Teen driver shot in road rage incident

A 19-year-old man was shot following a minor traffic collision on Old River School Road.

By Eric Pierce Editor

DOWNEY - A 19-year-old man is not expected to survive after he was shot following a suspected road rage dispute Monday night.

According to witnesses, the victim was involved in a minor traffic collision with another vehicle at around 7:10 p.m. Monday on Old River School Road.

After pulling over on Quill Drive, the driver of the second vehicle exited and shot the teen, striking him in the head, witnesses

Bystanders rushed to help the victim, who was transported to a local trauma center.

He is not expected to survive, said Lt. Kathleen Mendoza of the Downey Police Department.

Police arrested 20-yearold Cameron Thomas, of Ft. Worth, Tex., that same night. On Wednesday, the L.A. County District Attorney's office charged him with attempted murder and assault with a deadly weapon.

Neighors who heard the shooting tried to help the victim, including an off-duty nurse.

"My biggest concern at the time was the amount of blood loss. The cup holders were completely filled, both of them," the nurse told ABC-7. She declined to give

Downey voices opposition to controversial housing legislation

SB 50 would allow housing developments up to 5 stories tall near eligible bus stops and rail stations, even in areas zoned for single-family houses.

By Eric Pierce Editor

DOWNEY - The city of Downey has formally opposed legislation that, if approved, would allow high-density housing developments near eligible bus stops and train stations across the state, overriding local zoning

SB 50, introduced by state Sen. Scott Wiener of San Francisco, would allow developers to build condo and apartment complexes up to five stories tall near "highquality" bus stops and transit lines, even in areas zoned strictly for single-family homes.

Introduced by Wiener as an answer to California's housing and homeless crisis, the legislation substantially could Downey's skyline, with housing developments along the city's major thoroughfares.

The legislation also relaxes parking requirements eliminates them entirely, depending on the complex's proximity to mass transit.

"We must take bold steps now to address our severe housing crisis and reduce our carbon footprint,' Wiener said in a statement. "For too long we have created sprawl by artificially limiting the number of and job centers."

An impartial study by UC Greater Los Angeles would be impacted by SB 50.

Southern portions of Lakewood Boulevard near the Green Line Station also could be impacted.

In a letter to Wiener, Downey Mayor Rick Rodriguez said SB 50 undermines the city's zoning codes while allowing for little to no public input.

"We agree there is a fundamental problem of not enough homes being built in California, and appreciate your homes that are built near transit commitment in addressing this serious issue," Rodriguez wrote.

"The City of Downey is fortunate to be served by multiple agencies' transit lines and by a Metro light rail," Rodriguez added. "This proposed legislation could have dramatic impacts to neighborhoods, and would do so without public input, which is a fundamental right.

Also opposing the bill is the Los Angeles City Council, which said SB 50 would simply create additional market rate housing, doing little to alleviate rising

"There are so many reasons to oppose SB 50 that it's almost difficult to know where to start,' said Councilman Paul Koretz.

Garcia hopes third time is a charm with tampon tax repeal

Assemblymember Cristina Garcia is sponsoring legislation to eliminate taxes on feminine hygiene products.

DOWNEY – A bill to repeal the tax charged on menstrual health products advanced out of the Assembly Revenue and Taxation committee Monday with unanimous, bipartisan support.

The bill is the third attempt by Garcia (D-Downey) to create a gender neutral tax code.

"When I originally introduced this bill it started a national movement to rectify the discriminatory taxation of menstrual products. California was leading the charge," said

"Today, the most progressive state in the union is behind the curve in providing a gender neutral tax code that doesn't profit off of a woman's basic biological functions. I'm hopeful that governor-elect Newsom's sense of equality will prevail over his predecessor's."

In 2016, the bill (AB 1561) passed through the legislature nearly unanimously only to be vetoed by Governor Brown who cited a resulting loss of funds if the tax was removed. In 2017 the bill was held in Assembly Appropriations.

Currently, women in California still pay over $20 million annually in taxes on tampons, sanitary napkins, and menstrual cups paying on average $7 a month for forty years of their lives. California law exempts health items like walkers, medical identification tags, and prescription medication, including Viagra®. Menstrual health products are not tax exempt in California even though they are deemed medical necessities by the Federal Drug Administration.

Garcia has already sent letters to Governor Newsom and the Assembly and Senate Budget Committees to highlight the inequities the tax imposes and request its removal through a budget act.

At least ten states exempt menstrual health products from sales tax. Meanwhile, in California the tax

Four Downey Unified classified workers named L.A. County employees of the year

Sandra Jarquin, Jose Ramirez Rosales, Nelly Salinas and Miguel Sanchez are now in the running for California Employees of the Year

DOWNEY - On April 9, the Downey Unified Board of Education honored four classified (non-teaching) employees for being selected as the 2019 Los Angeles County Classified Employees of the Year.

Honorees include bus driver Sandra Jarquin, Jose Ramirez Rosales from Lewis and Imperial Elementary schools, Nelly Salinas from Warren High School, and Miguel Sanchez from Griffiths Middle School.

These four individuals, who made up four of the six people selected across the county for this award, are now nominees at the state level as California Classified Employees of the Year.

School districts across Los Angeles County were asked to nominate a non-teaching employee in six different categories/specialty areas: Child Nutrition; Maintenance, Operations and Facilities; Office and Technical; Para-Educator and Instructional Assistance; Support Services and Security; and Transportation.

