Downey cons1iders $260M budget

By Eric Pierce Editor

DOWNEY – Buoyed by a healthy economy and an expanding sales tax base, the Downey City Council is poised to adopt a $260 million fiscal budget, even if "significant are beginning to challenges" appear on the horizon.

The balanced spending plan totals $259,942,802 and is allinclusive, meaning it includes operational expenditures resulting from Measure S revenues includes infrastructure investments financed by Measure S bond funds.

Measure S is the half-cent sales tax increase Downey voters approved in 2016.

Overall, the proposed budget is 2.7% larger than Downey's 2018-19

Expenditures are projected at $99.9 million, funded by estimated revenues of $93.9 million.

"When developing the budget proposal, the Council has directed that staff continue the highquality programs and operations at the same level of effort from the previous fiscal year, with additional expenditures stemming only from the Measure S related activities and bond-funded construction program," City Manager Gilbert Livas wrote in the budget proposal.

are no improvement projects or operating costs funded through General Fund reserves, which are projected to reach $30 million by the close of the next fiscal year, Livas added.

The proposed budget - which ll needs formal approval from the City Council before July 1 – projects steady increases in property tax and sales tax revenues, along with a 4.3% growth in local median household income. Downey's average household income is currently at $68,162, which outpaces L.A. County households ($65,006) and the U.S. ($60,336).

The Downey Police Department requested a 2% increase over last year's spending plan, bringing its total budget to $36.6 million. Part of the increase can be attributed to a need for 10 new Ford Explorer police interceptors ($865,000) and four Chevy Colorados ($92,600).

In addition, the police department will rent 18 new vehicles at an annual cost of $111,250.

The Downey Fire Department saw its proposed budget rise 8% over last year to $23.2 million. Its budget includes requests for new equipment such as ECG monitors and defibrillators, and four new leased vehicles.

Mayor Rick Rodriguez, the only candidate to endorse Measure S when he campaigned for City Council in 2016, praised the proposed budget.

"We're delivering exactly what we promoted to Downey: a public safety initiative that supports our police and fire departments," said Rodriguez. "We're getting things

Downey's financial outlook isn't without its challenges.

Officials pointed to increasing annual pension obligations which are expected to jump from $56.2 million this current fiscal year to $70.8 million in 2024.

There is also concern about a slowing housing market, a decrease in sales tax growth, and an eventual U.S. recession.

Officials added that Downey's growth in expenditures has already outpaced the city's revenues.

Downey will save some money as the city's total staffing is expected to be reduced by six positions. This is a result of the city contracting with MV Transportation for its transit driver and transit dispatch services.

Salvador Franco owned a vocational training school.

Authorities allege students received little to no training, and Franco pocketed students' financial vouchers.

By Eric Pierce

DOWNEY - Salvador Franco, a candidate for Downey City Council in 2012, pleaded no contest last week for his role in an alleged vocational training fraud scheme.

Franco, 42, was charged with one felony count of conspiring to commit a crime, 18 felony counts of making a fraudulent statement to obtain or deny compensation, and 18 felony counts of fraudulent

On May 24, Franco and his codefendant, 45-year-old Mirella Flores of Paramount, accepted a court offer and pled no contest to all counts.

Franco and Flores were immediately sentenced three years of formal probation and ordered to pay $88,000 in restitution to insurers and $62,000 in investigative costs to the California Department of

The defendants were also sentenced to 90 days in Orange County Jail, however, this was stayed pending the completion of 275 hours of community service by Franco and 250 hours by Flores.

Between 2015 and 2017, Franco and Flores participated in an alleged Supplemental Job Displacement Voucher fraud scheme involving the Technical School, Inc., doing business as Technical College, Inc., and Graduates Do Succeed Institute, doing business as GDS Institute.

Franco was a 20 percent owner and a Director of Technical College as well as its Chief Financial Officer. He was also the Chief Financial Officer of GDS Institute. Flores was an employee for both

The defendants conspired and offered to provide workers compensation claimants with either at-home or off-site training for a few hours a week along with work related materials such as a computer. In exchange, claimants were expected to sign over their Supplement Job Displacement ouchers that were valued between $4,000 and $10,000.

Other students were offered a monetary payment in exchange for signing over their vouchers and not attending any training.

The enrollment materials allegedly sent to insurers for payment on the vouchers, however, vastly misrepresented the training that the claimants were going to receive, prosecutors said. Instead of listing the at-home training, the provision of supplies, or the kickbacks to the students, defendants described the training as being several hundred hours in length, requiring full-time (40 hours per week) attendance at one of the schools' campuses.

Compwest Insurance Company was alerted to the alleged fraudulent scheme by a student living in Orange County who did not receive the promised home training from Technical College. Compwest then notified both OCDA and the California Department of Insurance, who agreed to jointly investigate the complaint.

Shortly thereafter, the Los Angeles District Attorney's Office joined the investigation.

Franco ran for Downey City Council in 2012 and was endorsed by then-Councilman Luis Marquez and the Downey Firefighters Association.

"I own and operate vocational training schools that train students in nursing, light auto mechanics, solar technologies, and computer technology," Franco said in campaign mailers at the time. "Along with my wife, also a business owner, we jointly employ over 30 people.

that election.

Franco's political experience goes back to 2001, when he was elected to the Bell Gardens City Council. He lost his re-election bid in 2005, however, and was later fined $12,500 for failing to file several campaign finance statements for the 2005 election.

