Attorney admits to selling opioids online

Jackie Ferrari pleaded guilty to selling oxycodone pills on Craigslist; she came under investigation after a woman fatally overdosed.

DOWNEY – A Downey-based attorney pleaded guilty Monday to a federal narcotics distribution charge for illegally selling more than 1,000 oxycodone pills after offering the opioid drugs for sale on Craigslist.

Jackie Ferrari, 36, a resident of Downey, pleaded guilty to one count of illegally distributing oxycodone.

According to court documents, Ferrari sold a law enforcement source 50 oxycodone pills for $1,200 during a transaction on January 10.

Ferrari was arrested in this case on January 18 after agreeing to sell the source another 180 pills for $4,100.

The investigation into Ferrari began after a 22-year-old woman died in August 2018 of a fentanyl overdose, and text messages on the victim's phone initially indicated that she may have purchased the narcotics from a drug trafficker associated with incoming president.

linkFerraritothatoverdosedeath, said that she was "truly honored they opened an investigation to serve as your president" and "based on evidence...that she is a large-scale trafficker in opiates via the website Craigslist" and information developed by two local police departments tying Ferrari to drug trafficking activities in late 2017, according to an affidavit filed in this case.

Court documents describe how Ferrari posted ads on Craiglist offering oxycodone and other drugs under coded names such as "foxy roxy dolls," which referred to Roxicodone, a shortacting version of oxycodone.

In her plea agreement, Ferrari admitted informing customers that they would be required to ingest a pill in her presence, to verify that they were not law enforcement.

As a result of Monday's guilty plea, Ferrari will face a statutory maximum sentence of 20 years in federal prison when she is sentenced on October 21 by United States District Judge Michael W. Fitzgerald.

investigation into is being conducted Ferrari by the High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area (HIDTA) Task Force, which operates under the direction of the Drug Administration. Enforcement The investigation is being led by DEA agents and deputies with the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department.

The Costa Mesa Police Department and the Cypress Police Department provided substantial assistance in the investigation.

The case against Ferrari is being prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorneys Benjamin Barron, Chief of the Santa Ana Branch Office, and A. Carley Palmer of the International Narcotics, Money Laundering & Racketeering Section.

HERE ARE THE SCULPTURES BEING CONSIDERED FOR DOWNTOWN DOWNEY

ANGEL GARCIA: Great Idea pm the art, it should go up all through the four corners of the city and one in downtown. There are still a few that are happy to be in Downey and proud. We also should be using local Downey artist/sculptors, or as far as our surrounding areas. E.g Gateway Cities.

ANDREA CORTELLA IACOVITTII: I like the idea of art throughout Downey, but not clumped together in 4 blocks. I a m not a fan of these pieces though - especially the banana.

ALEXIS LATIN: The banana one is definitely my favorite.

JACIE PRIETO LOPEZ: Why? Why do we need this? I'd love to see proper lighting in our city especially in the smaller streets vs this artwork.

Council approves art pieces for Downtown

Five sculptures were selected to be placed in various areas around Downtown Downey as part of the Art in Public Places Program.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY - The City Council approved five pieces of art to be placed within the Downtown Downey area on Tuesday.

As part of the Art in Public Places Program, staff has been working with the Downtown Subcommittee – made up of Mayor Alex Saab and Councilman Rick Rodriguez - to determine what pieces would be placed.

The pieces selected include From a Different Perspective by Jane Dedecker, Homeward Monarch by Joe Norman, My Heart is in Your Hands by Jane Dedecker, Infinite Dance by Carol Gold, and On a Roll by Jack Hill.

Councilmember Saab said that "we went through quite a bit of [art] pieces."

"Obviously it's all subjective, right," said Saab. "I think when we went through these, we tried to make them neutral to a certain extent; not overly scandalous but also something that's gonna really give some character to the particular area that its in. We took a little bit of a conservative approach I think because it's Downey Avenue and we're not necessarily the most edgy city."

This sculpture called My Heart is in Your Hands is one of five art pieces the City Council selected for installation in Downtown Downey.

The total cost for the project is $320,250, with the funds fare currently budgeted within the City's Arts in Public Places budget.

City awards construction contract for library upgrades

Construction is anticipated to begin in August and carry on through June next year.

DOWNEY - City Council awarded an over $4.7 million construction contract on Tuesday to TELACU Construction Management for the City Library Modernization

The library was closed earlier this year in preparation for the library upgrades, which are part of collaborative white boards in The Measure S.

The total cost of the project is $6,968,272, which is included in the City's 2018-20 Capital Improvement Program.

In addition to general building updates to the exterior and interior of the building, the new library will also include four "Quiet Zone study rooms," an enlarged literacy room, three electronic checkout stations, numerous data ports and Studio (formerly the Colab) room, an upgraded Virtual Reality Lab (called The Cave), a new Cormack room, and an enhanced "Child Friendly" reading and activity area.

Construction related activities are anticipated to begin in August, and are scheduled to be complete in June of next year.

Downey's long affinity for patriotism

Things You Didn't Know About Downey

By Bobbi Bruce Downey Historical Society

On the front page of the Feb. 15, 1917, issue of a Downey newspaper was a full column, and a third was devoted to "Rules for Flag Etiquette." Sixteen paragraphs detailed the proper usage of the flag

The war in Europe was getting closer. Evidently the citizens were shaking the folds out of their flags.

The article listed the holidays on which flags should be displayed which included a "Star-Spangled Banner Day" on Sept. 14. Flag Day was listed as June 14. The others were Lincoln's birthday, Washington's birthday, Memorial Day and Independence Day.

On April 5, 1917, the Downey Champion newspaper printed an American flag on its front page with the announcement: "Once again the Stars and Stripes are to engage in warfare. The U.S. Senate has declared that a state of war now exists with Germany. There is no probability that this will be reversed by the lower house.'