With 80 school districts encompassed in LA County and only one nominee selected in each category for this county award, it is a huge fete for Downey Unified to have their employees represent more than half of the categories within this annual award, officials said

"I am so pleased to share that Downey Unified is representing four of the six categories to compete at the state level. This is truly something to celebrate," said Board of Education President Nancy Swenson. "Downey Unified has the best staff and this is just another example."

Sandra Jarquin, who was nominated in the transportation category, is a school bus driver and has been an employee of Downey Unified for over 16 years. As a bus driver, Jarquin helps set the tone for a student's day, she is the first and last person students see each day.

Through the nomination process, it was evident that she is very vigilant about her students and takes the time to know their specific needs.

"Sandra is a model school bus driver, an exemplary employee, and an ideal teammate for her coworkers," expressed BethAnn Arko, Director of Classified HR, as she presented this award.

"When I asked the Transportation Supervisor for a few words about Sandra Jarquin, he shared 'for the students she drives, Sandy is their safety monitor, their listening ear, their smile in the morning, the greeting of encouragement and the security of a routine that begins with a pleasant ride to school."

Jose Ramirez Rosales, in the Maintenance, Operations and Facilities category, was nominated by Lewis Elementary School as their custodian. Rosales has been with Downey Unified for three years and recently was promoted to Utility Worker at Imperial Elementary School.

"One of the quotes entails Jose Ramirez's drive and desire to always go above and beyond and he lives this out daily," stated Arko as she began to read directly from Rosales' letters of recommendation. "He truly exhibits a joy that is pure and authentic each time he's on our campus. Jose has a humility that inspires others that are around him to be the best they can be. He puts kids first and wholeheartedly supports our teachers and staff. Thank you, Jose, for inspiring greatness and shining so bright as an 'All-Star.'"

Nelly Salinas, Child Nutrition category, has been a Downey Unified employee since 2005 and is currently working as the Food Service Lead at Warren High School.

Salinas was featured during the California School Nutrition Association's "I Love My Lunch Lady Contest" where students made posters and poems dedicated to her. It was shared during the award presentation that she is valued and appreciated by staff, teachers, students and parents.

"Nelly goes above and beyond by working with staff to ensure all students needs are met," said Arko. "She is approachable and finds solutions to problems that arise. Her work performance not only meets all standards but also influences people around her to strive for better."

Downey Unified's final nominee was Miguel Sanchez in the Support Services and Security category. He is currently a Campus Security Assistant at Griffiths Middle School where he has been for three years.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

Growing up here in Southern California, sushi was not a "thing." It was difficult to find and my parents and my parents had no interest. That has changed, and today my own (adult) children and I love sushi.

Is raw fish a healthful food to eat, or are we putting ourselves at risk by consuming it? Are we actually eating what we think we are?

Let's start with the good news. Sushi is a simply prepared fish, a good source of protein, and is low in fat and calories. Most sushi contains omega 3 fatty acids, which have been shown to lower cholesterol and to improve symptoms of depression, along with a number of other benefits. (However, white rice is a simple carbohydrate and not as nutritious as brown rice.)

Let's take a (not very Japanese) California roll. Six pieces have about 250 calories and seven grams of fat, and contain crabmeat, avocado, cucumber, sticky rice flavored with vinegar, seaweed, ginger and soy sauce. In contrast, a fast food burger with cheese will likely have about 750 calories, and that's before the soda and fries.

However, certain fish contain high levels of mercury. According to the FDA and the EPA, most women of childbearing age, along with children, should avoid high mercury levels. In fact, they advise women of childbearing age to eat no more than 12 ounces of fish per week.

For the rest of us, fish is recommended twice a week. Frequent fish eaters (24 ounces or more per week), children, and woman of childbearing age should avoid the following high mercury fish: swordfish, shark, king mackerel, gulf tilefish, marlin, and orange roughy.

Everyone should limit their consumption of these even higher-mercury fish: grouper, Chilean sea bass, bluefish, halibut, black cod, Spanish mackerel, and fresh tuna.

I've always been a fan of tuna salad sandwiches. Note that there are different kinds of tuna. Light tuna accounts for about 70% of the canned tuna we consume.

The FDA considers canned light tuna a lower mercury fish that can safely be eaten twice a week, but other kinds of tuna may have triple the mercury, more calories, higher fat, and fewer omega-3 fatty acids. Because mercury levels even in canned light tuna may be inconsistent, the FDA recommends that pregnant women and young children avoid canned tuna altogether.

What about the risk of infection from eating raw fish? It is possible for raw fish to expose us to bacterial foodborne illnesses (think Hepatitis A and the Norwalk virus), which lead to diarrhea, cramping and vomiting. In addition, some parasites can be passed on in raw fish, although they are killed if the fish is frozen before consumption.

Do we really know what we are eating when we dine on sushi? Seafood fraud has garnered the interest of researchers since 2008, when two high school students performed DNA analyses and found that a quarter of fish products at Manhattan sushi restaurants and seafood markets were mislabeled. Other studies supported and even exceeded their findings of mislabeled fish, and mislabeling appears to continue.

As consumers, what should we do?

· If you are dining out, be picky about where you eat sushi. Make sure that the restaurant is reputable and clean.

· Government agencies do recommend eating fish (either raw or cooked) as a good source of low-fat protein, but also to limit total consumption and to be watchful of mercury levels, especially among children and pregnant women.

My bottom line: eat fish. It is very good for us. Mix it up, have different types, and keep portions small and mostly cooked. Sushi is a wonderful food - but not for daily consumption.

Downey credit union recognized for helping Hispanic and immigrant community

Downey Federal Credit Union is one of only 10 credit unions in California to earn the "Juntos Avanzamos" designation.