DOWNEY GETTING 3,000 NEW TREES

BARTOLO JOSEPH: If you're a homeowner, having large trees like these are a nightmare. The roots of the tree could damage your pipes and they could buckle the sidewalk over time. Not to mention, some these trees drip sap...... Yeah, I hate

GEORGE MANZANILLA: They also increase the value of your property, provide shade and cut down on cooling costs during the summer, make the streets look better and more aesthetically pleasing. If you live near the freeway they help cutdown on the amount of carcing genic particulates that carcinogenic particulates that you breath in.

Damaged pipes are not good, but that can be easily avoided. Trees have a life span and need to be continually planted by every generation. Buckled sidewalk can be fixed in 2 days, a mature tree can take decades to grow. I think trees are awesome and make the city look better.

Rising housing costs are driving people to the streets, study finds.

LOS ANGELES - The number of homeless people counted across Los Angeles County jumped 12% over the past year to nearly 59,000, with more young and old residents and families on the streets, officials said Tuesday.

The majority of the homeless were found within the city of Los who had been homeless Angeles, which saw a 16% increase to 36,300, the Los Angeles Homeless Services Authority said in presenting January's annual count to the county Board of Supervisors.

registered a year after the previous tally found a slight decrease in the county's homeless population.

The county's Homeless Services Authority said it helped 21,631 people move into permanent housing during 2018 - a pace that would have helped rapidly end homelessness if economic pressures had not simultaneously pushed thousands more out of their homes.

But while some people managed to get permanent places to live, others who had homes were forced onto the streets of metro Los Angeles' vast urban

At cultural event, talk turns to homelessness

By Lorine Parks Society Columnist

DOWNEY – 7 pm was the announced starting time, and at 7:10 Roy Anthony Shabla stepped to the microphone and welcomed everyone to the May edition of his Green Salon, a long-running monthly gathering for musicians, artists, poets, and craft-beer makers.

Downey doesn't come till the event is nearly over," Roy has said, and he usually starts the festivities accordingly late. Not this time. Sean Ashton, Downey City Councilman, had graciously offered to come and speak on the homeless situation in Downey, and I was eager to interview him for the gathered artists, art lovers, and artist lovers. One of the musicians had added his microphone and stand to Roy's, so we both would

Good weather prevailed, the kind of balmy evening that has trademarked Roy's sessions in his home garden that have given the event its name.

SEAN ASHTON: We won't fix the homeless crisis by throwing money at it, says Downey councilman

Rain was forecast, but the cold and damp had held off, and the spring evening light lasted well beyond the interview.

Two tables were laden with vegan snacks, olives, wine and beer. Other tables held neat piles of books of poetry by local poets and t-shirts with quotes.

Poster boards held laminated clippings of my articles about the homeless women who stand at the post office, with colorful photos of one of them, "Julie."

These last minute decorations made it to the party thanks to the goodwill of Maria at Office Max, the one on Firestone near the old All-American site. She put them together at the last minute for me, and even found some coupons to help ease the expense.

I talked with artist Scotty Salmon – "like the fish" – whose colorful abstract shapes were underscored – pun intended – by five-line musical

"This big one even has a title," Scotty said, and I could make out, between undulating golden swirls, the words "The Girl From Ipanema." Interpretation of the circles and triangles is left to the viewer.

This reporter interviewed some early arrivals, specifically one young woman with lime green hair done up in corkscrew curls.

"Why do you have green hair," I asked, and the answer was, she homelessness and falling into homelessness on a continuous basis," said Peter Lynn, the authority's executive director.

About a quarter of those counted became homeless for the first time in 2018, and about half of those cited economic hardship as the primary cause, the authority said.

About three-quarters of the homeless people counted were living outdoors, fueling concerns of a growing public health crisis with piles of garbage and rats near homeless encampments lining downtown sidewalks.

County Supervisor Janice Hahn called the increase in homeless population "disheartening."

"Even though our data shows we are housing more people than ever, it is hard to be optimistic when that progress is overwhelmed by the number of people falling into homelessness," Hahn said.

The Los Angeles County figures mirror tallies across California, as state officials struggle to address a lack of affordable housing. In addition, officials said, wages among lower income people have not kept up with the rising cost of living.

Some state lawmakers on Tuesday called for legislation capping rent increases on some tenants and encouraging the construction of more affordable housing.

used to work at Disneyland making costumes for the parades, and the employees' appearance there was rigidly regulated.

Now Sarah, 24, doesn't work at Disneyland, she runs a shop called Pop in Little Tokyo, and she is having the time of her life doing some of the things she always wanted to do. Oh, to be that young again.

Sarah had come with her frind Vicki because Vicki's fiancé, Steve Cheng, was the headliner musician for later in the evening.

Roy had just done some white on white pieces in honor of Robert Ryman, the important minimalist and conceptual artist who died in February, still working at age 88. Minimalism played a large part in Roy's development, and refers to a spare and bare style, a reaction to the more florid abstract expressionism of the twentieth century.

The Interview

At the appointed hour, a beginning audience of 10 or so had arrived. They sat on folding chairs in the large cement expanse around Roy's atelier in Santa Fe Springs, in a pleasantly isolated industrial park. His space's 20-ft. high ceilings accommodate Roy's newly expanded style. Not for every living room, but maybe for a foyer, the way Roy's guru Jackson Pollack's masterpiece "Mural 1943" dominated the entry to patron Peggy Guggenheim's Manhattan townhouse.

The cinderblock wall outside the compound made a bright backdrop as Downey Councilman Sean Ashton launched into an explanation of the ways that viewing the problem of homelessness have evolved.

"Homelessness cannot be cured by throwing money at it," Sean said. "Time has shown us that method doesn't solve the problem."

