Downey votes to no longer fly Pride flags

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY – A three-year-old decision to fly the Pride flag each June came to an abrupt end on Tuesday, when Downey City Council voted to revert back to its previous flag policy, effective immediately.

City Council voted 3-2, with Mayor Mario Trujillo and Councilman Horacio Ortiz in opposition.

Downey flies The United States, California, city, and Prisoners of War/Missing in Action (POW/MIA) flags year-round. In June 2021, the city council voted to raise the Pride flag each Pride month.

Sometimes known as a "neutral flag policy," the city council's most recent action will bar the display of any flag other than the federal, state, local and POW/MIA on city facilities and flag poles.

The issue drew a mix of community members, who spoke both for and against the policy. Both LA County Representative Janice Hahn and Assemblywoman Blanca Pacheco – who as mayor pro tem at the time voted in favor of raising the Pride flag for Pride month – sent representatives to speak in opposition.

Mayor Pro Tem Hector Sosa, who requested the discussion, said that it was "by no means an attempt to silence or spite anyone."

"I don't think it's our role as elected officials to pick and choose which groups get to fly their flags. Our role is to simply govern, and govern for the residents of Downey," said Sosa. "It is my opinion that the only flags that should be displayed are the American flag, the state flag, the city flag, and the POW/MIA flags."

Ortiz and Trujillo described it as "a step back."

"The previous flag policy that we have, implemented and voted on in the past by a past administration, is one that represents a new front of acceptance for our city. Their actions paved a way for Downey's united sense of community," said Ortiz. "The reaction to change or alter this new progress feels as though we're making a bigger statement. As it stands, the flag policy has become a symbol for this change; to move back to a time without it feels as though we're taking two steps back instead of two steps forward."

Trujillo said the motion was "a direct attack on the Pride flag," specifically calling out the conservative Massachusetts-based group MassResistance.

"This motion came about because of a group called MassResistance...MassResistance has been deemed as a hate group by the Southern California Poverty Law Center. Their two goals are basically anti-immigration and anti-Pride flag, let's be clear," said Trujillo. "It's unfortunate that it was brought about through this hate group, who hides behind religious, you have religious people coming forward talking about the Bible, and these are the same families and parents that are prone to kicking out their child who comes out to them."

Responding to a previous comment made by Sosa, who had said that he had family and friends in the LGBTQ community who he "cared deeply for," Trujillo said "after tonight, they will not consider you an ally."

"I just want everyone to be clear, this is an eradication of the Pride Flag. If you're carving out an exception for the POW flag, this is a direct attack on the Pride flag," said Trujillo. "It is an unfortunate message that we will send to the community, that at least here in Downey, don't look to us as allies for your community, at least not the current composition of this council."

Councilwoman Claudia M. Frometa pushed back on the mayor's comments, calling them "untrue."

"This is not an attack on any one community," said Frometa. "We stand united under the flag of this country that flies, whether it's war or the Olympics; it unites all of us regardless of race, color, or religion."

In response to the decision, Supervisor Hahn released a statement, saying:

"I am disappointed in the Downey City Council's decision, and I worry about the message it sends to LGBTQ+ residents in Downey. Thankfully, the Pride Flag will still fly over Downey this June. My colleagues and I put in place a new policy last year to fly the Pride flag at all County facilities every June – including our eight county facilities in Downey." Opinion

Downey goes backwards by banning Pride flag

By Eric Pierce

Eric Pierce is editor of the Downey Patriot.

Tuesday's decision by the Downey City Council to rescind its policy allowing the Pride flag to fly each June is not just a step backward; it's a puzzling act of divisiveness at a time when Downey is still healing from several years of instability.

The move sends a message of exclusion and discrimination, and it's especially insulting that it comes during the mayoral term of Mario Trujillo, Downey's first openly gay mayor.

With its 3-2 vote (Trujillo and Councilman Horacio Ortiz voted no), Downey city facilities are restricted from flying the Pride flag, something Downey began doing only three years ago.

Tuesday's vote was the Downey City Council's conservative majority flexing its muscle. Instead of fostering inclusivity and celebrating diversity, they're choosing to sow seeds of division. Instead of promoting unity and acceptance, they're widening the gap between different groups within the city.