AUDITORIUMS: In the Downey of that era, as in many small communities even to this day, the high school was the center of social life and of local interest. Its auditorium was used for public functions, such as town meetings for the discussion of local problems. Dances and rallies were held there at which the whole town turned out to support the local team in athletic contests.

It was a local point for civic pride. Usually it was the handsomest building in town. Its students were regarded as the best examples of youth the town could produce. They were patted on the back.

This concern also produced some spirited controversy. The townsfolk interest did not stop at the athletic field. It examined the curriculum: "What are they teaching the children?"

The tension between the professionalism of the teacher and the mixed but strongly voiced uncertainties of the taxpayer over what should be taught and how it should be taught is old as free public education. This natural tension is a check and balance factor in democratic institutions, which is also their salvation. Occasionally,

Our Symphony's first conductor once said, "A city without music is a dead city. I have been all over the world and I know that." Ours is a live city!

Quotation from Mario Cajati, 1967, Symphony archives Compiled by Joyce Sherwin however, the tension becomes so strident the institution veers towards a shambles. Then sanity appears to rescue the institution.

The Downey High School appears to have been emerging from something close to this pattern as America entered World War I. It was concern that overrode the portentous declaration of April 6. The war did move onto the domestic scene, however.

The Champion paper noted a strong sentiment for the organization of Home Guards in Downey. The newspaper approved, but hoped this could be done quietly and without arousing fanaticism. The fear, or imagined fear in Downey as in all California, was not from Germans or other hyphenated European Americans whose loyalty was suspect, but from Mexicans. Gen. Pershing, it will be remembered, had just won his spurs by chasing Pancho Villa into Mexico and feeling was still running high over his border raids. The war in Europe had possibly diverted the United States from a war with Mexico.

It was feared in California and the Southwest that Mexicans in these areas might use our involvement in the European conflict to flare out their resentments in hit and run acts of sabotage.

In commentating on a suspicion of disloyalty that was sweeping through California because many Mexicans were failing to show up for work, the Champion paper sanely noted that it was the week before Easter, when many Mexicans traditionally practiced absenteeism to observe their religious holidays.

'It is too early to get nervous," the newspaper said. It was too early, nor was there any reason to get nervous. This suspicion never developed into a reality.

The newspaper did a public service in dampening down an unwarranted hysteria. With this fear laid to rest, the community went about its day to day activity with an appearance of business as usual.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS: On Aug. 28, 2018, Irene (Kaucher) Lonergan donated to the History Center memorabilia she collected during her time in the Campfire Girls. Lonergan was 8 years old when she came to live in Downey and joined the Campfire Girls when she was in 4th grade at Gallatin School. She stayed in the organization until her 8th grade year at North Junior High School.

Lonergan says that they would meet once a week after school, wearing their uniforms to school on their meet day. Their group was named TAKIPI and was under the leadership of Mrs. Jack Nevin and Lonergan's mother Mrs. John Kaucher.

Lonergan says that each girl in the group had an "Indian name," believing hers to be Mawe ga ska, although she is not entirely sure after Campfire Adults were given some form of formal training in addition to the informal training given through individual conference and leaders' association meetings.

In 1956, Nevin was awarded Outstanding Women in the Community honors and the Silver Medallion Shuta Award that is presented to 10 of the most outstanding women in the United States for creativeness and originality in Campfire work.

Lonergan says that the girls earned beads for doing projects and got to sew them on their vests. Cooking, planting trees, camping, selling peanuts to earn money at the county fairs, and putting on a special tea party at Maude Price are all activities that Lonergan remembers fondly.

Lonergan saved her Campfire Girls membership cards from 1954, 1955, 1956, and 1957, as well as her uniform. She says that she learned many of her life skills through her early training in the Campfire Girls

the urine smell

The wide variety of foods that can result in smelly urine is surprising. Among them are onions, Brussels sprouts, garlic, bananas, turkey, chicken, salmon, curry, many spices, and even some types of coffee. In the case of asparagus, scientists suggest that asparagusic acid is converted to a sulfa-containing chemical...that smells.

Overall, the most common reason that urine starts to smell is not due to the food we consume, but to dehydration. It's easy to know if we are dehydrated by our urine's dark color. The quick and easy cure? Drink more water.

For women, urinary tract infections are the most common cause of smelly urine. The smell may be ammonia-like, or foul, or even slightly sweet. The same bacteria that cause the UTI cause

A yeast infection in the vagina may lead to a yeasty urine smell. Although the infection is inside the vagina, the urine picks up the smell as it passes through the urethra.

Diabetes can change the odor of urine. Diabetics often need to urinate more frequently, depending on how well controlled the blood sugar is. When sugar is in the urine, it results in a sweet, fruity smell. (The sweet taste of urine was long used as a diagnostic tool for diabetes!)

Cleaning by douching is no longer commonly done, and I don't recommend it. It changes the microbiome and the pH balance, and can lead to smelly

Due to chemical and hormonal changes, pregnancy can lead to a change in the smell of the urine. It becomes more pungent, and is strongest during the first trimester.

Some sexually transmitted diseases, especially chlamydia, can cause an odor in urine.

Certain medications can cause urine to smell, including a number of antibiotics. Some vitamins, including the B vitamins, concentrate in the urine and change both the color and smell.

Any unexplained change should trigger a visit to your physician. Most of the causes of smelly urine can and should be promptly treated.

For one weekend, Downey goes authentically Greek

Downey Doings

The Downey Greek Food Festival has shined for 35 years, a testament to Downey's thriving Greek community.

By Lorine Parks Society Columnist

"Spend a Day with the Greek Gods," the ad said.