And the problem isn't homelessness at all.

"It's the myriad of modern-day troubles," said Sean, "which lead to that final disaster. If we can solve those, homelessness will go away."

"Last week at an inter-city conference on this subject," Sean said, "we identified factors, like a decline in the economy, and the eroding buying power of the middle and lower class worker's wage."

Then there is the un-affordability of housing; death of sheltering relatives; mental health issues and the soaring cost of medications; alcoholism and drug abuse; domestic abuse. Sex trafficking. Technology has replaced humans with machines and robots, even on something as mundane as the corner car wash.

"And there have always been a few," said Sean, "who are happy to live outside the system. They used to be called hobos and hippies, not vagrants, and they took to the open road or Walden Pond, not the San Gabriel Riverbed."

"During the 80's," said Sean, "there was talk of hard answers for crime, and so possession of drugs like marijuana was over-criminalized. That put more people in jail, resulting in overcrowding the jails, and now we have that problem to deal with. Let the prisoners out early? Let forprofits build jails and run them? One problem has created another."

From the audience, the musician who had played the guitar and was singing at 6 pm when the gates opened, asked a question.

"I'm from Downey," he said. "I'm a truck driver, and these forprofit humanitarian service businesses strike me as wrong. Like for-profit jails." Clearly the audience was interested in all the ways government and its people can interact.

By now it was 7:15, still light, and there were 15 interested listeners.

"Downey has gotten $300,000 from CDBG," said Sean. "Sorry for the jargon, that's Community Development Block Grants, and we are working with a group called the Whole Child. We are targeting families who have become homeless, and bringing services to them, and their school-age children. We can get them help to go on living. So one segment is being served."

I said I understood that there were ordinances in California that forbid anyone from interfering when a homeless person camps out on a bench. Calling the police won't get them moved from their spot in front of a business.

"That raises ADA concerns," Sean said, meaning the Americans with Disabilities Act, "in case the sidewalk is not clear enough for someone in a wheelchair to pass. Public safety is also a main concern."

Roy asked about the census taking.

"We take the census every year," Sean said. "We need it to calculate how much government funds to ask for, to provide services."

How many homeless are there in Downey?

"This year there were 89," said Sean. "But two years ago it was 310, and last year 208."

How to account for the big discrepancy?

"Maybe we are reducing the number by offering them services," said Sean. "Or maybe the counting method is not accurate."

"I volunteer with the census count," said Roy. "If it's a rainy night you can't find even one, and when the sun comes out in the morning, there are five at one gas station."

"There is a shelter being planned in Downey," said Sean. "But it will be for veterans. It is on county property but within the Downey city boundaries, on Gardendale and Garfield. Before I was on the Council, I thought that wasn't Downey. It had an American Legion Hall, a recreational building with a bar. But the property had become rundown and was not generating tax revenue for the county."

"So the County and Downey partnered to raze the hall, and plan the shelter," said Sean. "But the neighbors in South Gate and Hollydale have complained. NIMBY – Not In My Back Yard."

It's more than the economy

BY SCOTT RASMUSSEN

For more than a generation, James Carville's campaign maxim, "It's the economy, stupid," has been held up as an essential truth of American politics.

There's no denying that a strong economy is an incumbent president's best friend. Seventy-three percent of voters currently rate the economy as a very important issue. As a result, if the economy remains strong for another 1 1/2 years, many analysts believe President Donald Trump will be favored to win reelection. On the other hand, if a recession hits next year, we will almost certainly have a new president in 2021.

However, recent data about the president's trade wars suggests that a sizable number of voters consider other factors more important than economics.

For example, just 31% believe higher tariffs on goods imported from China will be good for the United States. However, a much larger number — 58% — support such tariffs. In other words, more than a quarter of all voters think the tariffs will be harmful to our economy but still support them.

A similar dynamic is found on the president's call for higher tariffs on Mexico. Just 25% believe they will be good for our country, but 50% support those tariffs. Again, one-fourth of the nation's voters support a policy they think will hurt economically.

Adding to the mystery is that support for tariffs comes despite the fact that 8 out of 10 voters believe free trade is generally good for the United States. Eight out of 10 also believe free trade creates more jobs in our country than it destroys.

Given these realities, why is there such support for policies that many believe will hamper our economy? It's because — when dealing with other nations — many Americans consider some things more important than the economy.

In the case of China, 63% believe China has used trade to take advantage of the United States. Only 13% disagree. This suggests that many voters see these trade negotiations as a matter of fairness rather than transactional economics.

As for Mexico, the defining factor is immigration debate. While 77% of voters believe that legal immigration is good for the United States, 82% believe illegal immigration is bad. Voter frustration is boiling over because of a long-held belief that political elites in Washington have no interest in stopping illegal immigration. So, 50% think tariffs are worth a try even at the risk of short-term economic pain.

What's especially interesting about the data is that voters are far from certain this approach will work. Just 39% have any confidence that the president's approach will encourage the Mexican government to help stop illegal immigration. But 50% are willing to try it.

This suggests that voters are tired of political leaders telling them what solutions won't work and then using that as an excuse for inaction. If China is taking advantage of us, stand up to them. If Mexico can help stem the tide of illegal immigration, get them to do so.

This attitude echoes President Franklin D. Roosevelt's belief in "bold, persistent experimentation." In the midst of the Great Depression, FDR said: "It is common sense to take a method and try it. If it fails, admit it frankly and try another. But above all, try something."

Why does Google know everything you've bought on Amazon?