As a symbol of pride and progress, the Pride flag represents the struggles and achievements of the LGBTQ+ community. Banning it during the leadership of a mayor who represents a milestone in Downey's history — and two weeks before the start of Pride Month — is a direct affront to the values of equality and respect.

In a time when many cities and institutions are embracing diversity and actively working towards creating more inclusive environments, Downey's step backward is disappointing and disheartening.

It's my hope the City Council will reconsider their decision and either carve out an exception for the Pride flag or rescind their neutral flag policy entirely.

Is this a tipping point for pageant culture?

By Jill Flipovic

Jill Filipovic is a journalist based in New York and author of the book "OK Boomer, Let's Talk: How My Generation Got Left Behind."

t's been a manicured-brow-raising week in the world of beauty pageants, as Miss USA and Miss Teen USA have both resigned from their roles, fueling speculation about both pageants' management and treatment of their talent.

Both pageant winners — Miss USA 2023 Noelia Voigt and Miss Teen USA 2023 UmaSofia Srivastava — posted explanations for their departures, Voigt citing her mental health and Srivastava citing misalignment of the organization's values with her own. And both are bound by strict non-disclosure agreements, radically limiting what they can say.

The Miss Teen USA and Miss USA pageants fall under the broader umbrella of the Miss Universe Organization, a global network of pageants. In a statement following Voigt's announcement to step down, the Miss USA pageant said, "We respect and support Noelia's decision to step down from her duties," noting that, "The well-being of our titleholders is a top priority, and we understand her need to prioritize herself at this time." Miss Teen USA made a similar statement after Srivastava's resignation.

There seems to be much intrigue in pageant world over these resignations. And there is a deeper question that needs to be raised: In 2024, why in the world are we still doing beauty pageants?

I know, I know: "It is not a beauty pageant, it is a scholarship program." According to Miss USA, the pageant is about celebrating "beauty, intelligence, and empowerment." It just so happens that all of the contestants fit into a very narrow definition of female attractiveness, intelligence doesn't usually seem to count

The opportunity to be judged as the most very sidewise at parents who enter their young daughters beautiful gal on stage now extends to a wider variety of in beauty pageants, dressing them up like little adults women — a complicated kind of progress indeed. And and training them to perform a cartoonish and often participants remain quite constrained in what they can sexualized kind of femininity). do or say once they've been crowned by the organization, which is precisely why we know so little about these latest It's not hard to understand the appeal of beauty resignations. pageants for some young women. Female beauty remains rewarded and celebrated; many girls grow up hearing Despite the nondisclosure agreements, whispers and observing just how important it is to be perceived are getting out about why Miss USA in particular may have stepped down, including mistreatment by pageant as physically attractive. Most women, even the most higher-ups. (The Miss Universe organization has not feminist among us, engage with a system that rewards youth and beauty in women in a way it simply doesn't returned CNN's request for comment.) Fans noticed with men: We wear makeup, pick out flattering (by which that the first letter in the first 11 sentences of Voigt's we mean slimming) clothing and dye out the grays in our resignation statement spell out "I am silenced." hair. Girls and women who have been genetically blessed Every woman deserves to be treated with dignity and with looks that fit a pageant ideal may understandably respect in her workplace, even if that work involved decide to capitalize on that. After all, they didn't build evening gowns and bathing suit competitions. But the this system. kind of treatment it's suggested she endured simply isn't all that surprising given the ethos of pageants And some admirable and successful women did get their start in pageants. Some remain in the realm of the themselves. When women and girls are treated like objects to judge and ogle, smiling and (apart from a brief professionally beautiful, while some have moved into careers more dependent on deeper skills. The list includes interview) largely silent, is it really so surprising that Diane Sawyer, Lynda Carter, Halle Berry, Sarah Palin and those who run pageants may not treat young women Vanessa Williams — although Williams, the first Black like autonomous human beings worthy of respect and Miss America, was forced to resign after nude photos were freedom?

for anything in the judging process and "empowerment" is a term that has been rendered fully meaningless. What power, exactly, are pageant contestants "empowered" with?

