beer, wine and munchies were provided by Soropimist International of Downey. Cecelia Gonez and Donna Lindley admitted they were glad their table had been moved from the patio into the lobby, because of the inclement weather – which, we hoped, would promote sales. All profits go to Soroptimst projects such as preventing human trafficking.

When the Brothers took the stage again at 8 pm, they were dressed casually, Ernest in a blue suit, light blue silk tie and matching headband and white boots. Luis, in the middle, wore all black with the afternoon's red and yellow striped scarf, and Alberto wore black pants with a native geometric print short-sleeved shirt in red, yellow and blue. Alberto and Luis had on polished black boots, for dancing.

They played again in the Son Jarocho genre, the musical style from their native Veracruz, Mexico. Jarocho represents a fusion of indigenous (primarily Huastecan), Spanish, and African musical elements, reflecting the population which evolved in the region from Spanish colonial times. Themes are love, nature, sailors, and cattle breeding. It is often played on jaranas and sung in a style in which several singers exchange improvised verses called décimas, often with humorous or offensive content. A perfect way for the three siblings to show off their talent.

The Brothers are proud of the Fandango at the Wall project in 2018. They joined forces with the Afra Latin Jazz orchestra at a live concert at the Tijuana-San Diego border, to promote cross-border friendship and rapprochement. The ultimate goal of Fandango at the Wall is to bring the people of the United States and Mexico together through music. "After all, we don't just share a border but families and friends, histories and futures," said the Brothers.

Born and raised in Xalapa, Mexico, an hour's drive from the port city of Veracruz, the brothers spent their childhood listening to their grandmother, Cristina Vásquez play music for enjoyment after a day's work, for dancers at a country fandango, or for guests dining in the many coastal seafood restaurants. They sing and play the guitar, the piano and the thin-bodied guitars, jaranas. Original compositions, include "Anochipa Tlalticpac" for chorus, jaranas, and pre-Columbian percussion.

In 2000, Ernesto Villalobos won a Fulbright Grant to the Manhattan School of Music, where he performed at Master Classes led by Pinchas Zukerman and travelled to Israel to study with Shlomo Mintz.

The middle brother, Alberto Villalobos, left Mexico in 2002 and studied violin at the Royal Conservatory of Brussels, and was a student by Pierre Boulez at the Lucerne Festival Academy in Switzerland.

In 2003 the youngest brother, Luis Villalobos, moved to Germany, He was also accepted at the prestigious Mozarteum

'Love Songs' sails to success

Artistic Director Chad Berlinghieri of Cathedral Productions produced the Valentines event "Love Songs" aboard The Queen Mary to rave

As the capacity crowd entered the Queens Salon on Saturday, the feeling of nostalgia was immediate and overwhelming as one could tell that something very special was about to take place.

Downey Police Chaplain Greg Welch of Risher Mortuary provided the blessing over the meal and the night was off and running. The four-piece jazz ensemble played in the background as the cucumber wrapped Caesar salads were served before the entrée of Chicken Florentine drizzled in a basil cream sauce followed by Tiramisu for dessert... Dinner was

In-between the courses the international quartet consisting of Teresa Mai, Roberto Gomez, Melissa Maricich, Chad Berlinghieri and accompanied by pianist Curtis Heard delighted the guests to a standing ovation with classic favorites taken from musical theater and the American Song Book.

The highlight of the evening was the vow renewal of Seal Beach residents Mr. Frank and Linda Park who were celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary that evening.

The event was fortunate to have in attendance Downey Mayor, Rick Rodriguez who honorably presided over the renewal ceremony. As the couple said, "I do" and kissed, the quartet sang "Love Me. That's All I Ask of You!" There wasn't a dry eye in the house.

Following the ceremony, the bell of the ball Sister Eymard Flood of the Sisters of St. Clare dazzled the crowd with her witty jokes and reminded the audience that Cathedral Productions has now shipped and distributed over twelve hundred Isaiah House blankets to the homeless of Southern California in just the last three months.

Seal Beach Knights of Columbus, Risher Mortuary and Downey Rotary have all participated in underwriting the effort that has provided warmth to Downey TLC, Coast to Coast, St. Pius Mathies, St. Columbans and Isaiah House.

After the presentation, pop star Cooper Phillip in her fabulous black gown dazzled the packed dance floor with her spectacular vocals as Downey City Council member Claudia Frometa, her husband Nolveris and their bus load of elegant guests led the effort in dancing the night away. Love reigned supreme!

The Valentine Beside Me

Short Story

By Yolanda Adele Contributor

At 19 years of age my husband, Victor, eagerly volunteered to serve our country as a Marine in the Vietnam crisis. We had been married for almost a year.

We wrote Valentine/love letters to each other; keeping the embers of our love lit for eighteen months while we were apart. We got to know each other by the stream of consciousness that comes from writing.