BY CHARLIE WARZEL

Last month, CNBC reported on a page in Google's account settings titled "Purchases" — a month-by-month list of items you've bought across online services like Amazon and other apps that are collected via Google services like Gmail.

It's not quite fair to call the reveal of the Google Purchases page a scandal; the page is publicly accessible, and it's not as if the company is illicitly purchasing the information — instead, it's scanning your inbox and scraping information based on confirmation and purchase emails you directed to your Gmail account.

And yet, Purchases is a jarring example of how leaky our data really is and how large companies can aggregate that information unbeknown to the consumer. I, for one, was unaware that almost every concert ticket, Domino's pizza and Amazon purchase (including a 2014 accidental purchase of the film "Tango & Cash") was being logged by Google. Equally troubling: The purchases can't easily be deleted from the page without also deleting the receipt emails from your Gmail account.

When I scanned my list I was struck by the length of the trail of information — more than six years of online purchases. The depth of that digital record reminded me of other reports of individuals downloading their data from Facebook and Google after 2018's Cambridge Analytica scandal and despairing at the granular detail of the information collected. Every movement cataloged, analyzed and leveraged. But to what end?

Google's explanation in this instance feels lacking. The company told CNBC that the Purchases page exists simply "to help you easily view and keep track of your purchases, bookings and subscriptions in one place" and that it does not sell user data or use your Gmail information to show you ads. But the company's privacy page also notes that "information about your orders may also be saved with your activity in other Google services."

Scrolling through my Purchases, I couldn't shake the most basic questions: What good reason is there for Google to store six years of detailed purchase information? Why can't I delete it without deleting the emailed receipts? Why aren't there default time limits on how long information is stored?

I had the same reaction reading a story in The Washington Post last week that revealed how in just one week, 5,400 hidden app trackers transmitted personal data (in some cases, violating app privacy policies) to third parties. I found it hard to get through the piece without getting tripped up on a series of "whys": Why do our apps hoover up our personal information and funnel it out in the dead of night? Why aren't these behaviors limited by our phones by default? Patrick Jackson, a former National Security Agency researcher who helped The Post conduct the tracker experiment, had similar questions. "This is your data," he told The Post. "Why should it even leave your phone? Why should it be collected by someone when you don't know what they're going to do with it?"

Of course there are technical answers to many of these questions. In Google's case, perhaps your information is fed to train machine systems to help boost artificial intelligence or to improve intelligence in products like maps and search. In the case of the iPhone apps, data is transmitted in the night so as not to interfere with your daytime usage.

And yet these answers are rarely satisfying. They're logistical answers to bigger, structural questions: Why does the internet have to work this way? Why is the currency of the commercial web our increasingly granular information? Why is it collected, sorted and traded in ways that are nearly impossible to see in the aggregate? And why should we trust the sophistication of ad-targeting technology in an industry where advertisers will lose more than $23 billion globally to ad fraud just this year?

As the privacy discussion accelerates, grows more sophisticated and bleeds into headlines and the halls of Congress, it's worth asking these fundamental questions of tech companies, data brokers and lawmakers. It may seem overly simplistic, but our current privacy reckoning is about just that: finding satisfactory answers to the most basic questions about the future of our digital lives.

Yes, taxing the rich is possible

Taxing the very rich, over time

BY DAVID LEONHARDT

For a long time, there was a predictable response to any proposal for increasing taxes on the rich: It will wreck the economy. You don't hear this response quite so often anymore, however, because it's become so obviously false. If anything, the economy in recent decades has grown more quickly when Washington taxes the rich more, not less.

Instead, you often now hear a new argument: There's no point in trying to tax rich people, because they'll just figure out a way to avoid paying taxes.

The Washington Post ran a big news article recently making this case (and parts of the argument have appeared elsewhere too, including in The Times). The Post article claimed that Elizabeth Warren's plan to introduce an annual wealth tax relies on a set of "assumptions that defy a long history of U.S. policymaking": namely, "that the country's wealthiest taxpayers won't find ways to evade the targeted tax hike she proposes."

But this claim is wrong, too. The long history of American policymaking actually shows that raising taxes on the wealthiest taxpayers is entirely possible.

Nonetheless, I expect you'll hear the cynical "taxing the rich is impossible" case a lot in coming years, especially if a future president does try to enact a major tax increase on the wealthy. Lobbyists who represent the wealthy like the argument because it lets them claim that there's no point in trying. And journalists find the argument alluring because it has a ring of tough skepticism, and we journalists love to present ourselves as tough skeptics.

In this case, though, it's important to be skeptical about the skepticism.

Over the last few decades, the total federal tax rate paid by the very rich has tended to hover between 30 percent and 40 percent. It's been closer to 30 percent after a Republican president has cut taxes and closer to 40 percent after a Democratic president has modestly raised them.

The chart above shows the longer version of this history: the average federal tax rate — spanning income taxes, estate taxes and more — for the top 0.01 percent of earners over the past century. (The data comes from Gabriel Zucman, an economist recently profiled in a cover story for Bloomberg Businessweek.)

And the long version of the history is crucial here. It shows that for much of the 20th century, total taxes on the very wealthy were much higher than they are now. Before World War II, the average rate hovered around 70 percent. From the mid-1940s through the mid-1970s, the average rate was above 50 percent.

It's really no mystery why the rate has declined: The federal government has cut tax rates on the rich. The top marginal rate has plummeted. Taxes on stock holdings have declined, too. Perhaps nothing has mattered more than the erosion of the estate tax, through a combination of a lower rate and an increased threshold for paying the tax. These policy changes have helped turbocharge economic inequality.