The crowds that gathered on Saturday for the eagerly awaited Downey Greek Food Festival, enjoyed themselves, even without the presence of Helios, god of the

"In the part of Greece where I come from, near Olympia, I can't ever remember gloomy weather like this," said Harold Tseklenis, one of the guiding lights of Downey's Greek community. "It's always sunny there." But even without the blue skies, the magic of Greece lifted everyone's spirits.

Sounds of non-stop bouzouki music filled the air in the little Agora, a marketplace in the entry lined with vendors. Here you can buy raspberry honey, fresh pressed olive oil, and charms to ward off the evil eye. The god of good parking spaces was already smiling on me. I had lucked out, pulling in right across from the church as someone pulled out, a good beginning.

Delicious odors too: Greek coffee freshly brewing; the roast lamb with the fat sizzling under the gauzy smoke- what are the spices they rub it with?

Inside the festival area. a huge white tent covered an area where all were encouraged to "Get your Greek on" and join the line

Everyone in Downey comes to the Greek Food Festival, and lots of first-timers wander up from the Saturday Farmer's Market, held just a few blocks down Downey Avenue. You might see someone you haven't seen in years, or someone you had lunch with yesterday; the man you bought a good used car from, or the teller you bank with.

Jorge Lopez, a fellow Rotarian, of Harold's, said, "I'm Cuban but my wife's Greek." Everybody loves a Greek panigiri.

How do the parishioners of St. George's Greek Orthodox Church manage to organize such an authentic - authentikós in Greek - weekend fete, for 35 years in a

Everyone is a volunteer here, from the baklava bakers to the spit masters who prepare and roast the lamb, 20 of them at a time, turning on 20 spits. There is also the man who cleaves the lamb into serving portions. These with an ax, and this is as close as we will ever get to the feasting

Money raised from this festival provides things the church needs beyond the everyday running of the church. "Last year, it was a new roof," said Greg.

"The thing that makes ours different from other Greek festivals you will find in Southern California," said Gavril Gabriel, another of the three co-chairs of the event, "is that the others are part of some larger communities. But here we have a real Downeycentric Greek festival."

Harold took me behind the curtains to see how the food is dished up and served. Specialty of the house is the lamb platter, with rice and Greek salad; a la carte classics dishes are moussaka, a dish made from eggplant, meat, potatoes and béchamel sauce; tiropita, a light and flaky Greek pie filled with feta cheese,; spanakopita, a spinach and cheese pastry; and dolmades, ground lamb with rice rolled in grape leaves. Everything has been made by the ladies of St. George Philoptochos Society of Downey.

Harold introduced me to Nicole Vardabasis, Professor of Biology at UC San Bernardino. Downey is her home parish and she is the second generation of valued stewards.

I had found Harold sitting with Anton Photis and his wife Anastasia, their children and grandchildren. Evervone had Greek fries or a souvlaki platter. Harold and his wife Anna were among the first Orthodox Greek settlers in Downey in the 1950's and '60's.

Main lady among the beauties volunteering behind the scenes was the president of the parish and the chair of parishioner services, "the indefatigable worker Sasha Vithoulkas, who sees to the proper functioning of all non-sacramental aspects,' said Harold.

Arranging the boxes of food as fast as the orders came in were volunteers Christina Karapanos, Dora Kotsis, and Christina Sparangis. Christina is a middle school teacher with the DUSD, a second generation active

The occasion is billed as a food event, but this event is much, much more. The cultural side of Hellenic life was on display in the rooms in the mini-mall across from the church, where the sanctuary stood before the church with its mighty dome was built.

"Tomorrow we are featuring Cretan culture," said Georgia Covell, the third co-chair of the festival, as she took me on a private tour. Mainland Greece has several distinctive regions plus island groups in the Aegean.

And then there is Crete, where the Bronze-Age Minoan civilization flourished before Egypt's dynasties even began. A Cretan will not say, "I am a Greek from Crete. He will say, "I am

We stopped at a table with items for a Cretan wedding. A huge round bread, koulopoura gamou, its diameter easily two feet across, was decorated with symbolic bits of pastry expertly shaped like wheat and flowers, to bring luck. Two dagger-like knives, one for the bride and one for the groom were sheathed in silver and leather and laid beside it. Georgia unsheathed one, to show me. Docents can do that.

"This special bread would be baked by the bride's mother," said Georgia, "and this one just arrived yesterday. It was flown in from Greece. After the dances on Sunday, the cellophane wrap will be taken off, and we'll break the bread and share it." More than enough to feed a village I would areas of both Greek and Crete, accompanied by Greek cheeses, traditionally made from goats and sheep, as the rocky terrain is too steep for cows to navigate.

On the way out I stopped at the dessert table (they'll be good at breakfast too): baklava, doples and katafi. Pasta flora filled with raspberry or apricot jam; and karidopita. There were other goodies too, but I could come back tomorrow and get them.

The baking pans from the ladies of the parish were inexhaustible. I did note a difference between some of the pasta flora, the fillings and the ways the lattice work was twined. Different recipe from different islands, I supposed.

As I was leaving, the door to the church was open so I went in. It's a quiet and cool place to sit and contemplate, and it is light-filled. The church is the motivating spirit behind all that these parishioners do.

Rotary 'mourns' demotion of President Greg Welch

Downey Doings

Rotary Club of Downey pranks its outgoing president at a demotion dinner. Nathan Mahonev takes over as leader of the service club.

By Lorine Parks Society Columnist

If a Hawaiian shirt-clad man driving a hearse sounds like the start of a joke, that's because it is; and on this day, Greg Welch was the punchline.

"He only knew that we were coming in the hearse," said Barbara, Welch's wife. It wasn't until Welch got out at the Embassy Suites and saw all the others greeting him in black suits and somber ties that he realized he'd been the subject of an elaborate practical joke.

Welch was about to attend his demotion ceremony as departing President of the Rotary Club of Downey, and everyone was to dress in mourning for the passing of his presidency. Everyone but Welch, that is: he'd been told the dress was Hawaiian.