DOWNEY – Downey Federal Credit Union was awarded the "Juntos Avanzamos" (together we advance) designation last week in honor of the credit union's commitment to helping the Hispanic and immigrant community navigate the U.S. financial system.

The honor was bestowed by Inclusiv, an organization dedicated to helping low- and moderate-income communities reach financial stability through credit unions.

Downey Federal Credit Union becomes only the 10th credit union in California to earn the designation.

"Three major initiatives that we've looked at are: Hispanic communities, low-income communities, and financial literacy," said Ray Mesler, president and CEO of Downey Federal Credit Union. "We really see that need in Downey and some of the surrounding communities. It is my passion doing this and I know our Board of Directors share that passion as well."

A ceremony was held outside the credit union April 18 to celebrate the "Juntos Avanzamos" designation.

"Downey Federal Credit Union has demonstrated time and time again their incredible commitment to this community," said Councilman Alex Saab, who presented Downey Federal with a proclamation from the city.

"The people helping people model, that is what it comes down to and that is what our staff, day in and day out, embody," said Tyrone Conde, vice president of marketing for Downey Federal.

Pablo DeFilippi, senior vice president of membership and network engagement at Inclusiv, said the "Juntos Avanzamos" designation "will open the doors of opportunity and financial security for Latinos in the city of Downey and beyond."

Downey's Stephanie McKnight credits Navy for her 'biggest successes'

Downey native Stephanie McKnight talks about life on the USS Portland.

By Kayla Turnbow

DOWNEY – A Downey native and 2007 Downey High School graduate is serving in the U.S. Navy aboard USS Portland, one of the Navy's newest and most advanced amphibious ships.

Chief Petty Officer Stephanie McKnight is a boatswain's mate aboard the amphibious transport dock operating out of San Diego. A Navy boatswain's mate is responsible for painting, preservation and beautification of the ship.

McKnight credits success in the Navy to many of the lessons learned in Downey.

"I was taught hard work and dedication," said McKnight. "I used to build stuff with my dad and we remodeled a lot. All of it came into play for me when I got here. I really learned how to stay committed to finishing a project the right way."

Commissioned in 2017, Portland is designed to deliver Marines and their equipment where they are needed to support a variety of missions ranging from amphibious assaults to humanitarian relief efforts.

A key element of the Navy and the nation's needs is tied to the fact that America is a maritime nation, according to Navy officials, and that the nation's prosperity is tied to the ability to operate freely on the world's oceans. More than 70 percent of the Earth's surface is covered by water; 80 percent of the world's population lives close to a coast; and 90 percent of all global trade by volume travels by

Being stationed in San Diego, the principal homeport of the Pacific Fleet, means McKnight is playing an important part in America's focus on rebuilding military readiness, strengthening alliances and reforming business practices in support of the National Defense Strategy

"Our priorities center on people, capabilities and processes, and will be achieved by our focus on speed, value, results and partnerships," said Secretary of the Navy Richard V. Spencer. "Readiness, lethality and modernization are the requirements driving these priorities."

Sailors' jobs are highly varied aboard Portland. More than 400 men and women make up the ship's crew, which keeps all parts of the ship running smoothly, from handling weaponry to maintaining the engines. An additional 700 Marines can be embarked. Portland is capable of transporting Marines and landing them where they are needed via helicopters, vertical takeoff and landing aircraft and landing craft.

These amphibious transport dock ships support sea-to-shore assaults, special operations or other warfare missions and can serve as secondary aviation platforms for amphibious ready groups. Because of their inherent capabilities, these ships have been called upon to support humanitarian and other contingency missions on short notice.

"The current and future success of USS Portland will be due to the hard work and dedication from each member of the crew," said Capt. Tony Rodriguez, commanding officer of USS Portland. "Every sailor knows their role and purpose within the ship. By maintaining high standards and sound shipboard operating procedures we can ensure we are ready to answer when the nation calls."

Though there are many ways for sailors to earn distinction in their command, community and career, McKnight is most proud of making chief petty officer.

"This has been one of my biggest successes so far," said McKnight. "I overcame my trials and tribulations. I was undesginated for four years before I picked up boatswain's mate.

I am a story for others who are undesginated. I remind them that as long as they don't give up, they will make it"

Serving in the Navy is a continuing tradition of military service for McKnight, who has military ties with family members who have previously served.

McKnight is honored to carry on the family tradition.

"My grandfather served in the Navy," said McKnight. "He was a hard worker. He was the reason we remodeled all the time. He knew how to do so much because of the Navy. It has made me more proud to serve because of him." As a member of one of the U.S. Navy's most relied-upon assets, McKnight and other Portland sailors know they are part of a legacy that will last beyond their lifetimes providing the Navy the nation needs.

"Serving in the Navy is a sense of pride and self worth," McKnight added. "It shows someone else that they can be successful. As long as I can help the junior sailors be where they want to be, I am proud. There is a bigger purpose when serving."

Things You Didn't Know About Downey

By Bobbi Bruce Downey Historical Society

In the fall of 1881, a new industry was headed by Dr. Grover who began to manufacture caster oil Grsover's plant was at the back of Dr. Merchant's drug store and had an output of one hundred gallons of oil a day. Power to operate the press was furnished by an elf white horse, driven at one time by Logan Rives.

Hour after hour and day after day, Logan drove the horse, occasionally dealing out a whack to keep the power moving.

Castor beans grew to almost tree-like proportions where the ground was moist. The pods were cut by hand and piled in long windrows to reopen, then release their seed. Later, these were gathered and put into sacks.