Is it possible to tax the wealthy too heavily and damage the economy? Yes. I don't think the top marginal tax rate should be 91 percent, as it was in the 1950s. But it's a very, very long way from 91 percent today. It's only 37 percent, which is too low. Taxes on stocks and most other financial investments are also too low.

Changing this situation is within the power of the federal government. History shows that when the government tries to collect more taxes from its richest citizens, it succeeds. So don't give in to cynicism. Today's radical levels of inequality are not inevitable. They're a choice that our society has made.

For more ...

"The Wealth Detective Who Finds the Hidden Money of the Super Rich" — that Businessweek profile of Zucman, by Ben Steverman — is worth reading.

The decline of the estate tax and an effective decline in the corporate tax rate are the main reasons that the wealthy pay so much less in tax, as the economists Thomas Piketty and Emmanuel Saez have explained. (If you want the brief version, click that link and check out the chart on page 12.)

Alexandra Thornton and Galen Hendricks of the Center for American Progress released a report yesterday outlining the various options for increasing top-end taxes, including a wealth tax, a higher estate tax and the elimination of various corporate and investment loopholes. The report is called, "Ending Special Tax Treatment for the Very Wealthy." In addition to legislative changes, Thornton told me that "more funding for high-end tax enforcement is needed."

Pledge of Allegiance

Dear Editor:

My wife and I went to our grandson's junior high promotion at Downey High School (which I graduated from in 1974).

When the class rose to recite the Pledge of Allegiance, only about 20% knew the words, which is very sad for this country.

What are we teaching these kids in schools and their family if they don't realize the importance of living in this country?

Are we just passing a bunch of kids to get them through the system and, if so, that's really sad for the city of Downey and for this country.

Norwalk spending

Dear Editor:

Hey, Norwalk City Hall: OK, so you have a $151 million budget.

You have millions of dollars going here and there. But what about our roads/streets? You have some money for "infrastructure" but where is all that extra gasoline tax money going?

To all you people who voted for it (I voted no on it), are you enjoying your smooth ride and potholes? Do you like your new flat tire? Do you like your realignment and wheel balancing? Money (your money) well spent!

Let's be honest here, government does not know how to handle our money.

Veterans housing project

Dear Editor:

It was nice to read Councilman Sean Ashton admit what Mayor Rick Rodriguez and the rest of the city council would not: that the veterans housing project is indeed a homeless shelter. ("At Cultural Event, Talk Turns to Homelessness," TheDowneyPatriot.com)

Instead of building the shelter in its own community, Downey is dumping it in Hollydale, without assurances that it will be properly funded or managed. It's shameful.

Deborah Gonzalez South Gate

No such thing as 'free college'

Dear Editor:

I'm tired of hearing free college for all from the progressive and socialist Democrats. They never talk about how this will be funded besides taxing the billionaires and millionaires. Here are some questions that should be asked.

- 1. In what colleges can students enroll?
- 2. What is the maximum tuition per student?
- 3. Will medical students tuitions be fully funded?
- 4. Will students pay back the tuition if they drop out?5. Will colleges increase the tuition since the government will be
- paying the bill?
 - 6. Will the wealthy students be eligible for free tuition?

Politicians cannot maintain and administer the K-12 public schools. Look at Measure EE! Politicians were sure that the measure would pass because "It's for the children." They didn't care that the property tax increase would be a burden on the property and homeowners (ie 1300 sq ft home = $240 increase). I'm glad the people voted this measure down.

If the "free college for all" is ever passed be prepared for "higher taxes for all."

Debating government's role in aiding the homeless

Changing the subject for a minute, I asked if there were philosophical discussions on the council. On the one hand, there might be those who hold the idea that the best government is the one that governs least, and that social problems should be left to private enterprise and faith-based organizations.

Roy Anthony Shabla

The opposing point of view would be the idea that social problems are the responsibility of the citizenry. The government should be the social safety net, and also the employer of last resource, so there would be no

Taxes pay for social benefits, and like most other civilized countries we should offer more social welfare programs, and accept a higher tax rate to pay for it.

"I am a Democrat," said Sean, put that right out there. I'm a teacher, and I believe in paying my fair share. Government is for the protection of the

"But I don't believe in heavy taxes, and I want an accounting of how the money is spent.'

Does Downey have a coordinated program, or is it being developed piecemeal? What is Downey actually initiating as a new program? What can I tell Julie and Jennifer at the post office, and the man who lives in the hedges, or the man with the deeply weathered face, who silently glared at me as he pushed a shopping cart filled with all his possessions past my car where I was parked at In N Out, where Lakewood crosses

Is there an action plan in Downey for helping the people who have congregated in the riverbed, or for those who stand at the post office or outside Marie Calendar's, rain, wind or shine?

If you are a vet, yes, there will be a shelter and counseling. If you are a family with school age kids, then TLC and PTA HELPS provide help. Our police take sensitivity training, have psychologists with them when they approach the homeless, and they can put the homeless in touch with social workers and social services.

So then, does it follow that a homeless person should go to the police station to apply for help?

By now it was 7:20 and 17 people had arrived. Carol and Frank Kearns, he a poet and she a writer for the Patriot on local concerns, were in the audience, as well as poet Clifton Snider, coordinator of the evening's program.

"What about places for people to park, if they are living in their cars?" asked Carol. "What about church parking lots?"

"The parks permit all day parking, but they do close at 10," Sean noted. "And the police enforce that.

Once again, are there any specific plans to build a structure in Downey with, say, public toilets, and showers, that the homeless could

"There are free public toilets in the parks," Sean said, "and in the library." But he admitted that park-goers do not like to see their facilities taken over by the homeless. And without a car, getting to these spread-out facilities is hard.