Together Barbara and Greg operate Risher Mortuary and Cremation Services in Downey and Montebello, so the dearly departed theme was a natural.

How could a secret be kept by 80 people? It helped that Greg and Barbara have been out of the country for several weeks, across the seas in Germany, attending a Rotary International Convention, to cap Greg's year as president of the service club.

Guests were checked in by club treasurer Barbara Lamberth, wearing a full widow's veil over a broadbrimmed hat, very becoming. Table decorations included a closed metal urn instead of a floral centerpiece, and décor consisted of sprays of white gladiolas.

Most Rotarians wore black suits, like Judy Reynolds's little black number and Jim Reynold's tux with black vest and satin lapels. The only other Hawaiian touch was Dr. Dan Fox's Aloha shirt from his vast collection. Retired Juvenile Court Judge Phil Mautino could have worn his robes, but he chose a gangsterlike black shirt, tie, and suit Jaimee Sul Baker wore a perky bow hat with a tiny face-skimming veil. She accompanied husband Doug, a two-time past district governor of Rotary and one of the eulogists, as the roasters were called.

Doug had a genuine scare with a lung embolism in Maui a few weeks ago, but rallied to come to the party.

Diane was in black and John in an even blacker embossed silk jacket.

Not only were Welch and his Board of Directors demoted, the evening also featured the installation of new president Nathan Mahoney, whose job as president-elect had been to organize this going-away party.

When Welch was saying his thankyou's, his advice to Nate was, "Get yourself another Nate. I couldn't have done it without you backing me so capably.'

Incoming president-elect is Maurice Casaus, general manager of the Embassy Suites, and vice president is Jesse Vargas, of Farmers & Merchants Bank in Downey.

"They say 20% of the members often do 80% of the work, said Welch. "But in our club, everyone has been working to get things done.

"My last thank you is to Jim Reynolds," said Welch. "Because he's the one who asked me, 'Have you ever considered joining Rotary?"

"Of course I had considered it," said Welch. "My wife had

The faces of saints and patrons fill the iconostasis, and the Four Gospel writers adorn the apse corners.

I remember when the church was being built, in 2001, and how it took a giant construction crane to hoist up the steel skeleton of the huge dome with its 30 windows, and place it on its square foundation. Another Greek first, squaring the circle.

The white "sugar-cube" church is built in the form of a traditional Greek cross, the arms and the head and foot all being equal length.

The church has no mortgage: the Metropolitan Anthony saw to that when he conducted the door-opening ceremony in 2002, and everything inside the church is paid for. As money is raised, decorations are added: the art work, the carpet, the beautiful blond

This mass, the most celebrated part in the Byzantine Rite, is attributed to Saint John Chrysostom, Archbishop of Constantinople in the 5th century... A prescient St John could have been mindful of climate change.

As I turned the page, the Liturgy went on, "for travelers by land, sea, and air, the sick, the suffering, the captives and their salvation, let us pray unto the Lord." As they say, the Greeks had a word for it.

There's no excuse for mistreating children at the border

BY THE NEW YORK TIMES EDITORIAL BOARD

From his promise of a "beautiful wall" to his false alarms about caravans of alien marauders at the gate, President Trump has exploited immigration as his marquee issue. He is right, there is a crisis: Not of undocumented immigrants or thousands seeking refuge, as the president would have it, but a crisis of American values, a crisis of America's premier tradition as a welcoming and humane haven. A crisis Mr. Trump has created, even as Congress has fueled it.

That is not to deny that comprehensive immigration reform is urgently needed, as is funding for the overstretched facilities where undocumented immigrants, and most horribly the children of undocumented immigrants, are held.

But, by his divisive, incoherent and barbaric policies, Mr. Trump has only made agreeing on an approach to immigration in the United States far more difficult. He has done so by systematically creating a false narrative of immigrants as job-stealing criminals, by insisting that there is a crisis of illegal immigration where there is none and, most maliciously, by dreaming up schemes to torment these people in the perverse notion that this would deter others from trying to reach the United States.

The most appalling of these has been the separation of children from their parents and detaining them in conditions no child anywhere should suffer, and certainly not children in the care of the American government. At a recent hearing before a federal appeals court in San Francisco, judges were stunned by the administration's arguments that children sleeping on concrete floors in frigid, overcrowded cells, without soap or toothbrushes, were being kept in "safe and sanitary" facilities, as required by law. "You're really going to stand up and tell us that being able to sleep isn't a question of safe and sanitary conditions?" asked one judge.

Mr. Trump's latest display of cruel bluster was the announcement, and then the delay, of nationwide raids to deport undocumented families. In fact, deporting immigrants who have exhausted their legal claims is not uncommon — President Obama, remember, was often referred to by immigration groups as "deporter in chief" — and the targets of these raids are not random. But Mr. Trump sought to use the operation to strut before his base and extract concessions from Democrats, and spread panic through immigrant communities. His announcement delayed action by Congress and made the operation that much more difficult by warning those targeted for deportation. Then he tweeted that he was delaying the raids for two weeks.

The United States urgently needs an immigration policy that combines border security, justice and humanity. President Trump has promoted policies that undermine all these goals, and Congress has failed to agree on a coherent vision. You can help turn that around. Here's how:

Call Congress, your mayor and local representatives. Contact your representative and tell them you want upcoming ICE raids to be called off and detention conditions improved. The legal defense nonprofit Raices has provided a template and an online form that you can use to email your congressional representatives. You can also reach out to your local representatives to ask that they initiate plans to help immigrant communities that are affected by the raids. USA.gov has provided links to finding your city, county and town officials Report and document raids and arrests. The National Immigration Law Center has suggested reporting raids to local hotlines, such as United We Dream's MigraWatch. Raices has said that over the next few days there will be a surge of posts on social media that say ICE has been spotted. The group has urged that people verify these posts before sharing or retweeting because false alarms could spread fear in immigrant communities.