When my sweetheart came back to the Untied States he continued to be my Valentine. His love and strength has sustained me through currents of painful loses, and disappointments, and he has loved me through the many seasons of my life.

I read of beautiful celebrities that have many lovers and / or husbands, but can't seem to find just one man to give them the love and devotion I get on a daily bases. I feel fortunate to be so blessed. I attribute our on going love affair to the many love letters that left an indelible mark on our young and tender hearts.

My sweetheart doesn't seem to remember my faults. I know because, I have pointed them out to him, and he looks surprised. This may also make him a very wise man.

He is my Valentine in the day-to-day living, of going to work everyday, and in the many roles he plays:

"Honey, the faucet is leaking."

"Dad, will you hang my shelves?"

"Papa, my rocking horse won't rock.'

"Hey neighbor, will you lend me a hand?'

"Son, the tree needs trimming.

He answers everyone's needs with a resounding, "Sure!", or

He doesn't wear a cape (with the letter "V" for Valentine) or carry a saber. However, he is armed with a tool belt, band-aids, strong arms, and a gentle sweet heart. He is not able to leap tall buildings at a single bound, but he rescues, protects, and nurtures his family in ways that he is not even aware of, as he enriches our

In the movies the hero always gets the girl. This much is true of him also. For I have been "his girl" for over 56 years now. That is why when his role and mine on the stage of life are over, I will gladly ride into the sunset with my Valentine at my side.

Cafeteria bill-of-fare

Short Story

By Sharon Benson Smith Contributor

Thumbing through the newspaper this morning, I came across an article about today's kids and the question of eating in our school cafeterias. Try though the government may, they literally hate the food, and most of it ends up in the trash.

This subject created a wrinkle in time for my World War II, plus post wartime, eating in the elementary school cafeteria.

First of all, it wasn't free;

it cost a whopping 25 cents (and in those days 25 cents was whopping!) The cost alone limited everything else on the tray the times I or any of my siblings were able to eat in the cafeteria. It was probably two times per month...tops!

As luck would have it, it seemed as though every time I ate in the cafeteria the menu included carrot-raisin salad. I like carrots; I like raisins, and I like mayonnaise. But the combination of the three made me sick. I hated the stuff. But remember, this was during World War II, and post World War II, and you had to eat everything on your plate. Do you remember hearing "They're starving in Europe?")

I masterminded getting around the "yuk" by eating first, leaving the "yuk" for the very last. Then I stuffed it all in my mouth and, with bulging chipmunk cheeks, made a mad dash to the restroom to spit it all out!

Today, about seventy years later, whenever carrot-raisin salad is on the menu, I pass on the yuk.'

CITY OF DOWNEY NOTICE OF PREPARATION OF A DRAFT PROGRAM ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT REPORT (PEIR)

Notice is hereby given that the CITY OF DOWNEY is commencing with preparation of a Program Environmental Impact Report (PEIR) for the Rancho Los Amigos South Campus Specific Plan (Project), and has released a Notice of Preparation (NOP), in accordance with the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), State CEQA Guidelines, and local implementation procedures. A copy of the NOP is posted at City Hall, City Library, the Barbara J. Riley Senior Center, and on the City's website at www.downeyca.org.

AND NOTICE OF PEIR SCOPING MEETING

The CITY OF DOWNEY will be conducting a PEIR Scoping Meeting on the 25th day of February, 2019, at 6:00 p.m., at the Barbara J. Riley Community Center, 7810 Quill Drive, Downey, California, to accept public comment on the scope and content of the environmental information for the following project:

Project Location: Rancho Los Amigos South Campus

Project Description: The goal of the Rancho Los Amigos South Campus Specific Plan (Specific Plan) is to encourage and promote economic development and revitalization to enhance the City's attractiveness to the local and regional marketplace. The Specific Plan is anticipated to remove regulatory obstacles for the reuse of existing structures and to promote infill development of currently vacant and underutilized properties. The Specific Plan will facilitate and encourage enhanced commercial, retail, and mixed-use opportunities, residential development, public and open spaces, an improved pedestrian environment, and a variety of transportation choices that will enhance the potential for a multi-modal transportation

Project Applicant: City of Downey

All interested parties are invited to attend the Scoping Meeting to give testimony or submit written comments. The NOP comment period begins on February 14, 2019 and ends at 5:00 p.m. on March 15, 2019.

Written Comments may either be submitted at the Scoping Meeting or to the following:

David Blumenthal, City Planner 11111 Brookshire Avenue Downey, CA 90241 dblumenthal@downeyca.org

Written Comments must be received prior to the end of the public comment period.

For more information contact City Planner David Blumenthal at (562) 904-7154, or at dblumenthal@ downeyca.org.

Brothers bring culture to life through music

University of Salzburg in Austria.