The crop was obtained by a number of cuttings made each year, yielding something near seven or eight thousand sacks of beans which were converted into castor oil and used as medicine and lubrication for all types of machinery prior to the introduction of petroleum products. Large quantities were shipped to Los Angeles, and one hundred and fifty gallons went to San Francisco each week, besides large amounts to other states.

Hand-cutting proved expensive, and hundreds of acres of land were planted with wine and table grapes.

The manufacture of wine and other grape products began about 1884 when F.B. Weis opened a winery south of the Southern Pacific tracks on Crawford Street where the Emsco Asbestos Manufacturing Plant was located.

Men trampling on grapes pressed juice out into a large vat. The juice was then put into huge tanks to ferment.

A year later, the Downey Fruit and Wine Company established a steam-powered wine press just north of the railroad tracks on Crawford Street. Business prospered for the company, as they also used their engine between seasons to saw wood, which was used almost exclusively for fuel. Twenty-five cars of wine were shipped from the depot during 1888, with the following six months showing exports of wine amounting to 1,869,870 pounds.

Soon after this time, a blight, which fatally attacked the roots of the grapevines, destroyed vineyards and ruined the wine industry. The English Walnut, which had proven its adaptability to this vicinity, then became the chief product.

Yes, President Trump obstructed justice

BY JUDGE ANDREW NAPOLITANO

When the Department of Justice designated Robert Mueller as special counsel to take over the FBI investigation of the Trump campaign in May 2017, Mueller's initial task was to determine if there had been a conspiracy — an illegal agreement — between the campaign and any Russians to receive anything of value.

When former FBI Director James Comey informed Mueller that he believed Trump fired him because he had declined Trump's order to shut down the investigation of Trump's campaign and of his former national security advisor, retired Lt. Gen. Michael Flynn, Mueller began to investigate whether the president had unlawfully attempted to obstruct those investigations.

We now know why Trump was so anxious for the FBI to leave Flynn alone.

Flynn was charged and pleaded guilty to lying to the FBI about whether he discussed sanctions in a telephone call with then-Russian ambassador to the United States Sergey Kislyak, before Trump became president. Such a communication could have been unlawful if it interfered with American foreign policy.

So, when Trump learned of the lie, he fired Flynn. Yet in his plea negotiations with Mueller, Flynn revealed why he discussed sanctions with Kislyak — because the pre-presidential Trump asked him to do so. An honest revelation by Trump could have negated Flynn's prosecution. But the revelation never came.

Last week, Attorney General William Barr released publicly a redacted version of Mueller's final report. That report concluded that notwithstanding 127 confirmed communications between the campaign and Russians from July 2015 to November 2016 (Trump said there were none), the government could not prove the existence of a conspiracy.

On obstruction, the report concluded that notwithstanding numerous obstructive events engaged in by the president personally, the special counsel would not charge the president and would leave the resolution of obstruction of justice to Congress. Congress, of course, cannot bring criminal charges, but it can impeach.

Trump initially claimed that he had been completely exonerated by Mueller — even though the word "exoneration" and the concept of DOJ exoneration are alien to our legal system. Then, after he learned of the dozen or so documented events of obstruction described in the report, Trump used a barnyard epithet to describe it.

The Constitution prescribes treason, bribery or other high crimes and misdemeanors as the sole bases for impeachment. We know that obstruction of justice constitutes an impeachable offense under the high crimes and misdemeanors" rubric because both presidents in the modern era who were subject to impeachment proceedings — Richard Nixon and Bill Clinton — were charged with obstructing justice.

Obstruction is the rare crime that is rarely completed. Stated differently, the obstructer need not succeed in order to be charged with obstruction. That's because the statute itself prohibits attempting to impede or interfere with any government proceeding for a corrupt or

Thus, if my neighbor tackles me on my way into a courthouse in order to impede a jury from hearing my testimony, and, though delayed, I still make it to the courthouse and testify, then the neighbor is guilty of obstruction because he attempted to impede the work of the jury that

Mueller laid out at least a half-dozen crimes of obstruction committed by Trump — from asking K.T. McFarland to write an untruthful letter about the reason for Flynn's chat with Kislyak, to asking Corey Lewandowski and then Don McGahn to fire Mueller and McGahn to lie about it, to firing Comey to impede the FBI's investigations, to dangling a pardon in front of Michael Cohen to stay silent, to ordering his aides to hide and delete records.

The essence of obstruction is deception or diversion — to prevent the government from finding the truth. To Mueller, the issue was not if Trump committed crimes of obstruction. Rather, it was if Trump could be charged successfully with those crimes.

Mueller knew that Barr would block an indictment of Trump because Barr has a personal view of obstruction at odds with the statute itself. Barr's view requires that the obstructer have done his obstructing in order to impede the investigation or prosecution of a crime that the obstructer himself has committed. Thus, in this narrow view, because Trump did not commit the crime of conspiracy with the Russians, it was legally impossible for Trump to have obstructed the FBI investigation of

The nearly universal view of law enforcement, however, is that the obstruction statute prohibits all attempted self-serving interference with government investigations or proceedings. Thus, as Georgetown Professor Neal Katyal recently pointed out, former Detroit Mayor Kwame Kilpatrick was convicted of obstruction for interfering with an investigation of his extramarital affair, even though the affair was Famously, Martha Stewart was convicted of obstruction of an investigation into her alleged insider trading, even though the insider trading charges against her had been dismissed. And a federal appeals court recently upheld the obstruction conviction of a defendant who suborned perjury in order to impede the prosecution of the sister of a childhood friend.

On obstruction, Barr is wrong.