Donate to humanitarian efforts. Many immigrants are not informed of their legal and civil rights as they pursue asylum or face deportation. Several nonprofits are providing free legal representation and other services for immigrants and the families of those detained. United We Dream, the American Civil Liberties Union and Mijente are coordinating advocacy and services at a national level. Local organizations providing legal aid include New Sanctuary Coalition in New York, Las Americas in El Paso and Raices in Texas, Americans for Immigrant Justice in Florida and Denver Immigrant Legal Services Fund in Colorado.

Pilar Weiss, project director of the National Bail Fund Network, says one of the most effective ways to reunite immigrants separated from their families is to assist with paying their bail, which can cost anywhere from $1,500 to $80,500. You can find and donate to a bail fund in your city through the National Bail Fund Network.

Inform yourself and your community. The A.C.L.U., who joined forces with Brooklyn Defender Services, has shared a "Know Your Rights" page for encounters with ICE. They have also provided a video to help understand your rights and what to do if ICE officials come to your home.

Hold political candidates accountable. While the presidential primaries are at least eight months away, you can prepare to cast your ballot for a more humane border policy by following what each candidate has shared about their plans for immigration reform.

Speak up. Protest marches and other civic actions to end detention camps and squalid conditions for children and families, are expected across the country in the coming weeks. Or you can also take part in Lights for Liberty, a nationwide vigil on July 12 at 9 p.m. local time. Locations for the vigil include:

El Paso: where migrants are being housed "partially outdoors" near a bridge with no running water for months at a time;

Homestead, Fla.: where a migrant children's detention facility has been charged with rampant abuse and neglect;

San Diego: near the point of entry border crossing from Tijuana, Mexico;

New York City: where deportation rates have increased by 150 percent between 2016 and 2018; percent between 2016 and 2018;

Washington, D.C. (in front of the Capitol building): to demand action from Congress.

Democrats used to embrace strong markets and strong government. What happened?

BY MICHAEL KAZIN

What kind of economy do Democrats believe in? Joe Biden calls for "stronger labor laws and a tax code that rewards [the] middle class." Bernie Sanders wants to raise taxes on the rich and guarantee every adult a job. Elizabeth Warren has a slew of plans that include giving employees seats on corporate boards and breaking up giant firms like Facebook and Amazon. Kamala Harris urges a big tax cut for ordinary families and "stricter penalties for companies that cheat their workers"

Recent polls show that the public is increasingly supportive of proposals like these. Yet no one who hopes to become the nominee has yet come up with a larger vision that would animate such worthy ideas. And without an inspiring way to tie them together, they may come across to voters like items on a mediocre takeout menu: tasty enough but forgettable.

So let one loyal, if anxious, Democrat offer a solution: "moral capitalism," a system that, in the words of Congressman Joe Kennedy III of Massachusetts, would be "judged not by how much it produces, but how broadly it empowers, backed by a government unafraid to set the conditions for fair and just markets."

It is a goal that, by different names, national Democratic leaders have articulated since the party first emerged almost two centuries ago. They understood that most voters liked the general idea of a market economy in which they would have a fair chance to rise, but also resented an economy that failed to live up to the rosy promises of its defenders in business and government.

The tradition began in the 1830s when Andrew Jackson vetoed a renewed charter for the Second Bank of the United States, declaring, "It is to be regretted that the rich and powerful too often bend the acts of government to their selfish purposes." Grover Cleveland renewed the offensive in his attack on the protective tariff in the 1880s, as did William Jennings Bryan in his crusade against the "money power" at the end of the 19th century, and Franklin D. Roosevelt in his assault on "economic royalists" in the 1930s.

For all these Democratic leaders, moral capitalism was an aspiration for a system that would balance protection for the rights of Americans to accumulate property and start businesses with an abiding concern for the welfare of men and women of little or modest means who increasingly worked for somebody else.

That vision did combine two distinct ways to critique the existing economic order and campaign for a better one. One tendency hurls a harsh critique at concentrated power, whether in high finance, manufacturing, the federal government or the perceived alliance between private wealth and private capital. It envisioned a society of small proprietors, or at least of a government that strictly regulates big businesses and compels them to redistribute part of their wealth.

The second kind of moral capitalism fixes on the oppression of Americans on the job, whether by poor working conditions, low wages, insecure employment or a ban on union organizing. Its defenders seek to unite wage earners and their sympathizers, and look more kindly on those employers, no matter how large, who respect the rights of their employees, and pay them well.

In theory, the two tendencies are not contradictory. Both Elizabeth Warren and Bernie Sanders criticize "monopolies" like Wal-Mart for dominating the marketplace as well as for paying poor wages to workers and resisting attempts by their workers to organize unions. But, historically, which of the two tendencies the Democrats espouse has defined the kind of coalition they strive to build.

The anti-monopoly theme dominated during the first century of the party's history, from Jackson's rise in the 1820s to the start of the Great Depression of the 1930s and helped make the Democrats a national party. During that period, the party either ignored the rights and needs of nonwhite people or actively sought to keep them in bondage or in manifestly unequal status. This period had a long run because it united such disparate social forces as white Southern planters and Irish Catholic immigrants around a shared animosity toward Northern industrialists, high finance and high tariffs.

In the 1930s, the pro-worker theme largely replaced the anti-monopoly one, and it was central to the Democrats' message through the 1960s. The main driver of the change was a labor movement that quintupled its membership during the Great Depression and the Second World War, and became the party's indispensable base from Franklin Roosevelt to Lyndon Johnson.