The Villalobos Brothers have been frequent collaborators of The Shul Band, a klezmer band led by Adam Feder. In 2005 Ernesto Villalobos and Adam Feder led a candlelit vigil at the children's barracks inside Auschwitz Berkenau at Owięcim, Poland. "Think of it as Jerry Garcia in Jerusalem," said Adam Feder, the guitar-playing leader.

POETRY MATTERS

She goes out to hang the windchime and she's standing on the plastic ice chest tiptoe to reach the crossbeam of the porch, in her nightie and her work boots.

It's six-thirty in the morning

how to switch #1 with #3.

hammer in her right, the nail

gripped tight between her teeth

but nothing happens next because

Ernesto had never met a Jew before he arrived in New York on a Fulbright fellowship. Feeling embraced by the congregation, he invited his brothers, Alberto and Luis, to come to New York and join him playing at the synagogue. Only half jokingly, Mr. Feder said, "The band is one-third mariachi now."

Ernesto spoke of the morning interactive session and said "it is always good to come and connect with the youth. Try to be the person who supports music, not because there is any money in it, but for the good it does." Joyce Sherwin, Downey Symphonic Society Board member also in the audience, embodies that goal.

We recognized several of the children who had attended the daytime event. Malu from Imperial School who is 8 has been studying the violin since September. Her parents brought her to the concert, and she stayed awake till the very end, although her younger sister, in matching white and pink figured leggings, fell asleep.

The evening began with Flor de Toloache, an all-female mariachi quintet: 2 guitars, a violin and two trumpets, dressed in black velvet fringed jackets and black pants with big silver coin studs. The toloache is a Mexican medicinal plant often associated with magic, and magic is a good word to describe the effect these vivacious women had.

It occurred to one to think, how much was lost, hundreds of years ago, when poetry was separated from the other elements of dance, song. and the musical instruments that create the music. Ironically, cheap indoor gas, and then electric, lighting brought the book indoors but not the performers and the music.

A Fandango, according to the Villalobos Brother's hand-out, is "a social dance and celebration, where all the element of son San Jaracho come together: music, lyrics, instruments, zapateado and reciting of poetry."

A great swell of Hispanic love and appreciation for this community of music rides through the river of life in Downey. It adds to the rich diversity already provided by the Downey Symphonic Society, Venuetech and the Downey Theatre, and the many other musical venues in our city. They bring the feeling of community and togetherness. An evening with the Villalobos Brothers made for an awesome fandango in Downey.

For Ignacio Gonzalez, his is a life of contradictions

Downey resident Ignacio Gonzalez finds the balance between dedicated non-profit worker and semi-obscene stand-up comic.

By Eric Pierce Editor

Name: Ignacio "Nacho"

Age: 48

Residence: Downey
Occupation: Independent

Occupation: Independent living advocate or as long as he can remember, Ignacio Gonzalez was the "funny" one.

Every group of friends has an Ignacio: the person who lightens awkward conversations with sarcastic comments, the guy who cracks jokes around the office Xerox machine. He is somehow quiet and reserved and also the life of the party.

Ignacio grew up in Bell Gardens, and after graduating Bell Gardens High School, completed his general education courses at East Los Angeles College before heading off to UC Berkeley. He graduated with degrees in economics and public policy, and went straight to work, mostly in non-profit and public service jobs.

His most high-profile position was working as legislative director for then-L.A. County Supervisor Gloria Molina. When she was termed out of office in 2014, Ignacio landed at the Downey-based Southern California Resource Services for Independent Living, where his responsibilities include helping people with mild to moderate developmental disabilities live independent lives — in other words, outside a nursing home. He remains there today.

It's fulfilling work, but one that doesn't scratch Ignacio's creative itch.

That's why late last year he enrolled in a six-week stand-up comedy class taught by veteran comic Rudy Moreno. Moreno has been a stand-up comic for more than two decades, with credits in "Everybody Loves Raymond," "Arrested Development" and dozens of other TV shows and Ignacio learned of the class through Josefina Lopez, artistic director at Casa 0101 Theatre in Boyle Heights and author of "Real Women Have Curves." Lopez had enrolled in the comedy class and invited Ignacio, a Casa 0101 board member, to come along. (Side note: a new 6-week session begins Feb. 23.)

"It was kind of spur of the moment," Ignacio said. "You know, last minute, two days before the deadline."

In the class, Ignacio learned that being funny simply isn't enough to be a successful comic. He had to learn structure, timing, emphasis, and how to effectively string one funny anecdote to the next.

"I had all these scattered jokes and Rudy guided me on how to ager actually put them together in a tight set -- all the mechanics of writing your niche joke, writing the set, and then going up on stage," he said.

Oct. 27, 2018 in the main room of the Ice House, delivering a 7-minute set of mostly self-deprecating humor. The performance was positively received by the audience.