So, the dilemma for House Democrats now is whether to utilize Mueller's evidence of obstruction for impeachment. They know from history that impeachment only succeeds if there is a broad, national, bipartisan consensus behind it, no matter the weight of the evidence or presence of sophisticated legal theories.

They might try to generate that consensus by parading Mueller's witnesses to public hearings, as House Democrats did to Nixon. Yet, when House Republicans did that to Clinton, and then impeached him, they suffered politically.

The president's job is to enforce federal law. If he had ordered its violation to save innocent life or preserve human freedom, he would have a moral defense. But ordering obstruction to save himself from $% \left\{ 1\right\} =\left\{ 1\right\}$ the consequences of his own behavior is unlawful, defenseless and condemnable.

Beware Soros-funded hijacking of US census

BY MICHELLE MALKIN

"Are you a U.S. citizen?"

Only in self-defeating, sovereignty-eroding America is the idea of asking whether people living in America are American citizens for the American census a matter of controversy.

On Tuesday, the U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments on whether the Trump administration can include a citizenship question on the high-stakes 2020 Census questionnaire. Thank goodness, the conservative majority indicated support for allowing it. There's already such a question on the annual American Community Survey administered by the Census Bureau. It was asked in long-form questionnaires sent to a sample of households in 2000. And it was regularly asked in historical census forms from 1820-1950.

But we live in a Trump-deranged age, so now it's tantamount to an international human rights crime to ask anyone about citizenship status at any time for any reason. Heaven forbid we inconvenience or discomfit legal noncitizens or illegal immigrants with a question!

Open borders activists, left-wing immigration lawyers and identity politics radicals exploded on cue:

-Former Obama Attorney General Eric Holder decried the "unconstitutional and irresponsible action" to "suppress the count in minority communities."

—The Democratic Legislative Campaign Committee fumed about the "political stunt that unfairly targets immigrant communities throughout our country in an attempt to SILENCE immigrants and benefit Republicans."

Histrionic social iustice actress Alyssa Milano called it an "attack on immigrant communities and our democracy itself."

—Jorge Luis Vasquez Jr. of LatinoJustice, funded by George Soros' Open Society Foundations, vented that a citizenship question would "damage all our daily lives for decades."

—Kristen Clarke, president of the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, another Soros-funded outfit, which sued over the citizenship question, blasted the "scheme to hijack the 2020 Census."

The Soros-funded Asian Americans Advancing Justice lobbying group condemned Trump as "racially and politically motivated."

Let's all practice our deep pranayama breathing and ground ourselves in reality. It's the radical left, much of it fueled with Soros' money, that has hijacked the U.S. Census, not President Donald Trump. "No Illegal Immigrant Left Behind" is crucial to their strategy. Why?

Remember: The Census is used to divvy up seats in the House as a proportion of their population based on the head count. The redistribution of power extends to presidential elections because the Electoral College is pegged to the size of congressional delegations. More people equal more seats. More illegal immigrants equal more power. Indeed, the Center for Immigration Studies determined that in the 2000 election cycle, the presence of noncitizens (illegal immigrants, temporary visitors and green card holders) caused nine seats in the House to switch hands. California added six seats it would not have had otherwise. Texas, New York and Florida each gained a seat. Indiana, Michigan, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin each lost a seat. Montana, Kentucky and Utah each failed to secure a seat they would otherwise have gained.

Our Founding Fathers explicitly warned against the perils of foreigners manipulating representation by overwhelming the country. Immigration scholar and author Daniel Horowitz points to Supreme Court Justice Joseph Story's prophetic admonition: "If aliens might be admitted indiscriminately to enjoy all the rights of citizens at the will of a single state, the Union might itself be endangered by an influx of foreigners, hostile to its institutions, ignorant of its powers, and incapable of a due estimate of its privileges.

Statesman Roger Sherman similarly emphasized the need to "guard against an improper mode of naturalization" by states adopting "easier

Too late. Multiple illegal immigrant amnesties, coupled with massive legal immigration, failure to deport visa overstayers and the metastasis of sanctuary policies, have taken their toll. Moreover, our constitutionally mandated decennial count has become a fullemployment program for ideologically driven liberal interest groups cashing in on the census-gathering process and reshaping the electoral landscape. During the last census under President Barack Obama, with $300 billion in federal funding at stake, social justice groups from Soros-funded ACORN to Soros-funded Voto Latino to the Soros-allied SEIU were enlisted to count heads and help noncitizens feel "safe."

The Census boondoggle has become a tax-subsidized national future Democratic voter outreach drive. Soros' operations, along with 77 other liberal foundations, have invested $30 million to make illegal immigrants count. The Open Society Institute's grantees and partners on coopting the Census for Democrat gains include the Southern Coalition for Social Justice, Miami Workers Center, Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Southwest Workers Union, New York Community Trust, New York Foundation, Center for American Progress, People for the American Way and the Funders Census Initiative. A recently leaked internal board document revealed that the Soros network has coordinated efforts for the past four years to "influence appropriations for the Census Bureau" and add new racial and ethnic categories.

The Census Bureau will need 500,000 temporary workers to conduct the count in what will already be a hyperpolarized election year. However the Supreme Court rules on the citizenship question, the Trump administration must ensure that Open Borders Inc. does not coopt the enumerator corps. As SorosWorld well understands:

Power lies not just with who is being counted, but who's doing the You're about to get fewer robocalls. But maybe not for long.

BY THE NEW YORK TIMES EDITORIAL BOARD

If you think robocall scams have gotten worse lately, you're right. By one reckoning, Americans received 48 billion robocalls last year, up from 30 billion in 2017.