It is arguably progress that beauty pageants now have to pretend that they aren't just beauty pageants, but something related to talent, character and empowerment. The problem, though, is that a world in which women were fully empowered, treated with the same dignity as men, and judged according to their characters and not their sexual attractiveness to men is a world in which beauty pageants would not exist.

No matter how you spin it or how much language about "empowerment" you slap on a website, pageants are pageants: venues to judge women dressed up like Barbies and declare one the most beautiful of them all.

That an interview portion determines if a woman can string a few words together doesn't actually solve the fundamental flaw of pageants, especially since interviews are used to judge "personality," which seems to be shorthand for how sweet and feminine a contestant is. These competitions, no matter how much you massage the language around them, are condescending and sexist.

That isn't to insult the many women and girls who

Realities of Downey

Dear Editor:

Last week while waiting for a bus on Firestone Boulevard, a man had a personal cart filled with bags of recyclables rolling down the street. At my bus stop, a bench had an empty roasted chicken bag with a tray of fried potatoes and a few other sides.

He stopped, sat down and began to eat some of the tray's goods. The bag had a 12:30 pm timestamp so it had likely been sitting unattended for at least two hours.

I found it heart-wrenching to watch the man eat another's leftovers and then continue on his quest for more goods to turn in for cash. My sweet lord, this is Downey, California folks.

I hope Miss USA and Miss Teen USA are able to speak out about whatever it is they experienced. But I also hope this is the beginning of the end of those titles and these sexist, silly contests.

Library isn't for seniors

Dear Editor:

I often go to the library to use the desktop computer lab. I was shocked when I found it empty and that the computers were moved to the open area bar stools.

Trying out the bar stools I found within 10 minutes my back started hurting. I complained to the man in charge of the computers and he told me that the library was youth-oriented and I should go to the Barbara J. Riley Community & Senior Center.

I found this outrageous and it prompted me to write this complaint. I hope the people in charge of the library will consider the needs of Downey's senior citizens and put the computers back where they were.

Downey urged to support Gaza ceasefire

• The City Council is under increasing pressure to join other cities in calling for a ceasefire.

DOWNEY - A group of pro-Palestinian demonstrators marched to City Hall on Tuesday, urging the city council to join other L.A. County cities in supporting a permanent ceasefire in Gaza.

Armed with megaphones, signs, and flags, the protestor group gathered on Firestone Blvd., just outside of Porto's Bakery for about an hour before attending the city council meeting.

According to demonstrator Janel Magee, the protest was a way to get the attention of higher representatives, who she says "haven't been listening to us" regarding the desire to end the current conflict.

Magee added that the group was also calling for cities to divest any money that may be going to Israeli companies.

"We essentially, basically just want representation from our local officials that are our first line of representation in the government, and divestment and sanctions on Israel to further them from being able to kill more Palestinian people," said Magee.

Jose Barillas said "it is a city issue because there's Palestinians who live in this city."

"Locals and Palestinian people that lived here are affected, they have family in Gaza, they have family in Palestine, they are affected by this genocide," said Barillas.

Cudahy, Bell Gardens, La Puente and El Monte have trap compartments in them to adopted resolutions in support conceal and transport drugs of a ceasefire. Still, Barillas said such as cocaine and heroin. "it's not anything that's going to

MESSAGE FROM THE DOWNEY ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS Dear Editor.

There has been a lot of misinformation in the news lately about pending changes coming to the real estate industry and what they mean for homebuyers and sellers. As a dedicated REALTOR® in the Greater Downey area, I'd like to clarify any confusion your readers may have.

Because of a recent settlement by real estate brokerages and the National Association of REALTORS, two things are changing. First, properties listed on the multiple listing service (MLS) will no longer include an offer of compensation to buyer's agents. Second, homebuyers who want to work with an agent will need to sign a written agreement with that agent before touring a home. That means before homebuyers start their home search, they'll need to discuss and agree with their agent what the agent will do on their behalf, and they'll need to decide how much and how to pay that agent.

Historically, nearly nine in 10 homebuyers have opted to work with a real estate agent or broker in what is possibly the most important purchase of their lives. That's because we help buyers and sellers navigate a maze of forms and complex paperwork; coordinate with lenders, inspectors, other agents, escrow companies, title companies, appraisers and other professionals; and ensure that our clients' interests are represented in pricing, negotiation and closing.