For a time, it seemed as if the pro-labor vision of a moral capitalism could become an American version of social democracy, although it was more effective as rhetoric than policy. In his 1944 State of the Union address, Roosevelt proposed a sweeping program that would have guaranteed every American the right to a job, a home and medical care. But a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats blocked legislation to secure any of his grand objectives.

From the 1970s until the start of the Great Recession, liberal

One less candidate

Dear Editor:

I wish to announce that I will not be a candidate for President during the 2020 election.

Those who follow my writings in The Downey Patriot know that I offered my services to be their standard-bearer to the Democrats (Letter to the Editor, 6/13/08) and to the Republicans (Letter to the Editor, 10/13/16). Both parties turned me down to the detriment of the country.

Obama's legacy was to leave the House, the Senate and most governorships in the hands of extreme nationalistic, ultraconservative Republicans who can barely hide their contempt for new immigrants even though they themselves have immigrant roots. Trump has shown little respect for the truth and the law and does not dare to engage in any activity that may not be to the liking of his Russian buddies.

My disillusion with the political process is due to the fact that we are using third world political tactics very successfully. I came to this country to avoid third world type of political processes but unfortunately we now use them in this country.

Sadly there is now no place to hide.

SB 268

Dear Editor:

California residents should be very concerned about Senate Bill 268 which started out as a CalWorks eligibility bill and was thoroughly gutted by Sen. Scott Wiener, Democrat of San Francisco, into a bill that reduces ballot measure transparency.

Existing law requires that, "If the proposed measure imposes a tax or raises the rate of a tax...the ballot [is] to include in the statement of the measure the amount of money to be raised annually and the rate and the duration of the tax to be levied." The newly proposed bill eliminates that provision.

If you are a concerned voter who wants to know how tax dollars are spent by our representatives in Sacramento, let Sen. Bob Archuleta (32nd District) know that you opposed SB 268. His phone number is (562) 406-1001.

Norma Gutierrez Downey politicians and activists tended to downplay the tropes of moral capitalism. They had some sound reasons for doing so. Roosevelt built a multiracial coalition that would have amazed and alarmed Andrew Jackson. Yet most party leaders still defined working people as a noble assemblage composed solely of white men and their family members.

The political earthquake of the black freedom and feminist movements demolished that bigoted assumption. The battle against racism and sexist laws and institutions quickly became central to what it meant to be a committed Democrat. In the current century, alarm about climate change and a commitment to L.G.B.T. rights have been added to the top of the party's agenda.

But in the past, creating an ideology of moral capitalism and a coalition behind it proved to be the most fruitful electoral strategy for Democrats to follow. Periods when they made persuasive arguments about the need to create and then preserve such a system were the only times when the party gained durable majorities: from the late 1820s until the mid-1850s, and again from the 1930s to the late 1960s.

Of course, major changes have since transformed the nation and its politics. Still, a majority Americans of all races, genders, and national origins continue to suffer from economic insecurity and have little control over the conditions of their work. A vision of moral capitalism would address that shared condition and suggest what changes could significantly improve it.

In his 1944 address, Roosevelt expressed a confidence that, in retrospect, was too sanguine for its time. "We have come to a clear realization of the fact that true individual freedom cannot exist without economic security and independence," he declared, "We have accepted ... a second Bill of Rights under which a new basis of security and prosperity can be established for all regardless of station, race, or creed."

Democrats today desperately need to articulate a similarly cleareyed, buoyant determination to build a decent society. Without moral capitalism or a powerful equivalent, they risk getting stuck in internecine fights while their arrogant adversary rekindles his vow to return America to a "greatness" he can neither define nor deliver.

Traffic laws

Dear Editor:

Regarding 'When a Traffic Ticket Costs $13,000" (May 30, 2019):

It's evident that Ms. Leah Jackson is a self-admitted habitual traffic violator, who does not take responsibility for her actions. She ultimately had her license suspended as a result of her poor decisions.

She indicates that she "spoke with lawmakers, started a new job, had not received a paycheck and could not pay the initial fine," yet had an opportunity to make arrangements for a payment plan on the arraignment date of the first citation. There was no mention of that court appearance, which she obviously ignored.

The initial violation was for obstructing traffic. This maneuver projects an inconsiderate, selfish, disrespectful driver who obviously doesn't care what others think. I wonder if the authors of this article, Emily Dindial (A.C.L.U.) and Ron Lampard (American Legislative Exchange Council) were stuck in traffic behind Jackson at the time, would they still have the same compassion? Probably not.

"A few months later" she was pulled over yet again (fails to mention the violation) and was told her driver's license was suspended. "In less than a month" she received two more citations.

This lack of integrity and poor judgement is a threat to public safety. Just how many violations has she committed when no one was looking and got away with? If she was to be involved in a car accident, what's the likelihood she would stay to help the potential injured or would she be another hit and run suspect? I'll go with the latter too.

The rules of the road are meant for traffic safety, good common sense and courteous driving habits. Traffic citations are issued to violators for primary collision factors that prevent collisions, thus educate the public on safe driving habits. Jackson should start by taking responsibility for her actions and stop blaming everyone else for her stupidity. Being a licensed driver is a privilege, not a right, which she lost. She doesn't deserve to be behind the wheel of a motor vehicle.

The only thing she should be is the poster child for public transportation.

Thinking About My Dad

Short Stories

By Sharon Benson Smith Contributor

This is one of those instances that I believe most of us have experienced; when you're young, your parents and grandparents try to tell you their history, and you scrunch your face and roll your eyes. You don't care because it doesn't interest you at the time. You just sluff it off.

However, later in life, as with me at this very moment in time, you wish you had taken it more seriously by listening to every single word, asking questions and committing it to memory.

So, I've decided to start at the beginning...that is, the beginning as I know it.

Dad was born in Texas in 1914 to a farmer who was born in Arkansas and to his mother who was also born in Texas. He was the fourth child of a total of seven.