But there's good news: Major telecom companies, including AT&T, Comcast, T-Mobile and Verizon, have announced that they will voluntarily adopt the dual technologies known as Secure Telephone Identity Revisited and Signature-Based Handling of Asserted Information Using Tokens, known collectively as STIR/Shaken.

The industrywide use of STIR/Shaken should hamper the prolific robocall industry by making it harder to fake calling from a number belonging to someone else. But will that be enough to end the onslaught of robocalls we all live with today?

The earliest iteration of the technology, which isn't all that different from what we're about to get, was introduced in 2006. While robocalls were getting worse and worse, the Federal Communications Commission — a government agency that is supposed to protect consumers where communications networks are concerned — was being kneecapped by a movement toward deregulation playing out in the courts and eventually within the F.C.C. itself.

"We're at least five years short of where we should be," said Henning Schulzrinne, who was chief technology officer of the F.C.C. during the Obama administration. He is also one of the architects of several key technologies, including those that underlie the Voice Over Internet Protocol, or VoIP, which was made popular with Skype, Google Hangouts and FaceTime, and a key tool for robocallers. He attributes the lag to inaction at every level — from industry, to regulators and even technologists like himself. "We didn't call up The New York Times and say there will be a catastrophe coming," Mr. Schulzrinne said. "We didn't raise as much hell as we should have.

The same technology that lets grandparents video chat with their distant grandchildren makes robocalling cheap and lucrative. Robocallers often located overseas — make thousands and sometimes millions of phone calls using VoIP. One of the reasons these calls are so difficult to police is that robocallers usually spoof their origin: They appear to be calling from a phone number they don't actually own. It's why you get so many unwanted calls from your own area code, sometimes only a few digits off from your own number.

Spoofing also helps robocallers evade any block lists and spam filters that the carriers use, or that you might have signed on to. To pierce the fog of spoofing, STIR/Shaken adds a layer of authentication to calls. It makes spam call filters more effective, it makes uncovering the source of a robocall easier and it helps ordinary people who might get confused by someone pretending to call from, say, their bank's official 1-800 number.

Things never had to get this bad. The standards body that proposed the first iteration of STIR/Shaken back in 2006 went on to identify robocalling even more urgently as a problem in 2008. By 2012, robocalling had become such a menace that the Federal Trade Commission called a meeting to develop solutions. And in 2016, the F.C.C., under Tom Wheeler, who was then the chairman, asked carriers to voluntarily adopt fixes. They are finally acting now.

Enough with the bars

Dear Editor:

I support M. Padilla's letter of April 4, 2019 one hundred percent regarding another alcohol drinking business in Downey.

M. Padilla is so right in saying, "What is there to draw anyone to the Downtown Downey scene?

When are the City Council and Planning Commission going to bring some decent businesses to our city? I am most disappointed in both. Why not bring in other businesses that will uplift our community?

Please don't bring in anymore alcoholic establishments that destroy citizens' lives.

Betty Logan Downey

While the government was convening meetings and was finger wagging at companies, an ideological battle over deregulation was in full swing. Legal experts disagree as to whether the F.C.C. currently has the authority to police robocalls. It's enough of a question mark that legislation introduced by Senator Ed Markey of Massachusetts would specifically require providers of voice services to use authentication services like STIR/Shaken.

In the wake of the companies' action against robocallers, what's likely to happen is that they will adjust their tactics — for example, by buying cheap, "legitimate" United States-based numbers in the hundreds, maybe thousands, rather than spoofing phone numbers from abroad. "The hope is that an industry-led regulatory body is nimble enough to catch spammers as they adapt, and update standards accordingly," Jake Swearingen wrote in New York magazine.

But there's no guarantee the telecom companies will continue to fight the scammers as their shady tactics evolve. Phone calls are not the lucrative part of the current array of services the telecom companies offer and are dirt cheap to boot. Telecoms don't lose much (if any) money on the fire hose of seconds-long spam calls that proliferate. Why invest a lot of resources in blocking them instead of, say, developing 5G networks?

Regulatory agencies exist to protect consumers when economic incentives fail them. Although communications czars under the Obama administration were less averse to regulation, even they did not do enough to stop the robocall scourge. Now a hamstrung F.C.C. is in even worse shape to deal with agile scammers armed to the teeth with technologies that enable them to exploit and torment consumers.

CalMet monopoly

Dear Editor:

While living in Downey, I spoke to Councilman Dave Gafin several times about CalMet fee increases that I believed were unreasonable. Since it is a monopoly, it is up to the City Council to determine if they

We cancelled our service when we moved from Downey in October, 2018, and were told by them we would receive a refund for the amount we had overpaid. Thinking that four months was more than adequate time, we called on February 26, 2019 to learn the status, and were told it had not yet been processed. Really?

We called again on March 22, 2019, and were told no one had looked at the account. REALLY?

What do you suppose would have happened if we had been delinquent in our payment of the account? On April 24, I called and asked to speak to a manager. When she finally picked up the call, she said the check would be mailed that day. It is only a small amount, but it is the principle of the thing that so greatly annoys me.

To whom does this monopoly answer?

"We'll have a groundbreaking ceremony just as soon as a new bid is accepted," said Claudia. "It's out for bid again. We've been coming to work in the Library building but May 1 we expect to report somewhere else."

The Library Advjsory Board was thanked. It's composed of one member from each city district: Betty Monroy, Kimberly Hayes, Marie Yusem, Karol Morrison and Beverly Mathis. A bright pastel arrangement of spring flowers, pink and lavender and white, centered each of the seven tables, and men represented about 20% of the attendees. More volunteers are always invited.