"What about portable showers?" asked Roy. "There are already volunteers who give haircuts, and a place on Imperial, Clothes the Deal, where someone who wants to return to the work force can get a free outfit to wear for an interview. But what about social services for the homeless who are too old or too handicapped to work?

"I can get anyone a place to sleep, for one night, just like that," said Sean, snapping his fingers.

But I wondered, will that help 64-year-old Julie, nearly blind, who for a year and a half has spent rainy nights moving from a hospital waiting room to inside a Jack in the Box?

Sean reminded the gathering of the unique point of view of the council person, who is responsible to the voters.

"We have to think how we are going to fund these projects," he said. Besides compassion and energy to help one's fellow human being, there has to be the dollars and cents considerations.

Right now, city budgets for places like Downey allot about half for protective services, like fire and police, and almost as much for infrastructure – street repair, traffic lights, parks, the Library. The balance pays the staff and the employees who make things happen in

By now it was 7:40, and 20 or more sat listening while a few preferred to stand. This was an informal affair, and musicians were waiting to perform, poets were ready to read. We were still trying to figure out the question, does Downey have a master plan, that coordinates existing programs, or is it a patchwork that does not fit all

The Downey Unified School District supports TLC - True Lasting Connections -- for families with children in our schools. There are programs for seniors that the homeless can attend, in Apollo Park and at the Barbara J. Riley Senior Center, with an occasional free meal

"Mayor Rick Rodriguez has organized a Council of Clergymen," Sean said. "They meet monthly and coordinate services they can offer."

But that goes into faith-based, not government-offered aid.

"What about the skate park," Scott, the 24-year-old painter, asked. "I thought that was terrific when it was built. Doesn't that help keep at-risk kids active and out of gangs?"

"Yes, and Downey was the first to have something like that," said Sean, "thanks to former Mayor Meredith Perkins. It's a great success."

The city also works with PATH, Projects for Assistance in Transition from Homelessness, which funds services for people with serious mental illness (SMI) who are experiencing homelessness. Again, those grant funds are restricted to those with SMI.

By now it was nearly 8 o'clock, and about 25 had gathered, their interest in the interview unbroken. Sean offered the insights that the homeless tend to congregate where they can get help, and they tend to be where things are familiar.

"The homeless in Downey probably grew up here, went to school and "I am very accessible," Sean said. "Please get in touch with me by email and I'll try to get answers to your questions. And that email is

The world now has this problem, not just the United States. And in the United States, they look to California because California is progressive and innovative, and many situations have had their solutions begin here. Maybe California will look to Downey, to see if we have found any answers.

As Sean said, it's all the situations contributing to homelessness that must be resolved, and then homelessness will go away. But until that time, people are suffering acutely from physical and emotional

Councilman Sean had intended to leave early, but he stayed after he left the mike, and talked to questioners. Music and poetry flowed long into the evening, several cartons of food donated by participants waited to be taken to the First Christian Church in Downey

Non-profit planting 3,000 trees in Downey

DOWNEY - More than 3,000 trees will be planted throughout Downey as part of a year-long initiative to increase the city's greenery, officials announced.

The trees will be planted by Tree People, an environmental nonprofit organization. Different tree species will be planted, including crape myrtle Trees will be planted in the city's right-of-way -- not private property -- on streets and parks. Tree People will care for the trees for the first 24 months.

The planting will be done in two phases: the first stage began in April and wrapped up in May; the second phase is scheduled to begin this September and be completed by May 2020.

The work is part of a larger program in which Tree People will plant 11,000 trees in Downey, about tree plantings in their

Lessons My Dad Taught Me

By Gail Earl Contributor

I know that I have written many stories about my dad; how he was the most warm-hearted, tender, amazing man I have ever met.

I'd also like to tell you about how fun he was too. My entire life was filled with his adventures and the special ways he shared them with his kids. Here are just a few of my favorite everyday memories.

"STILTS". Dad built a pair of stilts for my best girlfriend and myself. They were made from 2 x 4's with crutch tips on the bottom. They were very tall and we had days and days of fun racing up and down the street with them.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me to be adventuresome.

"WATERMELON SEEDS". Dad loved to entertain us and make us laugh. He was a pro at shooting watermelon seeds across the yard and hitting a target. He was so accurate, he would just tell us what he was aiming for and a spit second later, the seed would be sitting bulls eye.

I'll never forget the look on my sister's face when he shot one across a picnic table and it landed right in the middle of my sister's forehead. We all knew this was no accident!

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me to enjoy being silly.

"PVC". My dad loved PVC. He made many everyday inventions. If anything needed to be made or modified, he found a way to include PVC. He made many Christmas lawn decorations with millions of lights strung in and around the PVC.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me to think outside the box.

"LIBRARIES". Dad took us to the library on Saturday mornings. I'll never forget the happy comfort I felt sitting on his lap and sharing books.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me about the many adventures awaiting just inside a book.

"CLACKERS". Dad had a game that he called "Clackers." All it was was each of us running to get an empty soda can, laying it flat on the ground, and smashing our foot down (in tennis shoes) on top of the can

When you smashed it, the can would wrap around the bottom of our shoe and hold in place. Then there would be a mad scramble to the corner and back to the porch. As you ran, the cans made this "clickity-clacking" sound, thus the name of the game.

At any given moment, Dad would yell "Clackers!" and everyone would run for a can. This game went right through my childhood .