The pending changes will not affect what makes REALTORS® valuable - a commitment to work in their clients' best interests. REALTORS® throughout the state will continue to serve their clients every day and help make homeownership a reality for all Californians who aspire to it.

Sincerely, Jose E Perez, 2024 President Greater Downey Association of REALTORS

UC Irvine faculty arrested at encampment

 Protestors demanding UC Irvine divest from Israel clashed with police Wednesday.

By City News Service

IRVINE – UC Irvine students and staff were informed classes would meet remotely Thursday and "unless specifically noted, all employees should work remotely" following what Chancellor Howard Gillman called "a sad day for our university."

Police took multiple people into custody, including at least two who identified themselves UCI faculty members, as and cleared a Gaza Solidarity Encampment at the university Wednesday evening, more than two weeks after it was established.

Protesters surrounded the about 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, prompting campus police to request aid from Orange County sheriff's deputies and Irvine police, among other neighboring agencies, said Tom Vasich, a university spokesman.

Protesters were led in chants of "We won't move" and "shame" and some wore scarves or face masks and had goggles and hard hats, according to The Orange County Register.

The university sent a message to students at 5:57 p.m. declaring, Anyone currently in buildings in the vicinity of the protest are advised to exit buildings & leave area at this time. ... If able, please leave immediately & continue to avoid the protest area until further notice."

A large contingent of police and sheriff's deputies descended on the campus and began arresting protesters and dismantling the encampment by early evening after declaring an unlawful assembly and ordering the crowd to disperse.

Some shoving between police and protesters was spotted as officers moved further into the encampment area and eventually started to remove some protesters. At least two people who were taken into custody identified themselves as UCI faculty members, The Register reported.

Approximately 300 protesters remained at 7 p.m. By 8 p.m. protesters has been funneled by advancing police to Aldrich Park, a large green lawn area nearby. An announcement was made about 8:10 to disperse within five minutes. Many in the remaining crowd left at that

By 8:33 p.m., police had cleared Aldrich Park and only a few lingering people remained on campus. Police remained in a line formation in various spots and asked anyone coming by to leave, The Register reported.

The protest had been largely peaceful as the students have been negotiating with university officials.

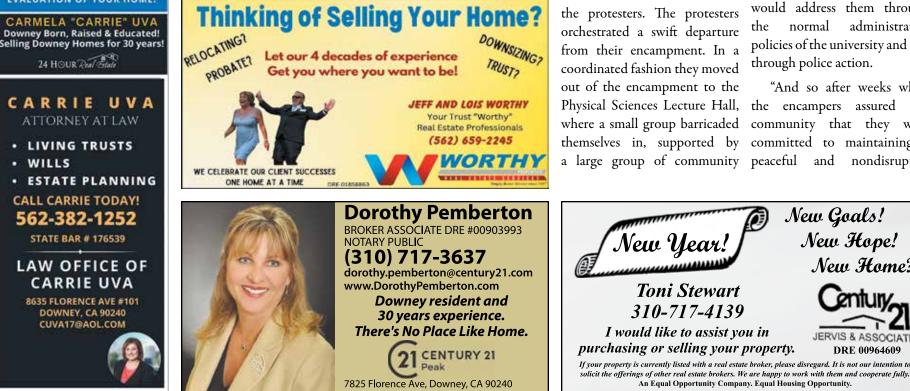

The situation intensified over the past week, particularly after some protesting students received suspension notices from the university, including some who were involved in negotiations with UCI administrators.

In a statement posted on social media Wednesday, the UCI Divest protest group said it is "reclaiming the university for Palestine and for the people."

"Exactly one week ago to the day, UC Irvine issued temporary suspensions to many students in the encampment, including the majority of the student negotiation team," according to the group.

"Students barred from returning to their own campus residence halls, cannot come to campus at the peak of midterms and finals, and are already facing the emotional toll of seeing the university militarize itself before it even accepts ending the genocide and killings of the students' family members and friends."

Numerous tents were erected around the physical sciences building, and banners were hung from the building's balcony listing the groups demands for divestment. Some small