The family migrated to Imperial, Calif., in 1916. His father passed away of typhoid fever in 1924, and he had to quit school in the eighth grade to help his older siblings support their mother and the younger children.

I don't know a lot about his growing up, except that it is said that, "It's the hard times that forge you, and in those hardships that individuals live their epic lives that inspire and illuminate."

I know without a doubt that those difficult days are responsible for putting him on the path to his lifelong impeccable work ethic. In other words, Dad was a chest-out, chin-up-kind-of-guy with a working man's confidence.

All I know is slivers of mom's and dad's courtship days in Imperial. I have a few photos of dad in his adult single years, and can readily conclude from them that he was very handsome, drove a neat car and, knowing him, he had a job and money to spend. He was probably one of those bad boys, rough around the edges, that women are always drawn to for some crazy reason.

He courted Mom for quite some time, and they eloped to Yuma after she graduated from Imperial High School.

Their first child, George, was born in Imperial. But soon after his birth, they moved to the Los Angeles area, and rented an apartment for about a year. Dad went to work driving a milk truck (Lucerne Dairy which was Safeway's private label). Awhile later, he drove a semi for Safeway Stores and was there until he retired in 1977, after about 40 years

He bought our Gleason Street home for $1,600 in 1937. Over the years, he and brother George built it from a shanty looking 1-bedroom to a modern 4-bedroom home. In the backyard, he built chicken coops and rabbit hutches, and we had an incinerator for disposing of our trash, until that was outlawed, then he dug a huge hole in the ground for trash disposal.

His hands were always busy doing something...he was the one that neighbors called on when the expertise of a handyman was needed. He also loaned money to the neighbors and relatives. He was the block warden during the war. Since he drove for Safeway, he had access to foods that weren't readily available to the general public. He shared these food items with relatives and neighbors alike. He even allowed neighbors and relatives to live in our home, sometimes indefinitely.

Giving freely to friends, neighbors and relatives, did not mean giving freely to his six. All of us, including Mom, thought this to be a contradiction. But it is well known that "much of our growth as a person will come in hardships and in challenges." And his six had both!

Dad, through his strong will, and Mom through her kindness and God-given grace, taught us how to deal with life's tough lessons, how to keep it together even when you fall apart, how to keep going amid life's ups and downs, and that "falling down is part of life, getting back up is living."

Dad could have coined the phrase, "There's no such thing as a free lunch." There was no such thing as an allowance or being paid for doing chores around the house, that was expected. If we wanted a nickel or two to buy something, we'd have to ask Dad for it. Many times, his response to us was, "If I had an extra nickel, I'd think I was a millionaire."

Needless to say, the six of us began working very early on to earn our spending money.

But once we began earning our own money, particularly after we married and had children of our own, we could borrow from him, under these conditions: "Borrow any amount you need, let him know when you would repay it, and it BETTER be paid per your commitment."

I applaud him for the stance he took on finances. He took care of all the household bills and paid timely. He had an A-1 credit rating.

Even though he was a good father, an excellent provider, and a hardworking man, his parenting methods wouldn't be accepted today. It's just that the way he raised us kids back then has become a real no-no today. This business of no corporal punishment or spanking has become "spare the rod and spoil the child." And, in my opinion, what a mess our world is in because of it. We had freedom, failure, success and responsibility, and we learned how to deal with it all.

Everything Dad bought came from Sears on Olympic and Soto. All of our household appliances were Kenmore; all the tools in the garage were Craftsman. Every screw, nut, and bolt by size, were kept in baby food jars. He nailed the lid to a piece of wood overhead then screwed the jar into the lid. I repeat that his strong and industrious hands were busy doing something all the time.

He was a perfectionist...when he went on a cleaning spree, look out! He got each of us involved in the project, and it was always a major project. He would actually hose down the kitchen floor, add soap and we all used our "elbow grease." He moved all the appliances so he could clean behind them.

Back then, I think he thought this is what made the white spots disappear from the black linoleum, or that he bought inferior flooring. It was years later that we told him the truth about us and our friends dancing the Bop and Twist hour after hour on that floor while he was off semi-truckin'. He just shook his head, as in days of old, and then laughed about it along with us.

This is also how he washed down our "mile long" driveway. With his rubber fishing boots up to his knees, he took that push broom and pushed all the dirt down the driveway...not just to where the sidewalk ends, but all the way down to the gutter at the end of Gleason and McDonnell. Each time his perfectionism was turned on us, we'd roll our eyes at him...but to his back when he wasn't looking, of course.

So, in recapping, you might say I'm grateful for the difficult times, as I now realize that in experiencing those times early on got me through the many tough spots that came later in life. And I have to conclude that the greatest gift my parents gave me and my siblings was their love and support, and the necessity to be independent and honest with a good work ethic.

"You don't know the depth of parental love until you are a parent yourself." Cherish them while you have them and cherish them when they're gone. I did and I do!

Now that I'm in the "winter of my years," I remember Dad as being a hardworking man who loved us and did his best to set us on a proper course in life. I never think of him without being grateful that he was my father. I'm so proud of my DNA.

Thanks, Dad, for all you gave to those moments that shaped us. I loved you then, I love you now, I always will, your "Miss Priss."

An Unexpected Romance

Short Stories

By Helen Hampton Contributor

Back in the early 1960s, I used to sing at the piano bar of fine restaurants. One was the Tally Ho in Lakewood.

Sheila played the organ there. My girlfriend Norma and I would go there to hear her play and I would sing.

Norma and I were both single mothers. One night, Sheila told Norma that she knew a nice man who was a widower. His name was Russ and he owned two Rexall drug stores.

Russ came to the restaurant every Saturday night and he sat at the end of the circular piano bar. Sheila thought that Russ would make a good husband for Norma -- if she could snag him.