Ignacio made his stage debut

Before the show, Ignacio had watched YouTube videos of comedians giving advice to rookie comics, and worked on his material until he knew it line by line.

"You work on your set not until you memorize it, but until you can't forget it," Ignacio said. "And that eliminates a lot of the nerves, because you're nervous because you think you might embarrass yourself and fall flat, but if you're positive that you know your set, then the nerves go away a little bit."

For his debut performance, Ignacio developed material by drawing on personal experiences. His very first joke was a jab at his oversized frame. ("It's my first time going on stage," he said, before deadpanning, "I've been doing stand up for like 10 years but it's the first time i made it up the steps.")

"Rudy had us write a list of premises, things that happened in your life, things that you hate, and then take it from there," Ignacio later explained. "You develop all these premises, and some of them you'll find might be funny but it would be a one-off: 'Don't you hate when this happens..' ok, so what, that's it, you can't take it anywhere.

"But then there are some jokes you can develop, and have another joke, and another one, and you can sort of pile on the jokes and you can stretch it out into an actual bit."

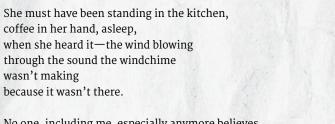

Since his debut last October, Ignacio has gone on to perform at various bars, clubs and restaurants in Southern California. And not every gig is the same.

'People, especially newbies like me, like to show off, 'Yeah, I've been to the Ice House, yeah I've been here,' but what experienced comics respect is if you go to these little hole-inthe-walls, open mics at different bars where not everyone is there for the comedy night. But if you can go to these places and get somebody to laugh, you know you're doing ok. If you have somebody that has their back to you, just drinking a beer, and suddenly they turn around like, 'Oh wow, that was funny,' that's the goal.'

Does Ignacio get political in his stand-up?

"I wouldn't get political for the sake of getting political, but if I can string together three, four, five jokes, then maybe. But it has to be funny. You can't just get up there and spout off like your crazy uncle."

No one, including me, especially anymore believes till death do us part, but I can see what I would miss in leaving—the way her ankles go into the work boots as she stands upon the ice chest; the problem scrunched into her forehead; the little kissable mouth with the nail in it.

When one is in love, everything about that person seems appealing, even "the way her ankles go into the work boots." With love, either you're in or you're out. Liked being dead or pregnant, there is no half-way. Poetry Matters is curated by Lorine Parks.

Blue Oyster Cult
Thursday, March 14th, 2019 8:00PM

For over four decades, Blue Öyster Cult has been thrilling fans of intelligent hard rock worldwide with powerful albums loaded with classic songs. BÖC is one of very few hard rock/heavy metal bands to earn both genuine mainstream critical acclaim as well as commercial success.

BÖC's canon of hits include the truly haunting "(Don't Fear) The Reaper" from 1976's Agents of Fortune, the pummeling "Godzilla" from 1977's Spectres and the hypnotically melodic "Burnin' for You" from 1981's Fire of Unknown Origin.

Other notable BÖC songs include "Cities on Flame with Rock and Roll," "Then Came the Last Days of May," "I Love the Night," "In Thee," "Veteran of the Psychic Wars," "Dominance and Submission,"

"Astronomy," "Black Blade" and "Shooting Shark."

Is Ignacio's material for mature audiences?

"I try not to cuss too much because the advice is if you have to rely on a bad word, then you don't really have the goods.'

What's the ultimate goal?

Ignacio has taken scriptwriting classes and has developed a TV pilot, complete with character bios, story arcs, the whole package.

"I think if sometime I can bring the two together [comedy and TV] and can pitch the show, that would be a goal.'

Who are his favorite comedians?

Ignacio cites Rodney Dangerfield as an early favorite, but also draws heavily from

"I think he's brilliant," Ignacio says of Rock. "I don't know if people give him enough credit. Speaking of getting political, he talks politics without getting political. He talked about gun control, and Bill Clinton, and he did it going on 20 years, and it's still pretty relevant.

"And of course all the Latino comics: Jeff Garcia, George Lopez and Gabriel Iglesias."

The difference between a funny person and a comedian:

"We all know funny people but a joke lasts 10 seconds or five seconds even; most places you have to have at least a 5-minute set. You can't just go up there and say, 'Hey, I'm funny, let me spout off for five minutes. You'll find out quickly that you'll fall flat on your face if you don't have something together. Because it's pretty lonely up

How much of his material is truly Ignacio, and how much is an act:

"You try to make it as close to a hundred percent you as possible --you want to be as close to yourself as possible. You want to make people feel like you're just talking to them, like you're talking to your friends."

Ignacio Gonzalez will be performing this Friday night, Feb. 16, at Tacos n Miches in Downey. The show starts at 8