The program began with Ben Dickow welcoming everyone and introducing the full complement of City Council members. Mayor Rick Rodriguez was on hand to thank the volunteers and friends Remarkably, Rick, Alex Saab, and Mayor Pro Tem Blanca Pacheko are all Kiwanians. "There are maroon ones too," said Sean, who volunteers for eco projects like Keep Downey Beautiful. and at the PTA at the school where he teaches.

The book-orphans of Downey thank Claudia's fascinating history singled out special people like Councilwoman Joyce Lawrence, Cleo Latimer and Louise Cormack who made an extra effort to get the library going during the early years. The library partnered with the Assistance League of Downey to set up Books on Wheels, bringing books to homebound patrons, adults who can no longer go out into the world.

In the 80's, Soroptimist Club members provided Downey children a Great Books Club in a local park. Jean Brazelton used her expertise as a teacher and a writer to teach high school students how to write their college entrance exams. Now there is a program to package books to send to soldiers.

After a generous buffet of scrambled eggs and hash browns, fruit and mini muffins, and sausages and bacon, Claudia opened the awards part of the morning. Each volunteer was recognized by name and a short phrase describing their contribution was read as they came

All five City Council members shook hands with the volunteers, and presented a handsome Certificate of Appreciation in a black and silver folder. The little gift bag contained a silver case for business cards, which even retired persons now find helpful in this day when everyone exchanges email addresses.

A special shout-out to Major Donors came in the form of a handsomely illuminated scroll in an ebony frame. Receiving the award were Friends of the Downey City Library; Theresa and Michael Gallagher; Peter and Patricia Meursinge; and the Rotary Club of Downey. The latter has a longrunning program where each week the library sends them a new book purchased with funds that Rotary donates. The club then asks the week's program speaker to honor them by signing the book, as a memento of their appearance.

SEEN IN CONVERSATION:

Volunteers Jackie Odell and Sandra Albornoz stopped by to talk about the stories in the Patriot about the two homeless women at the Downey Post Office.

"Something in their lives has gone awry," said Jackie. "Every woman has had that fleeting thought, 'you never know when it could happen to you.' They can't be left to stand out there like this."

Note well: The library may be closed, but the volunteers and friends plan to continue to meet. A picnic supper in Furman Park on Wednesday, July 17, will be the first reunion, to hear the Department of Parks and Recreations' Summer Concert Series, The Wiseguys, who play big band music. Come at 5:30, because the Board of the Friends of the Library will bring salads to share, and there will be food for sale by the Downey Rose Float Association. Everyone works together.

Other get-togethers are planned for November and each three months till the library opens.

Meanwhile, are the staff at the Library keeping busy?

"We're running around like crazy," said Claudia. "There is so much to do before we open again."

Exchange Club Family Support Center planted a pinwheel garden at Downey Unified School District headquarters in recognition of National Child Abuse Prevention Month, which is held in April.

remains and a case is pending before the California Superior Court. That case claims the state is in violation of the 14th Amendment's equal protection clause on the basis that tampons and sanitary napkins are not luxuries, but basic medical necessities.

In 2017, the self-proclaimed Tampon Queen was successful in expanding access to menstrual health products with the passage of AB 10. That bill provides free menstrual health products in low income school bathrooms.

Last month, her request to the Joint Legislative Committee on Rules to provide free menstrual products in the State Capitol for visitors and staff, was approved.

'The bottom line is we cannot balance the budget on a person's uterus," concluded Garcia. "Every month, for 40 years of our lives, we are being taxed for being born with a uterus. Every month of our adult life we are taxed for our biology. Every month we are told our periods are a luxury, while also being told they are something to be ashamed and we must hide. I respect the need for California to be fiscally sound, but the state budget should not be balanced by a tax of a person's uterus. The same goes for local governments; our tax codes should be gender neutral," said Garcia.

Short Stories

By Helen Hampton Contributor

Editor's note: This story published last week wih incorrect attribution. We are running it again with the proper author listed.

Year after year the DMV kept renewing my driver's license by mail without requiring me to show up in person to be tested and photographed. After about 15 years, the picture on my license became very messy from wear and tear. It even had white blotches over my face.

One day I had a brilliant idea. I would replace my old faded driver's license picture with a photo from one of my old company ID badges. And so, I cut the ID photo the same size as the picture on my license. Then I stapled my ID photo on top of the picture the DMV had taken so many years ago.

Well, I was asked to show my license for identification many, many times, and nobody ever said a word about the stapled photo on it. Until the time I went shopping in a hotel boutique in Hawaii.

There I was, browsing through the beautiful shop with my sister Audrey, my daughter Jan, and my son-in-law Paul. I picked out a sexy pair of swim trunks for Paul. Leaving my family to continue shopping, I went to the sales counter to pay for my purchase with a check.

to celebrate the Downey Symphony Orchestra's 60th anniversary

'My parents, Arlyss and Walter Kelley, were Symphony Board members who happily offered their backyard for annual garden parties. My father continued this tradition well into his 90's. A committee did all the hard work of setting up tables, catering was by Katie Hare, music was led by Sharon Lavery, and an auction raised money. It was always perfectly beautiful!"

Of course, the saleslady asked to see my driver's license for identification. And so, I whipped it out and handed it to her.

All of a sudden she said in a very loud voice, "You can't do

I said, "What?"

She said, "You can't change a picture on your license!"

By then my family heard the commotion, so they came over to the counter to find out what was

By then a crowd had gathered. My family looked at me, stunned. Jan said, "Mama, how could you?"

Needless to say, by then my face was red as a beet. Jan offered to pay for the swim trunks by MasterCard, since the saleslady refused to accept my check.