That very next Saturday night, Norma was there at the piano bar, ready to meet Russ and turn her charms on him. I was there with her as a back-up, in case she didn't like him.

Sheila introduced the two of us to Russ, and he sat between us. He was a very handsome man, and quite classy. Norma was a very talkative woman and kept up such a conversation with Russ that I hardly had the chance to say a word to him. That was ok with me, because after all, he was supposed to be for Norma, not me.

During her break, Sheila asked Russ if he would like to buy two tickets to hear Kola Pandit, the famous pianist, at the Long Beach Convention Center. Likely she was thinking that this would be a nice affair for Russ to take Norma to. Russ said yes and paid for the two tickets and put them in his jacket pocket without saying anything to Norma about talking long enough to excuse herself to go to the ladies' room. While she was gone, Russ shocked me by asking if I wanted to go with him to the Kola Pandit concert.

I said yes. He asked for my phone number and said he would call me.

Sure enough, Russ called me the very next day. He took me to a romantic dinner at an elegant restaurant the night of the concert. We had a wonderful evening.

He asked if he could see me again. I said yes, for I was falling in love with him already, despite our 23-year age difference.

Ours was a whirlwind courtship. We were married six weeks later. Russ bought me a beautiful home in the Lakewood Country Club Estates.

Needless to say, my friend Norma was shocked by all of these developments. Soon after my marriage, she came to visit in mv new home.

She looked around at all the beautiful furnishings and said, "Just think, Helen, all of this could have been mine!"

Correction

A short story in the June 13, 2019 edition of the Downey Patriot titled "Our Humble Home" by Yolanda Adele described her experience living in a trailer at Camp Pendleton.

The photo that accompanied the story was provided by Camp Pendleton but showed a Quonset hut, not a trailer.

The Patriot regrets the error.

Randee Bolt-Chambers' classroom was a favorite among students at Griffiths Middle School.

She recently retired after a 35-year teaching career.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

ou could say that Randee Bolt-Chambers had the coolest classroom on the Griffiths Middle School campus, but you'd be wrong. Bolt-Chambers doesn't have a classroom; she has an island.

Bolt-Chambers, 68, has taught for 35 years, 25 of which with the Indians. She received her Bachelors of Science in Agricultural Biology from Cal Poly Pomona in 1976, and her teaching credential in agricultural sciences for kindergarten through 12th grade with a supplement in biology. She also received her Master's in 1984 in Agricultural Bolt-Chambers's career began in Los Angeles Unified School District, before she moved on to Christian Schools.

It was fate, however, that brought her to Downey Unified School District.

"I ended up at Griffiths after I had [my daughters] Cameron and Caitee," said Bolt-Chambers. "My husband Craig had lost his job with the phone company, so we made a deal: whoever gets a job first goes to work, and the other stays home."

in again; Bellflower's credentialing person was on vacation and would not be back in until the following week. Within 15 minutes of hanging up the phone with Bellflower, DUSD called.

Having not signed anything official with Bellflower yet, Bolt-Chambers was torn.

"I grew up with the ethics of you make a promise, you keep your promise," said Bolt-Chambers.

The principal at Griffiths at the time was eager to bring Bolt-Chambers on board, and was able to guarantee a year of employment as opposed to the semester Bellflower had promised. She even ended up with a higher salary than

The rest of the story, of course, is history, as Bolt-Chambers has enjoyed a long tenure with the Indians.

Classroom 71 has been a longtime favorite amongst sixth graders, majorly in part to the elaborate decoration and detail that adorns the walls.

Bolt-Chambers says that she wanted to create an environment where sixth graders could have fun and work together while learning.

"I had been learning

Randee Bolt-Chambers

more about cooperative and collaborative learning," said Bolt-Chambers. "They wanted kids working more together, and I was trying to think of ways to make it more interesting and fun for sixth graders, who fortunately still for the most part like to have fun, and they like to laugh. They're not 'middle school tainted' yet...they're not teenagers yet, but they're not little kids anymore. That's why they call them tweens; they're just neither one. They're a very special group, and I love them for that.'

Before the island was a space camp, however when the curriculum changed, the classroom was forced to evolve.

"When the curriculum changed, we went in to teaching geology; more geology than anything else," said Bolt-Chambers. "So I decided, 'okay, let's be an island."

Thus, the island affectionately known as LuaPela'Pela'A'heA'honeua took shape.

LuaPela'Pela'A'heA'honeua, you'll find fish and reptiles, a watchful monkey, a tiki, and an abundance of flamingos. Sounds of the rainforest fill the space. A weather man reports the forecast from a ham radio station. There's even a volcano that erupts from time to time.

"It's just built over the years," said Bolt-Chambers. "It was one small little germ of an idea, and then this gets added in, and this gets added... it gets extremely involved. It's not something a first-year teacher can just go in and copy...it's what works for you. Teaching the thematic way has worked

And of course, the island's lone inhabitants consist of Bolt-Chambers and her shipwrecked students, which she has split into several fourperson teams consisting of a captain, first mate, navigator, and communicator.

At the end of each year, Bolt-Chambers says that "the yacht comes and picks me up off the island."

Unfortunately for students, Bolt-Chambers has announced her retirement, signaling the end of her famed island.

"The final decision was my health," said Bolt-Chambers, who has been plagued by several health concerns over the last few years. "This last issue just put me over the edge."

"My kids...they need somebody that can be there now and be able to run after them, chase after them, and be able to be creative with the different projects and ideas and things to do."

Bolt-Chambers says that she "had such a great run as a

"I'm so thankful that I went the direction that I did, and that God has really blessed every moment that I had," said Bolt-Chambers. "I would say 99 percent of the students I had were fantastic young boys and young girls that turned into such lovely men and women. I'm so proud of so many of the things that you all have accomplished.'

'The Yacht" sailed Bolt-Chambers off the island for the last time on June 2.