When I was 17, my family and I were at a hotel in Pismo Beach. Dad yelled "Clacker!" and without skipping a beat, the game was on. Dad and I were circling the pool so many times and laughing so hard we were quite surprised to see that the manager had been called to make us quiet down.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me the value of laughter.

"FLASHLIGHTS". Dad loved flashlights. He was just fascinated with them. Every time he went to the store, he'd buy another one.

Every night after dinner, the whole family would go for a walk around the block. Everyone had to have their own flashlight. This tradition was a family favorite and continues today with his children, grandchildren and great grandchildren.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me the value of "WHISTLES". My dad loved to whistle. It was a constant around my house and all through his life. It just made him happy. He even made a family whistle that was used very often when we were trying to locate one of the other family members.

I have always been a whistler and it, too, puts me in a happy mood.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me not to be afraid to express my happiness.

"HANKY HAT" My dad always had a neatlyironed white handkerchief in his pocket. It never stopped amusing us kids to see him pull it from his pocket, tie little knots in each corner, and plunk it down on his scalp to make a perfectly adequate hat to protect him from the sun.

We have many photos of him at picnics, parks and many other occasions with his "hank hat" on.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me to be inventive.

Dad taught me to understand that the prize in life is one's own happiness. He taught me to have a happy life and not be stifled by what anyone else might be thinking. He taught me to be memorable. He taught me to celebrate being funny. He taught me to celebrate me being me.

Memorial Day at Green Hills

By Gail Earl Contributor

This Memorial Day celebration was a little different for us this year but it was truly special.

We generally honor our veterans at Riverside National Cemetery. That's where both our mom and our dad are buried. This year we decided to take our observance to Green Hills Memorial Park in Rancho Palos Verdes. They had the traveling Vietnam Memorial Wall displayed and we had many close friends' names to locate on it. The grounds were completely decorated with flowers and flags on every gravesite, placed by the Boy Scouts of America.

The Patriot Guard Riders opened the procession with motorcycles followed by the Cabar Feide Bag Pipe Band. Congressman Ted Lieu welcomed everyone and then we had a presentation of colors. It was very moving.

Next there was The Fallen Soldier Tribute. The flags were raised and we pledged allegiance. We sang the national anthem and many dignitaries and VIP speakers were introduced and gave heartfelt tributes.

There was a very impressive aerial presentation of colors where the 21st Century Skydiving team jumped from their planes and each man was carrying a flag representing a different branch of service. It was amazing watching them steer their way down and land right in the middle of our celebration.

The Palos Verde's Symphonic Band did a salute to each branch. We were told to stand when we heard the hymn of our family member's service. I'm very proud to say that we stood honoring our immediate family members service in the Marines, the Air Force, the Army and the Navy. They even honored the service of our fire and and police departments. I once again got to stand. I was very proud.

The benediction was given and then there was a 21-gun salute. Taps were played which has always been a very emotional moment for us because it takes us right back to our father's funeral.

The bag pipe band played "Amazing Grace" and dozens of white doves were released. They circled round and round above our heads. I'm happy to say they were all on good behavior. No bombs were dropped.

We had fly overs by the C-17 Globe master out of March Air Force Base, the CJ-A Tiger Squadron, the P51 Mustang and the North American SNJ-5 "War Dog." They performed the "Missing Man Formation." It was absolutely stunning.

The ceremony ended with 5,000 of us singing "God Bless America."

Our hearts were filled on that day with the complete dedication and devotion of our men and women in service. Our hearts remain full!

An unauthorized user gained access to the personal information of millions of people.

Quest Diagnostics said the personal information of 11.9 million customers has potentially been compromised.

clinical laboratory The company said in a release that an "unauthorized user" gained access to a system used by American Medical Collection Agency (AMCA), a billing vendor hired by a Quest contractor called Optum360.

Quest said the information that may have been exposed included Social Security numbers and medical information, but not test

AMCA first notified Quest on May 14 of "potential unauthorized activity" on its payment page, Quest said. Two weeks later, according to Quest, AMCA then told Quest and Optum360 more about the breach, including the number of patients potentially affected and what information was accessed.

Quest said it has suspended using AMCA and that it was using "forensic experts" to examine the

It also said that AMCA has not provided "detailed or complete information" about the hack, including which customers might have been affected. AMCA and Optum360 did not immediately respond to a request for comment from CNN Business.

"We are committed to keeping our patients, health care providers, and all relevant parties informed as we learn more," Quest said in the release.

Quest's stock was unchanged on the news. The company has roughly 2,200 locations across the United States, according to its

POETRY MATTERS

Breakage

I go down to the edge of the sea. How everything shines in the morning light! The cusp of the whelk, the broken cupboard of the clam, the opened, blue mussels, moon snails, pale pink and barnacle scarred and nothing at all whole or shut, but tattered, split, dropped by the gulls onto the gray rocks and all the moisture gone.

It's like a schoolhouse of little words, thousands of words.

First you figure out what each one means by itself, the jingle, the periwinkle, the scallop full of moonlight.

Then you begin, slowly, to read the whole story.

- Mary Oliver

"I don't know exactly what a prayer is," Oliver writes. "I do know how to pay attention. I don't want to end up simply having visited this world." Poetry Matters is curated by Lorine Parks.

to celebrate the Downey Symphony Orchestra's 60th anniversary

Appointed tuba player in 1976, Tom Carlson is the longeststanding member of the Downey Symphony. "I was in third grade when I first heard the sound of an orchestra. I liked the deep sounds especially." He took up the big horn in 7th grade. And now, 43 years in, "It is a privilege to be part of this orchestral family."