When we got back to our condo, Jan said to me, "Mama, you could go to jail for doing something like that. How could you be so vain?!"

It really wasn't that I was vain; I just did not like that messy license picture in my wallet.

In the Philippines as a Peace Corps volunteer

Short Stories

By Anthony R. Kingsley Contributor

In 2012, the Peace Corps was looking for a response volunteer for a six-month assignment in the Philippines. Response assignments are shorter than the regular two-year assignment. My job was to recommend improvements to operations of an organization that took care of indigent children.

In February, I was on a flight to Manila via Narita in Japan. But my flight was delayed and I missed my connecting flight to Manila. I arrived in Manila late and the meeting "committee" had already left.

I found my way to a pension (small hotel) where a reservation had been made for me. The next morning, I was picked up and taken to the Peace Corps office for orientation, language lessons and receive my living allowance. I was told that my assignment place had been changed from Manila to Boso Boso.

A Peace Corps vehicle took me to my site. When I arrived, a welcoming committee of children and staff was waiting for me. They sang a welcoming song and I reciprocated by singing "It's a

My living quarters was a room on the second floor in a building with 70 children. That's right, 70. The next morning, I awoke to the sounds of "It's a Small World" being sung in Tagalog.

I shared an office with the pastor who was also a teacher at the school. There were no landline telephones but Peace Corps provided me with a cell

I did a lot of walking and many times children came with me. On one walk, it started to rain and I ducked into a store. I introduced myself and when I started to explain what I was doing in Boso Boso, the lady interrupted me and said, "It is ok Anthony – we know all about

This was a religious organization - they did not frown on drinking, only that you did not get drunk. When all the staff and children were eating dinner, I would go to the store to buy a couple of beers. I always carried a canvas bag.

One day I encountered one of the children on my way to the store. She asked me where I was going and I said to do some shopping. She looked me straight in the face and said, "No, you are not. You are going to get your beer like you always do".

I responded, "If you ever tell

On summer evenings, I enjoy sitting out on a lawn chair enjoying the quietness of my backyard. I especially like it if there is a gentle breeze blowing.

Summer Evenings

I may have the hose in my hand and water the plants and lawn, and cool my feet as I watch the birds dart back and forth.

There is a pair of mourning doves who live nearby who frequent my yard and coo to one another. There used to be a scrub jay who visited, but now there is a couple who are very bold and know that I usually scatter old bread crumbs for my bird friends. They jump around and scold me because, today, the grass contains no crumbs.

The hummingbirds flit from the Bird of Paradise to other plants and flowers and may rest on a tree for a while. It's fun to see and hear them zip through the yard and come to a fluttering stop at a flower.

The mocking birds call to one another and may chase off an invading crow who has come too near their territory.

The crows usually congregate in my pine tree out front or on the electrical wires making their raucous noise until another calls them away to explore new territories.

Sometimes, if I'm lucky, the trees or bushes will fill up with tiny, little finches who chirp happily while jumping from branch to branch.

The sparrows have gotten a little brazen and don't seem to fear me if I'm not too close to

I enjoy watching butterflies flutter from flower to flower, and there seems to be a bigger variety this year.

A solitary bee once hung out by the jade bush and became very territorial and buzzed around my head, trying to chase me away. I'd spray around me, or I'd wave my hand until it flew off, only to return to the jade plant and then buzz me again.

My neighborhood is relatively quiet. Not too much traffic or dogs barking, although I can hear the 605 Freeway if I tune into it.

The smells coming from my neighbor's kitchen or barbeque gets me thinking about dinner, but it is too relaxing to go in yet.

If I'm not watering the lawn, I may sit out there reading my current book. I still see the activity in my yard as I frequently look up.

I stay out there until the mosquitoes come out and start salivating as they see me -their dinner, hopefully -- in the middle of their hunting ground. Then I make a hasty retreat to the house and those wonderful contraptions called screens.

A Whale of a Tail

Short Stories

By Sharon Benson Smith Contributor

We had seen most of the recent plays and movies. We had been to all the area museums, some more than once, and seen their extraordinary exhibits.

Eddie decided it was time for us to head south to the San Diego Zoo. He sure made the right choice! It spelled excitement from the moment we entered the gate... seeing all the wonderful birds reptiles, and animals; hearing cat roars, monkey noises and bird sounds.

And, taking a break now and then from the sun and fun to grab a bite, enjoy frozen lemonade and to people watch.

After a few hours of meandering the grounds and seeing so many wonderful sights, we saw a sign and an arrow leading to a hippopotamus site. Eddie was very interested since he had been to Africa and saw their habitat and surroundings firsthand. He saw them grazing on the land and then go into the water while he happened to be in a canoe in the estuary. They even pooped on the landing outside his zippered tent.

We lucked out as there were bleachers where we could sit and relax and watch this "ginormous" hippo swim in a "hippodrome" type water tank. We couldn't get over how huge he was but seemed as light as a feather in that tank, moving so slowly and gracefully through the water.

It wasn't too long before a crowd started gathering. A mother and her young son sat on a bleacher in front of us. They, too, were mesmerized by this animal and its enormity. So much so that the little boy said to his mother,

"Look at that big butt."

I kid you not, it was instantaneous that the hippo's tail started spinning like a propeller. He then backed his butt up to the glass of the tank where the little boy was sitting and pooped a streak! There was so much poop that the water turned tan in color.

The crowd absolutely roared! It was almost as if the hippo understood that the little boy was poking fun at the size of his butt and responded in revenge with, "Well, take this kid, poop-poopde-doo"