News and updates from Cerritos

LOS CERRITOS CENTER STORING VEHICLES: Beginning in June and continuing through October, vehicle inventory from various Cerritos Auto Square dealerships will be temporarily stored at the Los Cerritos Center in the parking lot area adjacent to the Sears property.

The City of Cerritos has issued a temporary use permit for this purpose.

The vehicles will be temporarily relocated from two lots located at Studebaker Road and Del Amo Boulevard, which will undergo resurfacing and restriping. The lots are owned by Southern California Edison and are currently being used by Cerritos Auto Square dealerships for storage of vehicle inventory.

Once construction is completed on the Edison-owned lots, the vehicles will be returned to the original storage location.

TARGET SUBDIVIDES PROPERTY: The Cerritos City

Council has approved a proposal to divide the Target property located at 11525 South Street into two separate parcels.

The proposal entails splitting the property into two legal and conforming parcels in order to separate the existing vacant garden center and adjacent parking area from the main Target retail building. The Target garden center building will be converted into a retail, office and restaurant multi-tenant use.

The exterior appearance of the remodeled building will match the existing Target retail center, featuring various shades of beige walls, limestone and granite veneer. The new retail area will also feature building offsets and metal canopies above each storefront entrance. Both properties will maintain reciprocal parking and access.

The project is expected to be completed in Spring 2020.

SHOPPING CENTER

UPGRADES: The Cerritos City Council recently approved proposed exterior upgrades for the Christensen Shopping Center.

Developed in 1970, the plaza, located at 11402 through 11434 South Street in Cerritos, is currently home to the Sleep Number store, Belle Vie Wellness and Medical Aesthetics, several restaurants, a liquor store and other businesses.

The property owner, the Christensen Family Trust, plans to update and modernize the building's exterior with a contemporary look featuring brown paint, wood siding, brick veneer, simulated stone tiles and updated stucco finishes. There are also plans to upgrade existing signs located throughout the center to match the architectural design. Colorful accent trees, groundcover and shrubs will be added to the landscape as well as decorative paving.

The work is estimated to be completed by the end of the year.

SHREK THE MUSICAL:

Round up the kids and enjoy 3-D Theatricals' family-friendly production "Shrek the Musical" at the Cerritos Center for the Performing Arts (CCPA).

Based on William Steig's book "Shrek!" and the DreamWorks Animation film, this fun family affair tells the story of a swampdwelling ogre who goes on a lifechanging adventure to reclaim the deed to his land. Joined by a wisecracking donkey, the unlikely hero Shrek fights a fearsome dragon, rescues a feisty princess and learns that real friendship and true love aren't found only in fairy tales.

The characters of Shrek and other inhabitants of Far, Far Away come to life in "Shrek the Musical" with book and lyrics by Pulitzer Prize winner David Lindsay-Abaire ("Rabbit Hole") and music by Olivier Award winner Jeanine Tesori ("Thoroughly Modern Millie" and "Caroline, or Change"). Executive producer of 3-D Theatricals, T.J. Dawson, stars in the title role.

Show times are Friday, August 9, 16 and 23 at 8 p.m.; Saturday, August 10 at 8 p.m. and Saturday, August 17 and 24 at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m.; Sunday, August 11, 18 and 25 at 2 p.m.; and Thursday, August 22 at 7:30 p.m. Purchase tickets, which start from $45, at the CCPA Ticket Office, cerritoscenter.com or by calling (562) 916-8500.

FORMER MAYOR DIES:

Former City of Cerritos Mayor and Councilmember John F. Crawley passed away on Sunday, May 26, at the age of 77.

Crawley was elected to the City Council in 1990. He was re-elected in 1994 and served two terms as mayor, in 1993 and 1999. After leaving the City Council in 1999 due to term limits, Crawley was re-elected in 2001 and served as mayor in 2005.

Crawley served honorably in the Navy during the Vietnam War from June 1964 to July 1966 on two barbel-class submarines - the Barbel and Blueback. A Cerritos resident since 1978, Crawley served as president of the Cerritos Optimist Club and vice chairman of the Cerritos Regional Park Commission. He was a member and first commander of the Cerritos-Artesia Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) Post #1846.

Crawley was twice elected to the 63rd Assembly District Republican Central Committee, and served as chairman for two terms. In addition, he served as a voting delegate for the California State Republican Party. He also served as president of the California Contract Cities Association. He also coached a variety of youth sports teams in the City's recreation program.

Crawley was a self-employed financial consultant after retiring from an 18-year career as a senior financial analyst with Atlantic Richfield Company. He held a bachelor of science degree in business administration with a concentration in foreign trade from Woodbury University. He held teaching credentials in mathematics, business education and social science (world history, United States history, geography, economics, government and sociology) and taught full-time at Rivera Middle School in Pico Rivera. He is survived by his wife Pamela, his son Brian and his wife Kristin, and his granddaughters Kaely and Sarah.

Former Cerritos mayor John Crawley died May 26. He was a full-time teacher at Rivera Middle School in NEW MAYOR: Naresh Solanki was selected as mayor of Cerritos and Frank Aurelio Yokoyama as mayor pro tem by their colleagues during the City Council's annual reorganization meeting and mayoral transition on April 17.

A resident of Cerritos since 1988, Mayor Solanki was elected to the City Council in 2015. He served as Mayor Pro Tem in 2016 and 2018. The owner and CEO/President of retail grocery supermarkets, Mayor Solanki previously served as a Cerritos Planning Commissioner from 2007

He is a member of the City Council's Budget/Finance, Performing Arts, Personnel, Auto Mall, Business and Industry and Legislative committees. He serves as the Council's delegate to the
